EXPLANATION OF THE CHART.

THE "MINIATURE CHART OF AMERICAN HISTORY," found on the following two pages, is a mere outline of a larger chart measuring about five feet by six and a half. The design of the small chart is, principally, to furnish, by its convenience for reference, additional aid to those pupils who may be studying the outlines of the history from the larger one; for as the small chart wants the coloring of the other, and many of its important features, it will be found, separately, of comparatively little importance. A brief explanation of the "Miniature Chart," however, may, in this place, be useful.

The two divisions of the chart should be considered as brought together, so as to present the whole united on one sheet. The chart is arranged in the "downward course of time," from top to bottom, embracing a period of nearly 350 years, extending from the discovery of America by the Cabots, in 1497, to the year 1845. The dark shading, extending entirely across the chart at the top, represents all North America as occupied by the Indian tribes at the time of the discovery;—and, following the chart downwards, the gradually increasing light portions represent the gradual increase of European settlements. The darkest shading represents the country as unexplored by the whites;—the lighter shading, as having been explored, but not settled. Thus, Vermont was the last settled of the New England States; Upper Canada was settled at a much later period, and some of the western United States still later.

On the right is a column of English History; then a column of dates, corresponding with which the events are arranged on the chart from top to bottom; then follows the history of the present British Provinces north of the United States; then the histories of the several United States as their names are given at the bottom of the chart: after the territories, at the left, and adjoining Oregon, appear Texas, Mexico, and Central America. The large chart, of which this is a very imperfect outline, gives the prominent features, in the histories of all the settled portions of North America.

The utility of well-arranged charts is very much the same as that of historical maps. Although maps give the localities of events, they cannot give their sequences, or order of succession; but as the eye glances over the chart, and follows it downwards in the stream of time, there is presented to the mind, instead of one local, fixed picture, a moving panorama of events. In the map, the associations are based upon the proximity of locality; in the chart, upon the order of succession; and the two combined, in connection with the written history, give the most favorable associations possible for the attainment and retention of historical knowledge. One prominent advantage of the chart, however, separately considered, is, that it presents at one view a Comparative History of which books alone can give only a very inadequate idea, and that only to a well disciplined memory of arbitrary associations. A view of the chart makes upon the mind as lasting an impression of the outlines of a country's history, as does the map of its topography, when the plans of both are equally understood; and the prominent features in a country's history may be recalled to the mind, after a study of the chart, with the same facility that the geographical outlines may be recalled, after a study of the map; for the principles upon which the mind acquires the knowledge, through the medium of the eye, are in both cases the same. The chart, the map, and the written history, should be used together; the chart, presenting at one view a comparative chronology of the events, being considered the framework of the structure; and the map, giving the localities, the basis upon which it stands.

TO THE

SCHOOL EDITION OF THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES.

In offering the following History to the public, a few remarks appear necessary, in order to point out those particulars in which it is believed to possess peculiar merits Of the adaptation of the style to the object intended, and of the moral and general influence of the work, the public alone must be the judges. Those who would compare its historical accuracy with other histories on the same subject, are referred to a Critical Review of American Histories, by the same author, first published in the Biblical Repository for July, 1845; which may give some idea of the labor and care bestowed upon the compilation of the following work. We would, however, here inform the reader that a uniformity in the system of dates has been preserved, the dates being given throughout in New Style. See this important subject examined in the before mentioned Review.

It will be observed that the marginal dates and references in the following work are numerous; carrying along a minute chronology with the history. This plan avoids the necessity of encumbering the text with dates, and at the same time furnishes, to the inquiring reader, a history far more minute and circumstantial than could otherwise be embraced in a volume much larger than the present.

The more prominent features in the PLAN of the work, in which it differs from any other History, are, the Arrangement of the Questions in the margin, and the introduction of numerous Maps, Charts, and Geographical Notes.

The QUESTIONS are arranged in the margin, each opposite that portion of the text to which it refers, and numbered to correspond with similar divisions of the text. In point of convenience and utility, it is believed that this plan of arrangement is far more desirable than that hitherto adopted, of placing the questions at the bottoms of the pages, or at the end of the volume. Moreover, the questions are designedly so constructed as to require from the pupil a knowledge of the whole text.—The supposed utility of the CHART, (pages 10 and 11,) may be learned from the description of the same on page 9.

The progressive series of the three LARGE MAPS, on pages 46, 284, and 347, show the state of the country at different periods. The First represents the country as occupied by the Indian Tribes, fifty years after the settlement of Jamestown, when only a few bright spots of civilization relieved the darkness of the picture. The Second, as it was at the close of the Revolution, when almost the entire region west of the Alleghanies was a wilderness,—showing how slowly settlements had advanced during the long period that the colonies were under the dominion of Great Britain. The Third represents the country as it now is, and as it has become under the influence of republican institutions. In place of the recent wilderness, we observe a confederacy of many states, each with its numerous cities, towns, and villages, denoting the existence of a great and happy people.

The GEOGRAPHICAL AND HISTORICAL NOTES, and SMALL MAPS, at the bottoms of the pages, give the localities of all important places mentioned, and furnish that kind of geographical information respecting them, without which the history can be read with little interest or profit. Maps of important sections of the Union, the vicinities of our large towns, plans of battle grounds and sieges, &c., are here given on the same pages with the events referring to them, where they necessarily catch the eye of the pupil, so that they can hardly fail to arrest his attention, and increase the interest that he feels in the history.

On the whole, it is believed that the plan here adopted, considered apart from whatever other merits the work may possess, affords unusual facilities for the acquisition of historical knowledge.

What are the Divisions of Chapter I.?

1. What is said of the Discovery of America by Columbus?

I. DISCOVERY OF AMERICA BY COLUMBUS.—1. [1]The discovery[a] of America by Christopher Columbus, may be regarded as the most important event that has ever resulted from individual genius and enterprise. [2]Although other claims to the honor of discovering the Western hemisphere have been advanced, and with some appearance of probability, yet no clear historic evidence exists in their favor. [3]It has been asserted that an Iceland* bark, in the early part of the eleventh century, having been driven southwest from Greenland†

3. Of the Icelandic claim?

*GEOGRAPHICAL NOTES.—1. Iceland is an island in the Northern Ocean, remarkable for its boiling springs (the Geysers), and its flaming volcano, Mount Hecla. It was discovered by a Norwegian pirate, in the year 861, and was soon after settled by the Norwegians; but it is supposed that the English and the Irish had previously made settlements there, which were abandoned before the time of the Norwegian discovery.

† Greenland is an extensive tract of barren country, in the northern frozen regions; separated from the western continent by Baffin's Bay and Davis's Strait. It was discovered by the Norwegians thirty years after the discovery of Iceland, and a thriving colony was planted there; but from 1406 until after the discovery by Columbus all correspondence with Greenland was cut off, and all knowledge of the country seemed to be buried in oblivion.

1492. by adverse winds, touched[a] upon the coast of Labrador;*—that subsequent voyages were made; and that colonies were established in Nova Scotia,† or in Newfoundland.‡

1. What is said of the superior merit of the claims of Columbus?

2. [1]But even if it be admitted that such a discovery was made, it does not in the least detract from the honor so universally ascribed to Columbus. The Icelandic discovery, if real, resulted from chance,—was not even known to Europe,—was thought of little importance,—and was soon forgotten; and the curtain of darkness again fell between the Old world and the New. The discovery by Columbus, on the contrary, was the result of a theory matured by long reflection and experience; opposed to the learning and the bigotry of the age; and brought to a successful demonstration, after years of toil against opposing difficulties and discouragements.

2. What was long the prevalent error respecting the discovery by Columbus?

3. What was the extent of his discoveries?

3. [2]The nature of the great discovery, however, was long unknown; and it remained for subsequent adventurers to dispel the prevalent error, that the voyage of Columbus had only opened a new route to the wealthy, but then scarcely known regions of Eastern Asia. [3]During several years,[b] the discoveries of Columbus were confined to the islands of the West Indies;§ and it was not until August,[c] 1498, six years after his first voyage, that he discovered the main land, near the mouth of the Orinoco;‖ and he was then ignorant that it was any thing more than an island.

† Nova Scotia is a large peninsula, southeast from New Brunswick, separated from it by the Bay of Fundy, and connected with it by a narrow isthmus only nine miles across.

‡ Newfoundland is a hilly and mountainous island on the east side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence; nearly a thousand miles in circumference, deriving all its importance from its extensive fisheries.

§ The West Indies consist of a large number of islands between North and South America, the most important of which are Cuba, St. Domingo, Jamaica, and Porto Rico.

‖ The Orinoco is a river on the northeast coast of South America.

¶ Cuba, one of the richest islands in the world, is the largest of the West Indies, being 760 miles in length from southeast to northwest, and about 50 miles in breadth. Its northern coast is 150 miles south from Florida.

 St. Domingo, or Hayti, formerly called Hispaniola, is a large island, lying between Cuba and Porto Rico, and about equally distant from each.

colonized, and subjected to Spanish authority. [1]In 1506 the eastern coast of Yucatan* was discovered; and in 1510 the first colony on the continent was planted on the Isthmus of Darien.† [2]Soon after, Vasco Nunez de Balboa, governor of the colony, crossed the Isthmus, and from a mountain on the other side of the Continent discovered[a] an Ocean, which being seen in a southerly direction, at first received the name of the South Sea. 1506.

II. JUAN PONCE DE LEON IN FLORIDA.—1. [3]In 1512 Juan Ponce de Leon, an aged veteran, and former governor of Porto Rico, fitted out three ships, at his own expense, for a voyage of discovery. [4]A tradition prevailed among the natives of Porto Rico, that in a neighboring island of the Bahamas‡ was a fountain which possessed the remarkable properties of restoring the youth, and of perpetuating the life of any one who should bathe in its stream, and drink of its waters. [5]Nor was this fabulous tale credited by the uninstructed natives only. It was generally believed in Spain, and even by men distinguished for virtue and intelligence.

[1]A few years later, having been appointed governor of the country which he had discovered, he made a second voyage to its shores, with the design of selecting a site for a colony; but, in a contest with the natives, many of his followers were killed, and Ponce de Leon himself was mortally wounded.

IV. CONQUEST OF MEXICO.*—1. [1]In 1517 Francisco Fernandez de Cordova, sailing from Cuba[a] with three small vessels, explored[b] the northern coast of Yucatan. [2]As the Spaniards approached the shore, they were surprised to find, instead of naked savages, a people decently clad in cotton garments; and, on landing, their wonder was increased by beholding several large edifices built of stone. [3]The natives were much more bold and warlike than those of the islands and the more southern coasts, and every where received the Spaniards with the most determined opposition.

4. [1]Proceeding thence farther westward, he landed[a] at San Juan de Ulloa*, where he was hospitably received, and where two officers of a monarch who was called Montezuma, came to inquire what his intentions were in visiting that coast, and to offer him what assistance he might need in order to continue his voyage. [2]Cortez respectfully assured them that he came with the most friendly sentiments, but that he was intrusted with affairs of such moment by the king, his sovereign, that he could impart them to no one but to the emperor Montezuma himself, and therefore requested them to conduct him into the presence of their master.

2. What did Cortez assure them, and what request did he make?

3. What did the Mexican ambassadors then do?

5. [3]The ambassadors of the Mexican monarch, knowing how disagreeable such a request would be, endeavored to dissuade Cortez from his intention; at the same time making him some valuable presents, which only increased his avidity. Messengers were dispatched to Montezuma, giving him an account of every thing that had occurred since the arrival of the Spaniards. [4]Presents of great value and magnificence were returned by him, and repeated requests were made, and finally commands given, that the Spaniards should leave the country; but all to no purpose.

[6]On his way thither, several nations, that were tributary to Montezuma, gladly threw off their allegiance and joined the Spaniards. Montezuma himself, alarmed and irresolute continued to send messengers to Cortez, and, as his hopes or his fears alternately prevailed, on one day gave him permission to advance, and, on the next, commanded him to depart.

[1]Montezuma received[a] the Spaniards with great pomp and magnificence, admitted them within the city, assigned them a spacious and elegant edifice for their accommodation, supplied all their wants, and bestowed upon all, privates as well as officers, presents of great value. 1519.

He was in the middle of a vast empire,—shut up in the centre of a hostile city,—and surrounded by multitudes sufficient to overwhelm him upon the least intimation of the will of their sovereign. [3]In this emergency, the wily Spaniard, with extraordinary daring, formed and executed[b] the plan of seizing the person of the Mexican monarch, and detained him as a hostage for the good conduct of his people. He next induced him, overawed and broken in spirit, to acknowledge himself a vassal of the Spanish crown, and to subject his dominions to the payment of an annual tribute.

It is 170 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, and 200 from the Pacific Ocean, and is situated near the western bank of Lake Tezcuco, in the delightful Vale of Mexico, or, as it was formerly called, the Plain of Tenochtitlan, which is 230 miles in circumference, and elevated 7069 feet above the level of the ocean. The plain contains three lakes besides Tezcuco, and is surrounded by hills of moderate elevation, except on the south, where are two lofty volcanic mountains. Two of the lakes are above the level of the city, whose streets have been frequently inundated by them; but in 1689, a deep channel, 12 miles long, cut through the hills on the north, was completed, by which the superfluous waters are conveyed into the river Tula, and thence to the Panuco.

1. How did he treat the Mexicans, and what followed?

10. [1]Relying too much on his increased strength, he soon laid aside the mask of moderation which had hitherto concealed his designs, and treated the Mexicans like conquered subjects. They, finally convinced that they had nothing to hope but from the utter extermination of their invaders, resumed their attacks upon the Spanish quarters with additional fury. [2]In a sally which Cortez made, twelve of his soldiers were killed, and the Mexicans learned that their enemies were not invincible.

2. What loss did the Spaniards suffer?

3. What is said of the interposition of Montezuma, and what occurred on his appearance?

11. [3]Cortez, now fully sensible of his danger, tried what effect the interposition of Montezuma would have upon his irritated subjects. At sight of their king, whom they almost worshipped as a god, the weapons of the Mexicans dropped from their hands, and every head was bowed with reverence; but when, in obedience to the command of Cortez, the unhappy monarch attempted to mitigate their rage and to persuade them to lay down their arms, murmurs, threats, and reproaches ran through their ranks;—their rage broke forth with ungovernable fury, and, regardless of their monarch, they again poured in upon the Spaniards flights of arrows and volleys of stones. Two arrows wounded Montezuma before he could be removed, and a blow from a stone brought him to the ground.

4. What then did the Mexicans do?

12. [4]The Mexicans, on seeing their king fall by their own hands, were instantly struck with remorse, and fled with horror, as if the vengeance of heaven were pursuing them for the crime which they had committed.

5. What is said of Montezuma's death?

[5]Montezuma himself, scorning to survive this last humiliation, rejected with disdain the kind attentions of the Spaniards, and refusing to take any nourishment, soon terminated his wretched days.

6. Give an account of the retreat of the Spaniards from Mexico.

13. [6]Cortez, now despairing of an accommodation with the Mexicans, after several desperate encounters with them, began a retreat from the capital;—but innumerable hosts hemmed him in on every side, and his march was almost a continual battle. On the sixth day of the retreat, the almost exhausted Spaniards, now reduced to a mere handful of men, encountered,[a] in a spacious valley, the whole Mexican force;—a countless multitude, extending as far as the eye could reach. [1]As no alternative remained but to conquer or die, Cortez, without giving his soldiers time for reflection, immediately led them to the charge. The Mexicans received them with unusual fortitude, yet their most numerous battalions gave way before Spanish discipline and Spanish arms. 1520.

a. July 17.

1. Describe the great battle with the Mexicans?

14. The very multitude of their enemies, however, pressing upon them from every side, seemed sufficient to overwhelm the Spaniards, who, seeing no end of their toil, nor any hope of victory, were on the point of yielding to despair. At this moment Cortez, observing the great Mexican standard advancing, and recollecting to have heard that on its fate depended the event of every battle, assembled a few of his bravest officers, and, at their head, cut his way through the opposing ranks, struck down the Mexican general, and secured the standard. The moment their general fell and the standard disappeared, the Mexicans, panic struck, threw away their weapons, and fled with precipitation to the retreat of the Spaniards.

15. [2]Notwithstanding the sad reverses which he had experienced, Cortez still looked forward with confidence to the conquest of the whole Mexican empire, and, after receiving supplies and reenforcements, in December, 1520, he again departed for the interior, with a force of five hundred Spaniards and ten thousand friendly natives. After various successes and reverses, and a siege of the capital which lasted seventy-five days,—the king Guatemozin having fallen into his hands,—in August, 1521, the city yielded;[b] the fate of the empire was decided; and Mexico became a province of Spain. 1521.

[3]In October they arrived[b] at Mauville,† a fortified Indian town near the junction of the Alabama‡ and the Tombeckbee. Here was fought[b] one of the most bloody battles known in Indian warfare. [5]The situation of the Spaniards after the battle was truly deplorable, for nearly all were wounded, and, with their baggage, they had lost their supplies of food and medicine; but, fortunately for them, the Indian power had been so completely broken that their enemies were unable to offer them any farther molestation.

In the burning of the village the Spaniards lost many of their horses, most of their swine, and the few remaining clothes which they had saved from the fires of Mauville. It is navigable for steam-boats to the Falls of St. Anthony, more than 2000 miles from its mouth by the river's course. Fearing to trust themselves far from land in their frail barks, they continued along the coast, and on the twentieth of September, 1543, the remnant of the party, half naked and famishing with hunger, arrived safely at a Spanish settlement near the mouth of the river Panuco[c] in Mexico.

I. JOHN AND SEBASTIAN CABOT.—1. [3]Shortly after the return of Columbus from his first voyage, John Cabot, a Venetian by birth, but then residing in England, believing that new lands might be discovered in the northwest, applied to Henry VII. for a commission of discovery. Under this commission[e] Cabot, taking with him his son Sebastian, then a young man, sailed from the port of Bristol* in the spring of 1497.

e. Dated March 5th, (O. S.) 1496.

2. On the 3d of July following he discovered land, which he called Prima Vista, or first seen, and which until recently was supposed to be the island of Newfoundland,[f] but which is now believed to have been the coast of Labrador.[f] After sailing south a short distance, and probably discovering the coast of Newfoundland, anxious to announce his success, Cabot returned to England without making any farther discovery.

4. Of the second voyage by Sebastian Cabot?

3. [4]In 1498 Sebastian Cabot, with a company of three hundred men, made a second voyage, with the hope of finding a northwest passage to India. He explored the continent from Labrador to Virginia, and perhaps to the coast of Florida;[g] when want of provisions compelled him to return to England.

g. Note, p. 15.

* Bristol, a commercial city of England, next in importance to London and Liverpool, is on the river Avon, four miles distant from its entrance into the river Severn, where commences the Bristol Channel. It is 115 miles west from London and 140 south from Liverpool.

4. [1]He made several subsequent voyages to the American coast, and, in 1517, entered one of the straits which leads into Hudson's Bay. In 1526, having entered the service of Spain, he explored the River La Plata, and part of the coast of South America. Returning to England during the reign of Edward VI., he was made Grand Pilot of the kingdom, and received a pension for his services. 1500.

II. GASPAR CORTEREAL.—1. [2]Soon after the successful voyage of the Cabots, which resulted in the discovery of North America, the king of Portugal, in the year 1500, despatched Gaspar Cortereal to the coasts of America, on a voyage of discovery. After exploring the coast of Labrador[a] several hundred miles, in the vain hope of finding a passage to India,[b] Cortereal freighted his ships with more than fifty of the natives, whom, on his return,[c] he sold into slavery.

3. What is said of the second voyage?

III. VERRAZANI.—1. [4]At an early period the fisheries of Newfoundland began to be visited by the French and the English, but the former attempted no discoveries in America until 1523. [5]In the latter part of this year Francis I. fitted out a squadron of four ships, the command of which he gave to John Verrazani, a Florentine navigator of great skill and celebrity. Soon after the vessels had sailed, three of them became so damaged in a storm that they were compelled to return; but Verrazani proceeded in a single vessel, with a determination to make new discoveries. Sailing[e] from Madeira,* in a westerly direction, after having encountered a terrible tempest, he reached[f] the coast of America, probably in the latitude of Wilmington.†

1524. 2. [1]After exploring the coast some distance north and south, without being able to find a harbor, he was obliged to send a boat on shore to open an intercourse with the natives. The savages at first fled, but soon recovering their confidence, they entered into an amicable traffic with the strangers.

1. What is said of the first landing, and intercourse with the natives?

3. [2]Proceeding north along the open coast of New Jersey, and no convenient landing-place being discovered, a sailor attempted to swim ashore through the surf; but, frightened by the numbers of the natives who thronged the beach, he endeavored to return, when a wave threw him terrified and exhausted upon the shore. He was, however, treated with great kindness; his clothes were dried by the natives; and, when recovered from his fright and exhaustion, he was permitted to swim back to the vessel.

2. What occurred on the coast of New Jersey?

4. [3]Landing again farther north, probably near the city of New York,* the voyagers, prompted by curiosity, kidnapped and carried away an Indian child. [4]It is supposed that Verrazani entered[a] the haven of Newport,† where he remained fifteen days. Here the natives were liberal, friendly, and confiding; and the country was the richest that had yet been seen.

3. Near New York?

4. What was the character of the natives in the vicinity of Newport?

5. [5]Verrazani still proceeded north, and explored the coast as far as Newfoundland.[b] The natives of the northern regions were hostile and jealous, and would traffick only for weapons of iron or steel. [6]Verrazani gave to the whole region which he had discovered the name of NEW FRANCE; an appellation which was afterwards confined to Canada, and by which that country was known while it remained in the possession of the French.

The inhabitants were early and extensively engaged in the Newfoundland cod fishery.

After having minutely surveyed[a] the northern coast of that island, he passed through the Straits of Belleisle, into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and entered the mouth of the river of the same name; but the weather becoming boisterous, and the season being far advanced, after erecting a cross,[b]—taking possession of the country in the name of the king of France,—and inducing two of the natives to accompany him, he set sail[c] on his return, and, in less than thirty days, entered[d] the harbor of St. Malo in safety. 1534.

MONTREAL AND VIC.

* Montreal, the largest town in Canada, is situated on the S.E. side of a fertile island of the same name about 30 miles long and 10 broad, inclosed by the divided channel of the St. Lawrence. The city is about 140 miles S.W. from Quebec, but farther by the course of the river.

1540. V. ROBERVAL.—1. [1]Notwithstanding the advantages likely to result from founding colonies in America, the French government, adopting the then prevalent notion that no new countries were valuable except such as produced gold and silver, made no immediate attempts at colonization.

1. What was the prevalent opinion with regard to the value of new countries?

2. [2]At length a wealthy nobleman, the Lord of Roberval, requested permission to pursue the discovery and form a settlement. This the king readily granted, and Roberval received[a] the empty titles of Lord, Lieutenant-general, and Viceroy, of all the islands and countries hitherto discovered either by the French or the English.

2. What is said of the designs and titles of Roberval?

1540. a. Jan.

3. [3]While Roberval was delayed in making extensive preparations for his intended settlement, Cartier, whose services could not be dispensed with, received a subordinate command, and, in 1541, sailed[b] with five ships already prepared. The Indian king had in the mean while died in France; and on the arrival of Cartier in the St. Lawrence, he was received by the natives with jealousy and distrust, which soon broke out into open hostilities. [4]The French then built for their defence, near the present site of Quebec,* a fort which they named Charlesbourg, where they passed the winter.

3. Give an account of the third voyage of Cartier?

4. What Fort was erected?

1542. 4. [5]Roberval arrived at Newfoundland in June of the following year, with three ships, and emigrants for founding a colony; but a misunderstanding having arisen between him and Cartier, the latter secretly set sail for France. Roberval proceeded up the St. Lawrence to the place which Cartier had abandoned, where he erected two forts and passed a tedious winter.[c] After some unsuccessful attempts to discover a passage to the East Indies,[d] he brought his colony back to France, and the design of forming a settlement was abandoned. In 1549 Roberval again sailed on a voyage of discovery, but he was never again heard of.

The city consists of the Upper and the Lower Town,—the latter on a narrow strip of land near the water's edge; and the former on a plain difficult of access, more than 200 feet higher. Cape Diamond, the most elevated point of the Upper Town, is 345 feet above the leve. of the river, and commands a grand view of an extensive tract of country. (See Map p. 189.)

VI. RIBAULT, LAUDONNIERE, AND MELENDEZ.—1. [1]Coligni, admiral of France, having long desired to establish in America a refuge for French Protestants, at length obtained a commission from the king for that purpose, and, in 1562, despatched[a] a squadron to Florida,[b] under the command of John Ribault. [2]Arriving on the coast in May, he discovered the St. Johns River, which he named the river of May; but the squadron continued north until it arrived at Port Royal* entrance, near the southern boundary of Carolina, where it was determined to establish the colony. 1562.

2. [3]Here a fort was erected, and named Fort Charles, and twenty-six men were left to keep possession of the country, while Ribault returned[c] to France for farther emigrants and supplies. [4]The promised reenforcement not arriving, the colony began to despair of assistance; and, in the following spring, having constructed a rude brigantine, they embarked for home, but had nearly perished by famine, at sea, when they fell in with and were taken on board of an English vessel.

3. [5]In 1564, through the influence of Coligni, another expedition was planned, and in July a colony was established on the river St. Johns,† and left under the command of Laudonniere. [6]Many of the emigrants, however, being dissolute and improvident, the supplies of food were wasted; and a party, under the pretence of desiring to escape from famine, were permitted to embark[d] for France; but no sooner had they departed than they commenced a career of piracy against the Spanish. The remnant were on the point of embarking for France, when Ribault arrived and assumed the command, bringing supplies, and additional emigrants with their families.

VICINITY OF PORT ROYAL.

* Port Royal is an island 12 miles in length, on the coast of South Carolina, on the east side of which is situated the town of Beaufort, 50 miles S.W. from Charleston. Between the island and the mainland is an excellent harbor.

† The St. Johns, the principal river of Florida, rises in the eastern part of the territory, about 25 miles from the coast, and runs north, expanding into frequent lakes, until within 20 miles of its mouth, when it turns to the east, and falls into the Atlantic, 35 miles north from St. Augustine (See Map next page.)

4. [1]Meanwhile news arrived in Spain that a company of French Protestants had settled in Florida,[a] within the Spanish territory, and Melendez, who had obtained the appointment of governor of the country, upon the condition of completing its conquest within three years, departed on his expedition, with the determination of speedily extirpating the heretics.

1. What occurred when the Spaniards heard of the settlement?

5. [2]Early in September,[b] 1565, he came in sight of Florida, and soon discovering a part of the French fleet, gave them chase, but was unable to overtake them. On the seventeenth of September Melendez entered a beautiful harbor, and the next day,[c] after taking formal possession of the country, and proclaiming the king of Spain monarch of all North America, laid the foundations of St. Augustine.*

6. [3]Soon after, the French fleet having put to sea with the design of attacking the Spaniards in the harbor of St. Augustine, and being overtaken by a furious storm, every ship was wrecked on the coast, and the French settlement was left in a defenceless state. [4]The Spaniards now made their way through the forests, and, surprising[d] the French fort, put to death all its inmates, save a few who fled into the woods, and who subsequently escaped on board two French ships which had remained in the harbor. Over the mangled remains of the French was placed the inscription, "We do this not as unto Frenchmen, but as unto heretics." The helpless shipwrecked men being soon discovered, although invited to rely on the clemency of Melendez, were all massacred, except a few Catholics and a few mechanics, who were reserved as slaves.

7. [1]Although the French court heard of this outrage with apathy, it did not long remain unavenged. De Gourgues, a soldier of Gascony,* having fitted[a] out three ships at his own expense, surprised two of the Spanish forts on the St. Johns river, early in 1568, and hung their garrisons on the trees, placing over them the inscription, "I do this not as unto Spaniards or mariners, but as unto traitors, robbers, and murderers." 1585. 4. [1]Encouraged by their report, Raleigh made active preparations to form a settlement; and, in the following year, 1585, despatched[a] a fleet of seven vessels under the command of Sir Richard Grenville, with Ralph Lane as governor of the intended colony. After some disasters on the coast, the fleet arrived at Roanoke,* an island in Albemarle Sound, whence, leaving the emigrants under Lane to establish the colony, Grenville returned[b] to England.

Their treatment of the natives soon provoked hostilities;—their supplies of provisions, which they had hitherto received from the Indians, were withdrawn;—famine stared them in the face; and they were on the point of dispersing in quest of food, when Sir Francis Drake arrived[c] with a fleet from the West Indies.[d]

1. Give an account of the second attempt to form a settlement.

9. [2]On the arrival[a] of the emigrants at Roanoke, where they expected to find the men whom Grenville had left, they found the fort which had been built there in ruins; the houses were deserted; and the bones of their former occupants were scattered over the plain. At the same place, however, they determined to establish the colony; and here they laid the foundations for their "city."

a. Aug.

2. What disappointment happened to the emigrants on their arrival?

10. [3]Soon finding that they were destitute of many things which were essential to their comfort, their governor, Captain John White, sailed[b] for England, to obtain the necessary supplies. [4]On his arrival he found the nation absorbed by the threats of a Spanish invasion; and the patrons of the new settlement were too much engaged in public measures to attend to a less important and remote object. Raleigh, however, in the following year, 1588, despatched[c] White with supplies, in two vessels; but the latter, desirous of a gainful voyage, ran in search of Spanish prizes; until, at length, one of his vessels was overpowered, boarded, and rifled, and both ships were compelled to return to England.

3. What is said of the return of Captain White?

b. Sept. 6.

4. Under what circumstances was the colony abandoned and finally lost?

1588.

c. May 2.

11. Soon after, Raleigh assigned[d] his patent to a company of merchants in London; and it was not until 1590 that White was enabled to return[e] in search of the colony; and then the island of Roanoke was deserted. No traces of the emigrants could be found. The design of establishing a colony was abandoned, and the country was again left[f] to the undisturbed possessior of the natives.

1598. VIII. MARQUIS DE LA ROCHE.—1. [1]In 1598, the Marquis de la Roche, a French nobleman, received from the king of France a commission for founding a French colony in America. Having equipped several vessels, he sailed with a considerable number of settlers, most of whom, however, he was obliged to draw from the prisons of Paris. On Sable* island, a barren spot near the coast of Nova Scotia, forty men were left to form a settlement.

1. What is said of the attempt of De la Roche to form a settlement?

2. [2]La Roche dying soon after his return, the colonists were neglected; and when, after seven years, a vessel was sent to inquire after them, only twelve of them were living. The dungeons from which they had been liberated were preferable to the hardships which they had suffered. The emaciated exiles were carried back to France, where they were kindly received by the king, who pardoned their crimes, and made them a liberal donation.

2. What was the fate of the colony?

1602. IX. BARTHOLOMEW GOSNOLD.—1. [3]In 1602, Bartholomew Gosnold sailed[a] from Falmouth,† England, and abandoning the circuitous route by the Canaries[b] and the West Indies,[c] made a direct voyage across the Atlantic, and in seven weeks reached[d] the American continent, probably near the northern extremity of Massachusetts Bay.‡ [4]Not finding a good harbor, and sailing southward, he discovered and landed[e] upon a promontory which he called Cape Cod.§ Sailing thence, and pursuing his course along the coast, he discovered[f] several islands, one of which he named Elizabeth,‖ and another Martha's Vineyard.¶

‡ Massachusetts Bay is a large bay on the eastern coast of Massachusetts, between the headlands of Cape Ann on the north, and Cape Cod on the south.

§ Cape Cod, thus named from the number of codfish taken there by its discoverer, is 50 miles S.E. from Boston.

‖ Elizabeth Islands are a group of 13 islands south of Buzzard's Bay, and from 20 to 30 miles E. and S.E. from Newport, Rhode Island. Nashawn, the largest, is 7 and a half miles long. Cattahunk, the one named by Gosnold Elizabeth Island, is two miles and a half long and three quarters of a mile broad.

2. [1]Here it was determined to leave a portion of the crew for the purpose of forming a settlement, and a storehouse and fort were accordingly erected; but distrust of the Indians, who began to show hostile intentions, and the despair of obtaining seasonable supplies, defeated the design, and the whole party embarked[a] for England. [2]The return occupied but five weeks, and the entire voyage only four months. 1602.

Pring landed[d] on the coast of Maine,—discovered some of its principal rivers,—and examined the coast of Massachusetts as far as Martha's Vineyard. The whole voyage occupied but six months. X. DE MONTS.—1. [4]In 1603, the king of France granted[e] to De Monts, a gentleman of distinction, the sovereignty of the country from the 40th to the 46th degree of north latitude; that is, from one degree south of New York city,[f] to one north of Montreal.[g] [5]Sailing[h] with two vessels, in the spring of 1604, he arrived at Nova Scotia[i] in May, and spent the summer in trafficking with the natives, and examining the coasts preparatory to a settlement.

It was the island of the same name, a few miles up the river, on which the French settled. By the treaty of 1783 the St. Croix was made the eastern boundary of the United States, but it was uncertain what river was the St. Croix until the remains of the French fort were discovered.

† The Bay of Fundy, remarkable for its high tides, lies between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. It is nearly 200 miles in length from S.W. to N.E. and 75 miles across at its entrance, gradually narrowing towards the head of the bay. At the entrance the tide is of the ordinary height, about eight feet, but at the head of the bay it rises 60 feet, and is so rapid as often to overtake and sweep off animals feeding on the shore.

1608. 1. What more is said of De Monts?

3. [1]In 1608, De Monts, although deprived of his former commission, having obtained from the king of France the grant of the monopoly of the fur trade on the river St. Lawrence, fitted out two vessels for the purpose of forming a settlement; but not finding it convenient to command in person, he placed them under Samuel Champlain, who had previously visited those regions.

Thence Champlain continued to ascend the river until he had passed the Isle of Orleans,‡ when he selected[c] a commodious place for a settlement, on the site of the present city of Quebec,[d] and near the place where Cartier had passed the winter, and erected a fort, in 1541. From this time is dated the first permanent settlement of the French in New France or Canada.

XI. NORTH AND SOUTH VIRGINIA.—1. [2]In 1606 James the 1st, of England, claiming all that portion of North America which lies between the 34th and the 45th degrees of north latitude, embracing the country from Cape Fear§ to Halifax,‖ divided this territory into two nearly equal districts; the one, called NORTH VIRGINIA, extending from the 41st to the 45th degree;

2. [1]The former he granted[a] to a company of 'knights, gentlemen, and merchants," of the west of England, called the Plymouth Company; and the latter to a company of "noblemen, gentlemen, and merchants," mostly resident in London, and called the London Company. The intermediate district, from the 38th to the 41st degree, was open to both companies; but neither was to form a settlement within one hundred miles of the other.

a. April 20.
1. To what companies were these districts granted?

3. [2]The supreme government of each district was to be vested in a council residing in England, the members of which were to be appointed by the king, and to be removed at his pleasure. The local administration of the affairs of each colony was to be committed to a council residing within its limits, likewise to be appointed by the king, and to act conformably to his instructions. [3]The effects of these regulations were, that all executive and legislative powers were placed wholly in the hands of the king, that the colonists were deprived of the rights of self-government,—and the companies received nothing but a simple charter of incorporation for commercial purposes.

2. How were the governments of these districts established?

3. What were the effects of these regulations?

4. [4]Soon after the grant, the Plymouth Company despatched[b] a vessel to examine the country; but before the voyage was completed she was captured[c] by the Spaniards. NOTES ON THE INDIAN TRIBES.

ALTHOUGH there is much connected with the history, customs, religion, traditions, &c., of the Indians of North America, that is highly interesting, yet in this place we can do little more than give the names, and point out the localities of the principal tribes east of the Mississippi, as they were first known to Europeans.

The discovery of a similarity in the primitive words of different Indian languages, is the principle that has governed the division of the different tribes into families or nations. The principal divisions within the limits of the present United States, east of the Mississippi, were the Algonquin, the Iroquois, the Cherokee, and the Mobilian Tribes.

Of the ALGONQUIN TRIBES, the Etchemins and the Abenakes occupied most of the present State of Maine. They were firmly attached to the French during the early history of the country, and were almost constantly in a state of hostilities with the British colonies. The principal tribes of the Abenakes were the Penobscots, the Norridgewocks, and the Androscoggins. Next south of the Abenakes were the New England Indians, extending from Maine to the eastern boundary of Connecticut. Their principal tribes were the Massachusetts, Pawtuckets, Nipmucks, Pokanokets, and Narragansetts. After the termination of King Philip's war, in 1675, most of these tribes joined the eastern Indians, or sought refuge in Canada, whence they continued to harass the frontiers of New England, until the final overthrow of the French, in 1760. The Mohegans embraced the Pequods, Manhattans, Wabingas, and other tribes, extending from Rhode Island to New Jersey. Next south and west of the Mohegans were the Lenni-Lennapes, consisting of two divisions, the Minsi and the Delawares, although both tribes are best known in history as the Delawares. They gradually removed west of the Alleghanies; they joined the French against the English during the French and Indian war; most of them took part with the British during the war of the Revolution, and they were at the head of the western confederacy of Indians which was dissolved by the victory of General Wayne in 1794. Only a few hundred of this once powerful tribe now remain, some in Canada, the rest west of the Mississippi.—On the eastern shore of Maryland were the Nanticokes, who removed west of the Alleghanies, and joined the British during the Revolution. The Susquehannocks, Mannahoacks, and Monacans, were tribes farther inland, on the head waters of the streams that enter Chesapeake Bay. Of their history little is known, and there are no remnants of their languages remaining. The Powhatan nation embraced a confederacy of more than twenty tribes, bordering on the southern shores of the Chesapeake. It is believed that not a single individual who speaks the Powhatan language now remains.—The Shawnees were a roving tribe, first found between the Ohio and Cumberland Rivers, whence they were driven by the Cherokees. They were among the most active allies of the French during the French and Indian war; they joined the British during the war of the Revolution; and part of the tribe, under Tecumseh, during the late war. They have since removed west of the Mississippi. The principal of the other western tribes belonging to the Algonquin family, were the Miamis, Illinois, Kickapoos, Sacs and Foxes, Menomonies, and Potowatomies, whose history is interesting, principally, as connected with the early settlements of the French in the western country.

The IROQUOIS TRIBES embraced the Hurons, north of Lakes Erie and Ontario; the Five Nations, in New York, and the Tuscaroras, of Carolina. The Hurons or Wyandots, when first known, were engaged in a deadly war with their kindred, the Five Nations, by whom they were finally driven from their country. Remnants of this tribe are now found in Canada, and west of the Mississippi. The Five Nations, found on the southern shore of Lake Ontario, embraced the Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Senecas, and Cayugas. They were the most powerful of all the tribes east of the Mississippi, and were farther advanced in the few arts of Indian life than their Algonquin neighbors. They uniformly adhered to the British interests. In 1714 they were joined by the Tuscaroras, since which time the confederacy has been called the Six Nations.

The CHEROKEE NATION occupied the eastern and southern portions of Tennessee, and the highlands of Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama. They fought against the English during most of the French and Indian war, and joined the British during the Revolution; but, during the late war, assisted the Americans against the Creeks. In 1838, they removed west of the Mississippi. They are now the most civilized of all the Indian tribes, and their population has increased during the last fifty years.

The MOBILIAN TRIBES embraced the Creeks, Choctas, Chickasas, and the Seminoles. The latter once belonged to the Creek tribe. The Creeks and the Chickasas adhered to the British during the Revolution. The Choctas have ever been a peaceable people, and although they have had successively, for neighbors, the French, the Spanish, and the English, they have never been at war with any of them.

4. To whom had the government of the Virginia colony been intrusted?

* VIRGINIA, the most northern of the southern United States, and the largest in the Union, often called the Ancient Dominion, from its early settlement, contains an area of nearly 70,000 square miles. The state has a great variety of surface and soil. From the coast to the head of tide water on the rivers, including a tract of generally more than 100 miles in width, the country is low, sandy, covered with pitch pine and is unhealthy from August to October. Between the head of tide water and the ony had been intrusted to a council of seven persons, whom the superior council in England had been permitted to name, with a president to be elected by the council from their number. [1]But the names and instructions of the council having been placed, by the folly of the king, in a sealed box, with directions that it should not be opened until the emigrants had arrived in America, dissensions arose during the voyage; and John Smith, their best and ablest man, was put in confinement, upon the absurd accusation of an intention to murder the council, usurp the government, and make himself king of Virginia.

1. What was the cause of the early dissensions which arose, and why was Smith imprisoned?

2. What is said of Wingfield, and how was Smith treated on the arrival of the company?

2. [2]Soon after their arrival, the council chose Edward Wingfield president,—an ambitious and unprincipled man,—and finding that Smith had been appointed one of their number, they excluded him from their body, as, by their instructions, they had power to do, but released him from confinement. As Smith demanded a trial upon the charges brought against him, which were known to be absurdly false, his accusers thought best, after a partial hearing of the case, to withdraw the accusation; and he was soon restored to his station as a member of the council.

3. What is said of the character of the emigrants?

3. [3]Of the one hundred and five persons on the list of emigrants, destined to remain, there were no men with families,—there were but twelve laborers, and very few mechanics. The rest were composed of gentlemen of fortune, and of persons of no occupation,—mostly of idle and dissolute habits—who had been tempted to join the expedition through curiosity or the hope of gain;—a company but poorly calculated to plant an agricultural state in a wilderness. [4]The English were kindly received by the natives in the immediate vicinity of Jamestown, who, when informed of the wish of the strangers to settle in the country, offered them as much land as they wanted.

4. Their reception by the natives?

a. Note p. 44.

5. Of Powhatan and his subjects?

4. [5]Soon after their arrival, Newport, and Smith, and twenty others, ascended the James[a] river, and visited the native chieftain, or king, Powhatan, at his principal residence near the present site of Richmond.* His subjects murmured at the intrusion of the strangers into the country; but Powhatan, disguising his jealousy and his fear, manifested a friendly disposition. 1607.

Blue Ridge, the soil is better, and the surface of the country becomes uneven and hilly. The interior of the State, traversed by successive ridges of the Alleghany, running N.E. and S.W. is a healthy region, and in the valleys are some of the best and most pleasant lands in the State. The country west of the mountains, towards the Ohio, is rough and wild, with occasional fertile tracts, but rich as a mineral region.

5. [1]About the middle of June Newport sailed for England; and the colonists, whose hopes had been highly excited by the beauty and fertility of the country, beginning to feel the want of suitable provisions, and being now left to their own resources, soon awoke to the reality of their situation. [2]They were few in number, and without habits of industry;—the Indians began to manifest hostile intentions,—and before autumn, the diseases of a damp and sultry climate had swept away fifty of their number, and among them, Bartholomew Gosnold, the projector of the settlement, and one of the ablest men in the council.

1. What occurred after the departure of Newport?

2. What is said of the sufferings of the colony?

6. [3]To increase their misery, their avaricious president, Wingfield, was detected in a conspiracy to seize the public stores, abandon the colony, and escape in the company's bark to the West Indies. [4]He was therefore deposed, and was succeeded by Ratcliffe; but the latter possessing little capacity for government, and being subsequently detected in an attempt to abandon the colony, the management of affairs, by common consent, fell into the hands of Smith, who alone seemed capable of diffusing light amidst the general gloom.

3. In what conspiracy was the President detected?

4. What is said of Ratcliffe, and into whose hands did the government fall?

7. [5]Under the management of Smith, the condition of the colony rapidly improved. He quelled the spirit of anarchy and rebellion, restored order, inspired the natives with awe, and collected supplies of provisions, by expeditions into the interior. As autumn approached, wild fowl and game became abundant; the Indians, more friendly, from their abundant harvests made voluntary offerings; and peace and plenty again revived the drooping spirits of the colony. Nov.

5. What is said of the management of Smith?

8. [6]The active spirit of Smith next prompted him to explore the surrounding country. After ascending the Chickahominy† as far as he could advance in boats,

6. Under what circumstances was Smith taken prisoner by the Indians?

* Richmond, the capital of Virginia, is on the north side of James river, 75 miles from its mouth. Immediately above the river are the falls, and directly opposite is the village of Manchester.

† The Chickahominy river rises northwest from Richmond, and, during most of its 1607. with two Englishmen and two Indian guides he struck into the interior. The remainder of the party, disobeying his instructions, and wandering from the boat, were surprised by the Indians and put to death. Smith was pursued, the two Englishmen were killed, and he himself, after dispatching with his musket several of the most forward of his assailants, unfortunately sinking in a miry place, was forced to surrender.

1. In what manner did he save his life?

9. [1]His calmness and self-possession here saved his life. Showing a pocket compass, he explained its wonderful properties, and, as he himself relates, "by the globe-like figure of that jewel he instructed them concerning the roundness of the earth, and how the sun did chase the night round about the earth continually." In admiration of his superior genius the Indians retained him as their prisoner.

2. How did the Indians regard him and what did they do with him?

10. [2]Regarding him as a being of superior order, but uncertain whether he should be cherished as a friend, or dreaded as an enemy, they observed towards him the utmost respect as they conducted him in triumph from one village to another, and, at length, brought him to the residence of Opechancanough, where, for the space of three days, their priests or sorcerers practiced incantations and ceremonies, in order to learn from the invisible world the character and designs of their prisoner.

3. What is said of the decision of his fate?

11. [3]The decision of his fate was referred to Powhatan and his council, and to the village of that chieftain Smith was conducted, where he was received with great pomp and ceremony. Here it was decided that he should die. [4]He was led forth to execution, and his head was laid upon a stone to receive the fatal blow, when Pocahontas, the young and favorite daughter of the king, rushed in between the victim and the uplifted arm of the executioner, and with tears and entreaties besought her father to save his life.

4. Under what circumstances was his life saved by Pocahontas?

5. What did Powhatan do with him?

[5]The savage chieftain relented; Smith was set at liberty; and, soon after, with a guard of twelve men, was conducted in safety to Jamestown, after a captivity of seven weeks.

course, runs nearly parallel to James river, which it enters five or six miles above Jamestown. (See Map p. 44.)

12. [1]The captivity of Smith was, on the whole, beneficial to the colony; for he thereby learned much of the Indians,—their character, customs, and language; and was enabled to establish a peaceful intercourse between the English, and the Powhatan tribes. [2]But on his return to Jamestown he found disorder and misrule again prevailing; the number of the English was reduced to forty men; and most of these, anxious to leave a country where they had suffered so much, had determined to abandon the colony and escape with the pinnace. This was the third attempt at desertion. By persuasion and threats a majority were induced to relinquish the design; but the remainder, more resolute, embarked in spite of the threats of Smith, who instantly directed the guns of the fort upon them and compelled them to return. 1608.

1. What benefits were derived from his captivity?

2. What was the condition of the colony on his return?

13. [3]Soon after, Newport arrived from England with supplies, and one hundred and twenty emigrants. The hopes of the colonists revived; but as the new emigrants were composed of gentlemen, refiners of gold, goldsmiths, jewellers, &c., and but few laborers, a wrong direction was given to the industry of the colony. [4]Believing that they had discovered grains of gold in a stream of water near Jamestown, the entire industry of the colony was directed to digging, washing, refining, and loading gold; and notwithstanding the remonstrances of Smith, a ship was actually freighted with the glittering earth and sent to England.

3. What is said of the arrival of new emigrants?

4. Of the search for gold?

In two voyages, occupying about three months of the summer, with a few companions, in an open boat, he performed a navigation of nearly three thousand miles, passing far up the Susquehanna* and the Potomac;† nor did he

a. Sept. 29.
2. What is said of his administration of the government and of the condition of the colony after an existence of two years?

15. [1]Soon after his return from this expedition, Smith was formally made president[a] of the council. [2]By his energetic administration order and industry again prevailed, and Jamestown assumed the appearance of a thriving village. Yet at the expiration of two years from the time of the first settlement, not more than forty acres of land had been cultivated; and the colonists, to prevent themselves from starving, were still obliged to obtain most of their food from the indolent Indians. Although about seventy new emigrants arrived, yet they were not suitable to the wants of the colony, and Smith was obliged to write earnestly to the council in England, that they should send more laborers, that the search for gold should be abandoned, and that "nothing should be expected except by labor."

1609. II. VIRGINIA UNDER THE SECOND CHARTER.—1. [3]In 1609, a new charter was given[b] to the London Company, by which the limits of the colony were enlarged, and the constitution of Virginia radically changed. The territory of the colony was now extended by a grant of all the lands along the seacoast, within the limits of two hundred miles north, and two hundred south of Old Point Comfort;* that is, from the northern boundary of Maryland, to the southern limits of North Carolina, and extending westward from sea to sea.

b. June 2.
3. What is said of the second charter?

4. What changes were made in the government of the colony?

2. [4]The council in England, formerly appointed by the king, was now to have its vacancies filled by the votes of a majority of the corporation. This council was authorized to appoint a governor, who was to reside in Virginia, and whose powers enabled him to rule the colonists with almost despotic sway. The council in England, it is true, could make laws for the colony, and give instructions to the governor; but the discretionary powers conferred upon the latter were so extensive, that the lives, liberty, and property of the colonists, were placed almost at his arbitrary disposal. 1609.

3. [1]Under the new charter, the excellent Lord Delaware was appointed governor for life. Nine ships, under the command of Newport, were soon despatched[a] for Virginia, with more than five hundred emigrants. Sir Thomas Gates, the deputy of the governor, assisted by Newport and Sir George Somers, was appointed to administer the government until the arrival of Lord Delaware. [2]When the fleet had arrived near the West Indies, a terrible storm[b] dispersed it, and the vessel in which were Newport, Gates, and Somers, was stranded on the rocks of the Bermudas.* A small ketch perished, and only seven vessels arrived[c] in Virginia.

4. [3]On the arrival of the new emigrants, most of whom were profligate and disorderly persons, who had been sent off to escape a worse destiny at home, Smith found himself placed in an embarrassing situation. As the first charter had been abrogated, many thought the original form of government was abolished; and, as no legal authority existed for establishing any other, every thing tended to the wildest anarchy.

3. What was the cause of the embarrassing situation of Smith?

5. [4]In this confusion, Smith soon determined what course to pursue. Declaring that his powers as president were not suspended until the arrival of the persons appointed to supersede him, he resumed the reins of government, and resolutely maintained his authority. [5]At length, being disabled by an accidental explosion of gunpowder, and requiring surgical aid which the new settlement could not afford, he delegated his authority to George Percy, brother of the Earl of Northumberland, and embarked for England.

4. How did he manage?
5. What is said of his return to England?

* The Bermudas are a group of about 400 small islands, nearly all but five mere rocks, containing a surface of about 20 square miles, and situated in the Atlantic Ocean, 580 miles E. from Cape Hatteras, which is the nearest land to them. They were discovered in 1515, by a Spanish vessel commanded by Juan Bermudez, from whom they have derived their name. Soon after the shipwreck above mentioned, Somers formed a settlement there, and from him they were long known as the "Summer Islands," but the original name, Bermudas, has since prevailed. They are well fortified, belong to the English, and are valuable, principally, as a naval station.

1610. 6. [1]On the departure of Smith, subordination and industry ceased; the provisions of the colony were soon consumed; the Indians became hostile, and withheld their customary supplies; the horrors of famine ensued; and, in six months, anarchy and vice had reduced the number of the colony from four hundred and ninety to sixty; and these were so feeble and dejected, that if relief had been delayed a few days longer, all must have perished. This period of suffering and gloom was long remembered with horror, and was distinguished by the name of the starving time.

1. Describe the situation of the colony during the "starving time."

7. [2]In the mean time Sir Thomas Gates and his companions, who had been wrecked on the Bermudas, had reached the shore without loss of life,—had remained nine months on an uninhabited but fertile island,—and had found means to construct two vessels, in which they embarked[a] for Virginia, where they anticipated a happy welcome, and expected to find a prosperous colony.

2. What had become of Sir Thomas Gates and his companions?

a. May 29.

8. [3]On their arrival[b] at Jamestown, a far different scene presented itself; and the gloom was increased by the prospect of continued scarcity. Death by famine awaited them if they remained where they were; and, as the only means of safety, Gates resolved to sail for Newfoundland, and disperse the company among the ships of English fishermen. With this intention they embarked,[c] but just as they drew near the mouth of the river, Lord Delaware fortunately appeared with emigrants and supplies, and they were persuaded to return.[d]

9. [4]The return of the colony was celebrated by religious exercises, immediately after which the commission of Lord Delaware was read, and the government organized. Under the wise administration of this able and virtuous man, order and contentment were again restored; but the health of the governor soon failing, he was obliged to return to England, having previously appointed Percy to administer the government until a successor should arrive. [5]Before the return of Lord Delaware was known, the company had dispatched Sir Thomas Dale with supplies. Arriving[e] in May, he assumed the government of the colony which he administered with moderation, although upon the basis of martial law. 1611.

10. [1]In May, Dale had written to the company, stating the small number and weakness of the colonists, and requesting new recruits; and early in September Sir Thomas Gates arrived with six ships and three hundred emigrants, and assumed the government of the colony, which then numbered seven hundred men. [2]New settlements were now formed, and several wise regulations adopted; among which was that of assigning to each man a few acres of ground for his orchard and garden.

2. What new regulations were adopted?

11. [3]Hitherto all the land had been worked in common, and the produce deposited in the public stores. The good effects of the new regulation were apparent in the increased industry of the colonists, and soon after, during the administration of Sir Thomas Dale, larger assignments of land were made, and finally, the plan of working in a common field, to fill the public stores, was entirely abandoned.

III. VIRGINIA UNDER THE THIRD CHARTER.—1. [4]In 1612, the London Company obtained[a] from the king a new charter, making important changes in the powers of the corporation, but not essentially affecting the political rights of the colonists themselves. 1612.

4. What is said of the third charter?

a. March 22.

2. [5]Hitherto the principal powers possessed by the company had been vested in the superior council, which, under the first charter, was appointed by the king; and although, under the second, it had its vacancies filled by the majority of the corporation, yet the corporation itself could act only through this medium. The superior council was now abolished, and its powers were transferred to the whole company, which, meeting as a democratic assembly, had the sole power of electing the officers and establishing the laws of the colony.

5. What changes in the government were effected by it?

3. [6]In 1613 occurred the marriage of John Rolfe, a young Englishman, with Pocahontas, the daughter of Powhatan;—an event which exerted a happy influence upon the relations of the colonists and Indians. The marriage received the approval of the father and friends of the maiden, and was hailed with great joy 1613.

In 1616, the Indian wife accompanied her husband to England, and was received with much kindness and attention by the king and queen; but as she was preparing to return, at the age of twenty-two she fell a victim to the English climate. She left one son, from whom are descended some of the most respectable families in Virginia.

1614. 2. Of Sir Thomas Dale's administration.

6. [2]Early in 1614, Sir Thomas Gates embarked for England, leaving the administration of the government in the hands of Sir Thomas Dale, who ruled with vigor and wisdom, and made several valuable changes in the land laws of the colony. After having remained five years in the country, he appointed 1617. 4. Give an account of Argall's administration.

7. [4]In 1617, the office of deputy-governor was intrusted to Argall, who ruled with such tyranny as to excite universal discontent. He not only oppressed the colonists, but defrauded the company. 8. [2]The colony was divided into eleven boroughs; and two representatives, called burgesses, were chosen from each. These, constituting the house of burgesses, debated all matters which were thought expedient for the good of the colony; but their enactments, although sanctioned by the governor and council, were of no force until they were ratified by the company in England. [3]In the month of August, 1620, a Dutch man-of-war entered James river, and landed twenty negroes for sale. This was the commencement of negro slavery in the English colonies.

2. Of the origin and powers of the House of Burgesses.

3. Under what circumstances was slavery introduced?

9. [4]It was now twelve years since the settlement of Jamestown, and after an expenditure of nearly four hundred thousand dollars by the company, there were in the colony only six hundred persons; yet, during the year 1620, through the influence of Sir Edwyn Sandys, the treasurer of the company, twelve hundred and sixty-one additional settlers were induced to emigrate. But as yet there were few women in the colony, and most of the planters had hitherto cherished the design of ultimately returning to England.

4. What was the state of the colony in 1620, and what additional emigrations were made?

10. [5]In order to attach them still more to the country, and to render the colony more permanent, ninety young women, of reputable character, were first sent over, and, in the following year, sixty more, to become wives to the planters. The expense of their transportation, and even more, was paid by the planters; the price of a wife rising from one hundred and twenty, to one hundred and fifty pounds of tobacco.

5. What measures were taken to attach the emigrants to the country?

11. [6]In August, 1621, the London Company granted[c] to their colony a written constitution, ratifying, in the main, the form of government established by Yeardley. It decreed that a governor and council should be appointed by the company, and that a general assembly, consisting of the council, and two burgesses chosen by the people from each plantation, or borough, should

12. With singular liberality it was farther ordained that no orders of the company in England should bind the colony until ratified by the assembly. The trial by jury was established, and courts of justice were required to conform to the English laws. This constitution, granting privileges which were ever after claimed as rights, was the basis of civil freedom in Virginia.

Orders of the company?

Constitution, basis of what?

a. Oct. 13. [1]The new constitution was brought over by Sir Francis Wyatt, who had been appointed to succeed Governor Yeardley. He found the numbers of the colony greatly increased, their settlements widely extended, and every thing in the full tide of prosperity. But this pleasant prospect was doomed soon to experience a terrible reverse.

1. What is said of the arrival of Sir Francis Wyatt, and the condition of the colony?

14. [2]Since the marriage of Pocahontas, Powhatan had remained the firm friend of the English. But he being now dead, and his successor viewing with jealousy and alarm the rapidly increasing settlements of the English, the Indians concerted a plan of surprising and destroying the whole colony. Still preserving the language of friendship, they visited the settlements, bought the arms, and borrowed the boats of the English, and, even on the morning of the fatal day, came among them as freely as usual.

2. Give an account of the Indian conspiracy.

15. [3]On the first of April, 1622, at mid-day, the attack commenced; and so sudden and unexpected was the onset, that, in one hour, three hundred and forty-seven men, women, and children, fell victims to savage treachery and cruelty. The massacre would have been far more extensive had not a friendly Indian, on the previous evening, revealed the plot to an Englishman whom he wished to save; by which means Jamestown and a few of the neighboring settlements were well prepared against the attack.

3. Of the massacre and Indian war which followed.

16. [4]Although the larger part of the colony was saved, yet great distress followed; the more distant settlements were abandoned; and the number of the plantations was reduced from eighty to eight. [1]But the English soon aroused to vengeance. An exterminating war against the Indians followed; many of them were destroyed; and the remainder were obliged to retire far into the wilderness. 1623.

1. What was the result?

17. [2]The settlement of Virginia by the London Company had been an unprofitable enterprise, and as the shares in the unproductive stock were now of little value, and the holders very numerous, the meetings of the company, in England, became the scenes of political debate, in which the advocates of liberty were arrayed against the upholders of royal prerogative. [3]The king disliked the freedom of debate here exhibited, and, jealous of the prevalence of liberal sentiments, at first sought to control the elections of officers, by overawing the assemblies.

2. Give an account of the causes which led to the dissolution of the London Company.

3. What displeased the king?

18. [4]Failing in this, he determined to recover, by a dissolution of the company, the influence of which he had deprived himself by a charter of his own concession. [5]Commissioners in the interest of the king were therefore appointed to examine the concerns of the corporation. As was expected, they reported in favor of a change; the judicial decision was soon after given; the London Company was dissolved; the king took into his own hands the government of the colony; and Virginia thus became a royal government. 1624.

4. What did he determine?

5. How was the measure accomplished?

19. [6]During the existence of the London Company, the government of Virginia had gradually changed from a royal government, under the first charter, in which the king had all power, to a proprietary government under the second and third charters, in which all executive and legislative powers were in the hands of the company.

6. What gradual changes had occurred in the government of Virginia?

20. [7]Although these changes had been made without consulting the wishes of the colonists, and notwithstanding the powers of the company were exceedingly arbitrary, yet as the majority of its active members belonged to the patriot party in England, so they acted as the successful friends of liberty in America. They had conceded the right of trial by jury, and had given to Virginia a representative government. These privileges, thus early conceded, could never be wrested

All claimed as extensive privileges as had been conceded to their elder sister colony, and future proprietaries could hope to win emigrants, only by bestowing franchises as large as those enjoyed by Virginia.

IV. VIRGINIA FROM THE DISSOLUTION OF THE LONDON COMPANY IN 1624, TO THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR IN 1754.—1. [1]The dissolution of the London Company produced no immediate change in the domestic government and franchises of the colony. A governor and twelve counsellors, to be guided by the instructions of the king, were appointed to administer the government; but no attempts were made to suppress the colonial assemblies. [2]On the death[a] of James the First, in 1625, his son, Charles the First, succeeded him. The latter paid very little attention to the political condition of Virginia, but aimed to promote the prosperity of the colonists, only with the selfish view of deriving profit from their industry. He imposed some restrictions on the commerce of the colony, but vainly endeavored to obtain for himself the monopoly of the trade in tobacco.

3. What is said of Harvey?

3. [4]His administration, however, was disturbed by disputes about land titles under the royal grants; and the colonists, being indignant that he should betray their interests by opposing their claims, deprived him of the government, and summoned an assembly to receive complaints against him. Harvey, in the mean time, had consented to go to England with commissioners appointed to manage his impeachment; but the king would not even admit his accusers to a hearing, and Harvey immediately returned[b] to occupy his former station.

4. [1]During the first administration of Sir William Berkeley, from 1642 to '52, the civil condition of the Virginians was much improved; the laws and customs of England were still farther introduced; cruel punishments were abolished; old controversies were adjusted; a more equitable system of taxation was introduced; the rights of property and the freedom of industry were secured; and Virginia enjoyed nearly all the civil liberties which the most free system of government could have conferred. 1642.

1. Give an account of Berkeley's first administration.

5. [2]A spirit of intolerance, however, in religious matters, in accordance with the spirit of the age, was manifested by the legislative assembly; which ordered[a] that no minister should preach or teach except in conformity to the Church of England. [3]While puritanism and republicanism were prevailing in England, leading the way to the downfall of monarchy, the Virginians showed the strongest attachment to the Episcopal Church and the cause of royalty.

2. What instance of religious intolerance is mentioned?

3. What singular contrast of principles is mentioned?

6. [4]In 1644 occurred another Indian massacre, followed by a border warfare until October, 1646, when peace was again established. During several years the Powhatan tribes had shown evidences of hostility; but, in 1644, hearing of the dissensions in England, and thinking the opportunity favorable to their designs, they resolved on a general massacre, hoping to be able eventually to exterminate the colony. 1644.

4. Give an account of the second Indian massacre and war in which the Virginians were involved.

7. On the 28th of April, the attack was commenced on the frontier settlements, and about three hundred persons were killed before the Indians were repulsed. [5]A vigorous war against the savages was immediately commenced, and their king, the aged Opechancanough, the successor of Powhatan, was easily made prisoner, and died in captivity. Submission to the English, and a cession of lands, were the terms on which peace was purchased by the original possessors of the soil. 1646.

5. What was the result of the war?

Previous to this (in 1650) foreign ships had been forbidden to trade with the rebellious colony, and in 1651 the celebrated navigation act, securing to English ships the entire carrying trade with England, and seriously abridging the freedom of colonial commerce, was passed.

1. How was Virginia treated by the parliament?

1652. 9. [2]On the arrival[a] of the naval force of parliament in 1652, all thoughts of resistance were laid aside, and although the Virginians refused to surrender to force, yet they voluntarily entered into a compact[b] with their invaders, by which they acknowledged the supremacy of parliament. [3]By this compact, which was faithfully observed till the restoration of monarchy, the liberties of Virginia were preserved, the navigation act itself was not enforced within her borders, and, regulated by her own laws, Virginia enjoyed freedom of commerce with all the world.

10. [4]During the existence of the Commonwealth Virginia enjoyed liberties as extensive as those of any English colony, and from 1652 till 1660, she was left almost entirely to her own independent government. Cromwell never made any appointments for Virginia; but her governors,[c] during the Commonwealth, were chosen by the burgesses, who were the representatives of the people. [5]When the news of the death[d] of Cromwell arrived, the assembly reasserted their right of electing the officers of government, and required the governor, Matthews, to confirm it; in order, as they said, "that what was their privilege then, might be the privilege of their posterity."

involved that kingdom in a civil war; arraying, on the one side, Parliament and the Republicans; and, on the other, the Royalists and the King. Between 1642 and 1649, several important battles were fought, when the king was finally taken prisoner, tried, condemned, and executed, Jan. 30, (Old Style) 1649. The Parliament then ruled; but Oliver Cromwell, who had been the principal general of the Republicans, finally dissolved it by force, (April, 1653,) and took into his own hands the reins of government, with the title of "Protector of the Commonwealth." He administered the government with energy and ability until his death, in 1658. Richard Cromwell succeeded his father, as Protector, but, after two years, he abdicated the government, and quietly retired to private life. Charles the Second, a highly accomplished prince, but arbitrary, base, and unprincipled, was then restored (in 1660) to the throne of his ancestors, by the general wish of the people.

11. [1]On the death of governor Matthews, which happened just at the time of the resignation of Richard, the successor of Cromwell, the house of burgesses, after enacting that "the government of the country should be resident in the assembly until there should arrive from England a commission which the assembly itself should adjudge to be lawful," elected Sir William Berkeley governor, who, by accepting the office, acknowledged the authority to which he owed his elevation. [2]The Virginians hoped for the restoration of monarchy in England, but they did not immediately proclaim Charles the Second king, although the statement of their hasty return to royal allegiance has been often made. 1660.

1. At the time of the resignation of Richard?

2. What were the wishes of the Virginians with regard to monarchy?

12. [3]When the news of the restoration of Charles the Second reached Virginia, Berkeley, who was then acting as governor elected by the people, immediately disclaimed the popular sovereignty, and issued writs for an assembly in the name of the king. The friends of royalty now came into power, and high hopes of royal favor were entertained.

3. What happened at the time of the restoration of Charles II.?

13. [4]But prospects soon darkened. The commercial policy of the Commonwealth was adopted, and restrictions upon colonial commerce were greatly multiplied. The new provisions of the navigation act enjoined that no commodities should be imported to any British settlements, nor exported from them, except in English vessels, and that the principal products of the colonies should be shipped to no country except England. The trade between the colonies was likewise taxed for the benefit of England, and the entire aim of the colonial system was to make the colonies dependent upon the mother country.

4. What is said of the commercial restrictions imposed on the colonies?

14. [5]Remonstrances against this oppression were of no avail, and the provisions of the navigation act were rigorously enforced. The discontents of the people were farther increased by royal grants of large tracts of land which belonged to the colony, and which included plantations that had long been cultivated; and, in 1673, the lavish sovereign of England, with his usual profligacy, gave away to Lord Culpepper and the Earl of Arlington, two royal favorites, "all the 1673.

1. In what manner were the liberties of the people abridged?

15. [1]In the mean time, under the influence of the royalist and the aristocratic party in Virginia, the legislature had seriously abridged the liberties of the people. The Episcopal Church had become the religion of the state,—heavy fines were imposed upon Quakers and Baptists,—the royal officers, obtaining their salaries by a permanent duty on exported tobacco, were removed from all dependence upon the people,—the taxes were unequal and oppressive,—and the members of the assembly, who had been chosen for a term of only two years, had assumed to themselves an indefinite continuance of power, so that, in reality, the representative system was abolished.

3. What is said of the Indian war which occurred at this time?

16. [2]The pressure of increasing grievances at length produced open discontent; and the common people, highly exasperated against the aristocratic and royal party, began to manifest a mutinous disposition. [3]An excuse for appearing in arms was presented in the sudden outbreak of Indian hostilities. The Susquehanna Indians, driven from their hunting grounds at the head of the Chesapeake, by the hostile Senecas, had come down upon the Potomac, and, with their confederates, were then engaged in a war with Maryland. Murders had been committed on the soil of Virginia, and when six of the hostile chieftains presented themselves to treat for peace, they were cruelly put to death. The Indians aroused to vengeance, and a desolating warfare ravaged the frontier settlements.

6. And of the commencement of Bacon's rebellion?

17. [4]Dissatisfied with the measures of defence which Berkeley had adopted, the people, with Nathaniel Bacon for their leader, demanded of the governor permission to rise and protect themselves. [5]Berkeley, jealous of the increasing popularity of Bacon, refused permission. [6]At length, the Indian aggressions increasing, and a party of Bacon's own men having been slain on his plantation, he yielded to the common voice, placed himself at the head of five hundred men, and commenced his march against the Indians. He was immediately proclaimed[a] traitor by Berkeley, and troops were levied to pursue him. Bacon continued his expedition, which was successful, while Berkeley was obliged to recall his troops, to suppress an insurrection in the lower counties. 1676.

18. [1]The great mass of the people having arisen, Berkeley was compelled to yield; the odious assembly, of long duration, was dissolved; and an assembly, composed mostly of the popular party, was elected in their places. Numerous abuses were now corrected, and Bacon was appointed commander-in-chief. [2]Berkeley, however, at first refused to sign his commission, but Bacon having made his appearance in Jamestown, at the head of several hundred armed men, the commission was issued, and the governor united with the assembly in commending to the king the zeal, loyalty, and patriotism of the popular leader. But as the army was preparing to march against the enemy, Berkeley suddenly withdrew across the York* river to Gloucester,† summoned a convention of loyalists, and, even against their advice, once more proclaimed Bacon a traitor.

1. What is said of the success of the popular cause?

2. Of the vacillating conduct of Berkeley?

19. [3]Bacon, however, proceeded against the Indians, and Berkeley having crossed the Chesapeake to Accomac‡ county, his retreat was declared an abdication. Berkeley, in the mean time, with a few adherents, and the crews of some English ships, had returned to Jamestown, but, on the approach of Bacon and his forces, after some slight resistance the royalists were obliged to retreat, and Bacon took possession of the capital of Virginia.

3. What were the events of the civil war which followed?

20. The rumor prevailing that a party of royalists was approaching, Jamestown was burned, and some of the patriots fired their own houses, lest they might afford shelter to the enemy. Several troops of the royalists soon after joined the insurgents, but, in the midst of his successes, Bacon suddenly died.[a] His party, now left without a leader, after a few petty in-

1. What is said of the cruelty of Berkeley?

21. [1]The vengeful passions of Berkeley, however, were not allayed by the submission of his enemies. Fines and confiscations gratified his avarice, and executions were continued till twenty-two had been hanged, when the assembly interfered, and prayed him to stop the work of death. The conduct of Berkeley was severely censured in England, and publicly by the king himself, who declared, "The old fool has taken away more lives in that country than I for the murder of my father."

2. Of the character of Bacon, and the tyranny of the government?

22. [2]Historians have not done justice to the principles and character of Bacon. He has been styled a rebel; and has been described as ambitious and revengeful; but if his principles are to be gathered from the acts of the assembly of which he was the head, they were those of justice, freedom, and humanity. At the time of the rebellion, "no printing press was allowed in Virginia; to speak ill of Berkeley or his friends was punished by fine or whipping; to speak, or write, or publish any thing in favor of the rebels, or the rebellion, was made a high misdemeanor, and, if thrice repeated, was evidence of treason. It is not strange then that posterity was for more than a hundred years defrauded of the truth."

3. When and in what manner was a proprietary government established?

23. [3]The grant of Virginia to Arlington and Culpepper has already been mentioned. In 1677 the latter obtained the appointment of governor for life, and thus Virginia became a proprietary government, with the administration vested in one of the proprietors. In

1680 Culpepper arrived in the province, and assumed the duties of his office. [4]The avaricious proprietor was more careful of his own interests than of those of the colony, and under his administration Virginia was impoverished. [5]In 1684, the grant was recalled,—Culpepper was deprived of his office, although he had been appointed for life, and Virginia again became a royal province. Arlington had previously surrendered his rights to Culpepper. [6]The remaining portion of the history of Virginia, down to the period of the French and Indian war, is marked with few incidents of importance.

I. EARLY HISTORY.—1. [1]An account of the first attempt of the Plymouth Company to form a settlement in North Virginia has already been given.[a] Although vessels annually visited the coast for the purpose of trade with the Indians, yet little was known of the interior until 1614, when Captain John Smith, who had already obtained distinction in Virginia, sailed with two vessels to the territories of the Plymouth Company, for the purposes of trade and discovery.

1. What is said of the first attempted settlement in North Virginia, and what of the interior of the country?

2. [2]The expedition was a private adventure of Smith and four merchants of London, and was highly successful. After Smith had concluded his traffic with the natives, he travelled into the interior of the country, accompanied by only eight men, and, with great care, explored the coast from the Penobscot[b] to Cape Cod.[c] [3]He prepared a map of the coast, and called the country NEW ENGLAND,—a name which Prince Charles confirmed, and which has ever since been retained.

c. Note p. 40.

3. Of the map which he prepared?

3. [4]After Smith's departure, Thomas Hunt, the master of the second ship, enticed a number of natives on board his vessel and carried them to Spain, where they were sold into slavery. [5]In the following[d] year, Smith, in the employ of some members of the Ply-

* MASSACHUSETTS, one of the New England States, is about 120 miles long from east to west, 90 miles broad in the eastern part, and 50 in the western, and contains an area of about 7,500 square miles. Several ranges of mountains, extending from Vermont and New Hampshire, pass through the western part of this state into Connecticut. East of these mountains the country is hilly, except in the southern and southeastern portions, where it is low, and generally sandy. The northern and western portions of the state have generally a strong soil, well adapted to grazing. The valleys of the Connecticut and Housatonic are highly fertile. The marble quarries of West Stockbridge, in the western part of the state, and the granite quarries of Quincy, nine miles S.E. from Boston, are celebrated.

1615. mouth Company, sailed with the design of establishing a colony in New England. In his first effort a violent tempest forced him to return. [1]Again renewing[a] the enterprise, his crew became mutinous, and he was at last intercepted by French pirates, who seized his ship and conveyed him to France. He afterwards escaped alone, in an open boat, from the harbor of Rochelle,* and returned to England.

1. Of his second attempt?

4. [2]By the representations of Smith, the attention of the Plymouth Company was again excited; they began to form vast plans of colonization, appointed Smith admiral of the country for life, and, at length, after several years of entreaty, obtained[b] a new charter for settling the country. [3]The original Plymouth Company was superseded by the Council of Plymouth, to which was conveyed, in absolute property, all the territory lying between the 40th and 48th degrees[c] of north latitude, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and comprising more than a million of square miles.

b. Nov. 13.

3. Of the council of Plymouth and their charter?

c. See Maps.

5. [4]This charter was the basis of all the grants that were subsequently made of the country of New England. [5]The exclusive privileges granted by it occasioned disputes among the proprietors, and prevented emigration under their auspices, while, in the mean time, a permanent colony was established without the aid or knowledge of the company or the king.

4. Of what was this charter the basis?
5. What is said of its exclusive privileges?

II. PLYMOUTH COLONY.—1. [6]A band of Puritans, dissenters from the established Church of England, persecuted for their religious opinions, and seeking in a foreign land that liberty of conscience which their own country denied them, became the first colonists of New England. [7]As early as 1608 they emigrated to Holland, and settled, first, at Amsterdam,† and afterwards at Leyden,‡ where, during eleven years, they continued to live in great harmony, under the charge of their excellent pastor, John Robinson.

6. What is said of the Puritans?

7. Of their residence at Amsterdam and Leyden?

* Rochelle is a strongly fortified town at the bottom of a small gulf on the coast of the Atlantic (or Bay of Biscay) in the west of France.

† Amsterdam is on a branch of the Zuyder Zee, a gulf or bay in the west of Holland. In the 17th century it was one of the first commercial cities of Europe. The soil being marshy, the city is built mostly on oaken piles driven into the ground. Numerous canals run through the city in every direction.

‡ Leyden, long famous for its University, is on one of the branches or mouths of the Rhine, 7 miles from the sea, and 25 miles S.W. from Amsterdam.

2. [1]At the end of that period, the same religious zeal that had made them exiles, combined with the desire of improving their temporal welfare, induced them to undertake a more distant migration. [2]But, notwithstanding they had been driven from their early homes by the rod of persecution, they loved England still, and desired to retain their mother tongue, and to live under the government of their native land. 1620.

1. Of the causes which induced them to remove from Holland?
2. But what did they still desire?

3. [3]These, with other reasons, induced them to seek an asylum in the wilds of America. They obtained a grant of land from the London or Virginia Company, but, in vain, sought the favor of the king. [4]Destitute of sufficient capital, they succeeded in forming a partnership with some men of business in London, and, although the terms were exceedingly severe to the poor emigrants, yet, as they did not interfere with civil or religious rights, the Pilgrims were contented. [5]Two vessels having been obtained, the Mayflower and the Speedwell, the one hired, the other purchased, as many as could be accommodated prepared to take their final departure. Mr. Robinson and the main body were to remain at Leyden until a settlement should be formed.

3. Whither did they design to remove, and what grant did they obtain?
4. What partnership did they form, and why?
5. What vessels did they obtain, and who were to depart and who to remain?

4. [6]Assembled[a] at Delft Haven,* and kneeling in prayer on the seashore, their pious pastor commended them to the protection of Heaven, and gave them his parting blessing. [7]A prosperous wind soon bore the Speedwell to Southampton,† where it was joined by the Mayflower, with the rest of the company from London. After several delays, and finally being obliged to abandon the Speedwell as unseaworthy, part of the emigrants were dismissed, and the remainder were taken on board the Mayflower, which, with one hundred and one passengers, sailed from Plymouth‡ on the 16th of September.

7. What events occurred from this time until the final departure of the Pilgrims from England?

8. What is said of their voyage, and their destination?

* Delft Haven, the port or haven of Delf, is on the north side of the river Maese, in Holland, 18 miles south from Leyden, and about fifteen miles from the sea.

† Southampton, a town of England, is situated on an arm of the sea, or of the English Channel. It is 75 miles S.W. from London.

‡ Plymouth, a large town of Devonshire, in England, about 200 miles S.W. from London, and 130 from Southampton, stands between the rivers Plym and Tamar, near their entrance into the English Channel. Plymouth is an important naval station, and has one of the best harbors in England.

1620. of November they descried the bleak and dreary shores of Cape Cod, still far from the Hudson,* which they had selected as the place of their habitation. But the wintry storms had already commenced, and the dangers of navigation on an unknown coast, at that inclement season, induced them to seek a nearer resting-place.

1. Where did they first anchor, and what were their first proceedings? 2. Their leading men? 3. What parties were sent on shore, and why? 4. What hardships were endured? 5. What discoveries were made?

6. [1]On the 21st they anchored in Cape Cod harbor, but, before landing, they formed themselves into a body politic, by a solemn contract, and chose John Carver their governor for the first year. [2]Their other leading men, distinguished in the subsequent history of the colony, were Bradford, Brewster, Standish, and Winslow. [3]Exploring parties were sent on shore to make discoveries, and select a place for a settlement. [4]Great hardships were endured from the cold and storm, and from wandering through the deep snow which covered the country.

7. [5]A few Indians were seen, who fled upon the discharge of the muskets of the English; a few graves were discovered, and, from heaps of sand, a number of baskets of corn were obtained, which furnished seed for a future harvest, and probably saved the infant colony from famine. [6]On the 21st of December the harbor of Plymouth† was sounded, and being found fit for shipping, a party landed, examined the soil, and finding good water, selected this as the place for a settlement. [7]The 21st of December, corresponding with the 11th of December, Old Style, is the day which should be celebrated in commemoration of this important event, as the anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

6. What is said of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth? 7. Of the anniversary of this event?

PLYMOUTH AND VIC.

* The Hudson River, in New York, one of the best for navigation in America, rises in the mountainous regions west of Lake Champlain, and after an irregular course to Sandy Hill its direction is nearly south, 200 miles by the river, to New York Bay, which lies between Long Island and New Jersey. The tide flows to Troy, 151 miles (by the river) from New York.

† Plymouth, thus named from Plymouth in England, is now a village of about 5000 inhabitants. It is pleasantly situated on Plymouth harbor, 38 miles S.E. from Boston. The harbor is large, but shallow, and is formed by a sand beach extending three miles N.W. from the mouth of Eel River. In 1774 a part of the rock on which the Pilgrims landed was conveyed from the shore to a square in the centre of the village.

8. [1]In a few days the Mayflower was safely moored in the harbor. The buildings of the settlers progressed slowly, through many difficulties and discouragements, for many of the men were sick with colds and consumptions, and want and exposure rapidly reduced the numbers of the colony. The governor lost a son at the first landing; early in the spring his own health sunk under a sudden attack, and his wife soon followed him in death. The sick were often destitute of proper care and attention; the living were scarcely able to bury the dead; and, at one time, there were only seven men capable of rendering any assistance. Before April forty-six had died. [2]Yet, with the scanty remnant, hope and virtue survived;—they repined not in all their sufferings, and their cheerful confidence in the mercies of Providence remained unshaken. 1620.

1. Of the commencement of the settlement, and the sufferings during the first winter?

2. How were their afflictions borne by the settlers?

9. [3]Although a few Indians had been seen at a distance hovering around the settlement, yet during several months none approached sufficiently near to hold any intercourse with the English. At length the latter were surprised by the appearance, among them, of an Indian named Samoset, who boldly entered[a] their settlement, exclaiming in broken English, Welcome Englishmen! Welcome Englishmen! He had learned a little English among the fishermen who had visited the coast of Maine, and gave the colony much useful information.

3. Give an account of the first Indian visit that the colony received.

a. March 26.

10. [4]He cordially bade the strangers welcome to the soil, which, he informed them, had a few years before been deprived of its occupants by a dreadful pestilence that had desolated the whole eastern seaboard of New England. [5]Samoset soon after visited the colony, accompanied by Squanto, a native who had been carried away by Hunt, in 1614, and sold into slavery, but who had subsequently been liberated and restored to his country.

4. What information did Samoset give?

5. Who accompanied him on a subsequent visit?

11. [6]By the influence of these friendly Indians, Massasoit, the great Sachem of the Wampanoags, the principal of the neighboring tribes, was induced to visit the colony, where he was received[b] with much formality and parade. [7]A treaty of friendship was soon concluded,[b] the parties promising to deliver up offend-

1. What is said of other treaties?

12. [1]Other treaties, of a similar character, soon after followed. A powerful chieftain within the dominions of Massasoit, who at first regarded the English as intruders, and threatened them with hostilities, was finally

1622. compelled to sue for peace. [2]Canonicus, the chief of the Narragansetts, sent to Plymouth a bundle of arrows wrapped in a rattlesnake's skin, as a token of his hostility. The governor, Bradford, filled the skin with powder and shot and returned it; but the chieftain's courage failed at the sight of this unequivocal symbol, which was rejected by every community to which it was carried, until at last it was returned to Plymouth, with all its contents. The Narragansetts were awed into submission.

3. Of Weston's colony?

13. [3]In 1622, Thomas Weston, a merchant of London, sent out a colony of sixty adventurers, who spent most of the summer at Plymouth, enjoying the hospitality of the inhabitants, but afterwards removed to Weymouth,* where they began a plantation. [4]Being soon reduced to necessity by indolence and disorder, and having provoked the Indians to hostilities by their injustice, the latter formed a plan for the destruction of the settlement.

1623. 14. [5]But the grateful Massasoit having revealed the and the conspiracy was defeated. [6]The Weymouth Plantation was soon after nearly deserted, most of the settlers returning to England.

7. What was the conduct of the London adventurers?

15. [7]The London adventurers, who had furnished the Plymouth settlers with capital, soon becoming discouraged by the small returns from their investments, not only deserted the interests of the colony, but dic much to injure its prosperity. They refused to furnish Robinson and his friends a passage to America, attempted to enforce on the colonists a clergyman more friendly to the established church, and even despatched a ship to injure their commerce by rivalry. [1]At last, the emigrants succeeded in purchasing[a] the rights of the London merchants; they made an equitable division of their property, which was before in common stock; and although the progress of population was slow, yet, after the first winter, no fears were entertained of the permanence of the colony. 1624. 1626. a. Nov. 1. What did the emigrants do, and what is said of the permanence of the colony?

III. MASSACHUSETTS BAY COLONY.—1. [2]In 1624, Mr. White, a Puritan minister of Dorchester,* in England, having induced a number of persons to unite with him in the design of planting another colony in New England, a small company was sent over, who began a settlement at Cape Ann.† This settlement, however, was abandoned after an existence of less than two years. 2. Give an account of the attempted settlement of Cape Ann.

2. [3]In 1628, a patent was obtained[b] from the council of Plymouth, and a second company was sent over, under the charge of John Endicott, which settled[c] at Salem,‡ to which place a few of the settlers of Cape Ann had previously removed. [4]In the following year the proprietors received[d] a charter from the king, and were incorporated by the name of the "Governor and Company of the Massachusetts Bay in New England." About 200 additional settlers came[e] over, a part of whom removed to and founded Charlestown.§ 1628. b. March 29. 3. Of the settlement of Salem. c. Sept. 1629. d. 3. [5]During the year 1630, the Massachusetts Bay colony received a large accession to its numbers, by the arrival[f] of about three hundred families, mostly pious and intelligent Puritans, under the charge of the 1630. 5. What accessions were made to the colony in 1630? f. July.

* Dorchester, in England, is situated on the small river Froom, 20 miles from its entrance into the English Channel, six miles N. from Weymouth, and 120 S.W. from London.

1. What other events occurred at the same time?

4. [2]The new emigrants located themselves beyond the limits of Salem, and settled at Dorchester,* Roxbury,† Cambridge,‡ and Watertown.§ [3]The accidental advantage of a spring of good water induced a few families, and with them the governor, to settle on the peninsula of Shawmut; and Boston‖ thenceforth became the metropolis of New England.

2. Where did the new emigrants settle?

3. What is said of the first settlement of Boston?

5. [4]Many of the settlers were from illustrious and noble families, and having been accustomed to a life of ease and enjoyment, their sufferings from exposure and the failure of provisions were great, and, before December, two hundred had died. A few only, disheartened by the scenes of woe, returned to England. [5]Those who remained were sustained in their afflictions by religious faith and Christian fortitude;—not a trace of repining appears in their records, and sickness never prevented their assembling at stated times for religious worship.

‡ Cambridge, formerly called Newtown, is situated on the north side of Charles River, three miles N.W. from Boston. The courthouse and jail are at East Cambridge, formerly called Lechmere's Point, within a mile of Boston, and connected with it and Charlestown by bridges. Harvard College, the first established in the United States, is at Cambridge. (Map.) (See also Map, p. 210.)

§ Watertown village is on the north side of Charles River, west of Cambridge, and seven miles from Boston. (Map.)

‖ Boston, the largest town in New England, and the capital of Massachusetts, is situated on a peninsula of an uneven surface, two miles long and about one mile wide, connected with the mainland, on the south, by a narrow neck about forty rods across. Several bridges also now connect it with the mainland on the north, west, and south. The harbor, on the east of the city, is very extensive, and is one of the best in the United States. South Boston, formerly a part of Dorchester, and East Boston, formerly Noddles Island, are now included within the limits of the city (Also see Map on p. 210.)

1. What regulations were adopted in 1631?
a. May 28.

2. How has this law of exclusion been regarded, and what is said of it?

7. [3]In 1634 the pure democratic form of government, which had hitherto prevailed, was changed[b] to a representative democracy, by which the powers of legislation were intrusted to deputies chosen by the people. [4]In the same year the peculiar tenets of Roger Williams, minister of Salem, began to occasion much excitement in the colony. A puritan, and a fugitive from English persecution, Roger Williams had sought, in New England, an asylum among those of his own creed; but finding there, in matters of religion, the same kind of intolerance that prevailed in England, he earnestly raised his voice against it. 1634.

3. What change in the government was made in 1634?
b. May.

4. What is said of Roger Williams?

8. [5]He maintained that it is the duty of the civil magistrate to give equal protection to all religious sects, and that he has no right to restrain or direct the consciences of men, or, in any way, interfere with their modes of worship, or the principles of their religious faith. [6]But with these doctrines of religious tolerance he united others that were deemed subversive of good government, and opposed to the fundamental principles of civil society. Such were those which declared it wrong to enforce an oath of allegiance to the sovereign, or of obedience to the magistrate, and which asserted that the king had no right to usurp the power of disposing of the territory of the Indians, and hence that the colonial charter itself was invalid.

5. Of his principles?

6. What other opinions did he advance?

* NOTE.—But when New Hampshire united with Massachusetts in 1641, not as a province, but on equal terms, neither the freemen nor the deputies of New Hampshire were required to be church members.

1. How were the doctrines of Williams received, and what is said of his banishment?

9. [1]Such doctrines, and particularly those which related to religious toleration, were received with alarm, and Roger Williams, after having been in vain remonstrated with by the ruling elders of the churches, was summoned before the general court, and, finally, banished[a] from the colony. He soon after became the founder of Rhode Island.[b] a. Autumn of 1635.

b. See p. 111.

2. What additional settlers came over in 1635, and what is said of Peters and Vane?

10. [2]During the same year, 1635, three thousand new settlers came over, among whom were Hugh Peters and Sir Henry Vane, two individuals who afterwards acted conspicuous parts in the history of England. Sir Henry Vane, then at the age of twenty-five, gained the affections of the people by his integrity, humility, and zeal in religion; and, in the following year, was chosen governor.

3. Give an account of the emigration to the Connecticut?

11. [3]Already the increasing numbers of the colonists began to suggest the formation of new settlements still farther westward. The clustering villages around the Bay of Massachusetts had become too numerous and too populous for men who had few attachments to place, and who could choose their abodes from the vast world of wilderness that lay unoccupied before them; and, only seven years from the planting of Salem, we find a little colony branching[c] off from the parent stock, and wending its way through the forests, nearly a hundred miles, to the banks of the Connecticut.*

c. Oct. 25. See p. 184.

4. What is said of the sufferings of the emigrants?

12. [4]Severe were the sufferings of the emigrants during the first winter. Some of them returned, through the snow, in a famishing state; and those who remained subsisted on acorns, malt, and grains; but, during the summer following, new emigrants came in larger companies, and several settlements were firmly established.

5. What is remarked of this enterprise?

[5]The display of Puritan fortitude, enterprise, and resolution, exhibited in the planting of the Connecticut colony, are distinguishing traits of New England character. From that day to the present the

* Connecticut River, the largest river in New England, has its source in the high lands on the northern border of New Hampshire. Its general course is S. by W., and after forming the boundary between Vermont and New Hampshire, and passing through Massachusetts and Connecticut, it enters Long Island Sound, 100 miles N.E. from New York. It is not navigable for the largest vessels. Hartford, fifty miles from its mouth, is at the head of sloop navigation.

13. [1]Soon after the banishment of Roger Williams, other religious dissensions arose, which again disturbed the quiet of the colony. It was customary for the members of each congregation to assemble in weekly meetings, and there debate the doctrines they had heard the previous Sunday, for the purpose of extending their sacred influence through the week. As women were debarred the privilege of taking part in these debates, a Mrs. Hutchinson, a woman of eloquence and ability, established meetings for those of her own sex, in which her zeal and talent soon procured her a numerous and admiring audience.

1. What was the cause of other religious dissensions which arose soon after?

14. [2]This woman, from being an expounder of the doctrines of others, soon began to teach new ones; she assumed the right of deciding upon the religious faith of the clergy and the people, and, finally, of censuring and condemning those who rejected, or professed themselves unable to understand her peculiar tenets. [3]She was supported by Sir Henry Vane the governor, by several of the magistrates, and men of learning, and by a majority of the people of Boston. [4]She was opposed by most of the clergy, and by the sedate and more judicious men of the colony. [5]At length, in a general synod[a] of the churches, the new opinions were condemned as erroneous and heretical, and the general court soon after issued a decree of banishment against Mrs. Hutchinson and several of her followers.

15. [6]During the same year occurred an Indian war[b] in Connecticut, with the Pequods, the most warlike of the New England tribes. [7]The Narragansetts of Rhode Island, hereditary enemies of the Pequods, were invited to unite with them in exterminating the invaders of their country; but, through the influence of Roger Williams, they rejected the proposals, and, lured by the hope of gratifying their revenge for former injuries, they determined to assist the English in the prosecution of the war. [8]The result[c] of the brief contest was the total destruction of the Pequod nation. The impression made upon the other tribes secured a long tranquillity to the English settlements.

1637. 16. [1]The persecutions which the Puritans in England suffered, during this period, induced large numbers of them to remove to New England. But the jealousy of the English monarch, and of the English bishops, was at length aroused by the rapid growth of a Puritan colony, in which sentiments adverse to the claims of the established church and the prerogatives of royalty were ardently cherished; and repeated attempts were made to put a stop to farther emigration. As early as 1633, a proclamation to that effect was issued, but the vacillating policy of the king neglected to enforce it.

1. What is said of the attempts in England to prevent emigration?

1638. 17. [2]In 1638 a fleet of eight ships, on board of which were some of the most eminent Puritan leaders and patriots, was forbidden to sail, by order of the king's council; but the restraint was finally removed, and the ships proceeded on their intended voyage. [3]It has been asserted, and generally believed, that the distinguished patriots John Hampden and Oliver Cromwell were on board of this fleet, but were detained by special order of the king. [4]If the assertion be correct, this assumption of arbitrary power by the king was a fatal error; for the exertions of Hampden and Cromwell, in opposing the encroachments of kingly authority, afterwards contributed greatly to the furtherance of those measures which deprived Charles I. of his crown, and finally brought him to the scaffold.

18. [5]The settlers of Massachusetts had early turned their attention to the subject of education, wisely judging that learning and religion would be the best safeguards of the commonwealth. In 1636 the general court appropriated about a thousand dollars for the purpose of founding a public school or college, and, in the following year, directed that it should be established at Newtown. In 1638, John Harvard, a worthy minister, dying at Charlestown,* left to the institution upwards of three thousand dollars. In honor of this

IV. UNION OF THE NEW ENGLAND COLONIES.—1. [1]In 1643 the colonies of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Plymouth, and New Haven, formed[b] themselves into one confederacy, by the name of THE UNITED COLONIES OF NEW ENGLAND. [2]The reasons assigned for this union were, the dispersed state of the colonies; the dangers apprehended from the Dutch, the French, and the Indians; the commencement of civil contests in the parent country; and the difficulty of obtaining aid from that quarter, in any emergency. [3]A few years later Rhode Island petitioned[c] to be admitted into the confederacy, but was refused, because she was unwilling to consent to what was required of her, an incorporation with the Plymouth colony. 1643.

[5]This transaction of the colonies was an assumption of the powers of sovereignty, and doubtless contributed to the formation of that public sentiment which prepared the way for American Independence.

V. EARLY LAWS AND CUSTOMS.—1. [6]As the laws and customs of a people denote the prevailing sentiments and opinions, the peculiarities of early New England legislation should not be wholly overlooked. [7]By a fundamental law of Massachusetts it was enacted that all strangers professing the Christian religion, and fleeing to the country, from the tyranny of their persecutors, should be supported at the public charge till

1. But how was it limited?

2. [2]Defensive war only was considered justifiable; blasphemy, idolatry, and witchcraft, were punishable with death; all gaming was prohibited; intemperance, and all immoralities, were severely punished; persons were forbidden to receive interest for money lent, and to wear expensive apparel unsuitable to their estates: parents were commanded to instruct and catechise their children and servants; and, in all cases in which the laws were found defective, the Bible was made the ultimate tribunal of appeal.

3. [3]Like the tribes of Israel, the colonists of New England had forsaken their native land after a long and severe bondage, and journeyed into the wilderness for the sake of religion. [4]They endeavored to cherish a resemblance of condition so honorable, and so fraught with incitements to piety, by cultivating a conformity between their laws and customs, and those which had distinguished the people of God. [5]Hence arose some of the peculiarities which have been observed in their legislative code; and hence arose also the practice of commencing their sabbatical observances on Saturday evening, and of accounting every evening the commencement of the ensuing day.

3. What comparison is here observed?

4. What did the colonists endeavor to cherish, and how?

5. What peculiarities hence arose?

[6]'The same predilection for Jewish customs begat, or at least promoted, among them, the habit of bestowing significant names on children; of whom, the first three that were baptized in Boston church, received the names of Joy, Recompense, and Pity.' This custom prevailed to a great extent, and such names as Faith, Hope, Charity, Patience, &c., and others of a similar character, were long prevalen throughout New England.

I.—Events from the "Union" to King Philip's War.—II. King Philip's War.—III. Controversies and Royal Tyranny.—IV. Massachusetts during King William's War.

I. EVENTS FROM THE "UNION" TO KING PHILIP'S WAR.—1. [1]In 1644 an important change took place in the government of Massachusetts. When representatives were first chosen, they sat and voted in the same room with the governor's council; but it was now ordained that the governor and his council should sit apart; and thence commenced the separate existence of the democratic branch of the legislature, or house of representatives. [2]During the same year the disputes which had long existed between the inhabitants of New England and the French settlers in Acadia were adjusted by treaty.[a]

2. What disputes were adjusted?

2. [3]During the civil war[b] which occurred in England, the New England colonies were ardently attached to the cause of the Parliament, but yet they had so far forgotten their own wrongs, as sincerely to lament the tragical fate of the king. [4]After the abolition of royalty, a requisition[c] was made upon Massachusetts for the return of her charter, that a new one might be taken out under the authorities which then held the reins of government. Probably through the influence of Cromwell the requisition was not enforced. [5]When the supreme authority devolved upon Cromwell, as Protector of the Commonwealth of England, the New England colonies found in him an ardent friend, and a protector of their liberties.

6. Give an account of the early history of Maine.

* MAINE, the northeastern of the United States, is supposed to contain an area of nearly 35,000 square miles. In the north and northwest the country is mountainous, and has a poor soil. Throughout the interior it is generally hilly, and the land rises so rapidly from the seacoast, that the tide in the numerous rivers flows but a short distance inland. The best land in the state is between the Penobscot and Kennebec rivers, where it is excellent. The coast is lined with islands, and indented with numerous

As early as 1626 a few feeble settlements were commenced along the coast of Maine, but hardly had they gained a permanent existence, before the whole territory, from the Piscataqua* to the Penobscot, was granted away by the Plymouth Company, by a succession of conflicting patents, which were afterwards the occasion of long-continued and bitter controversies.

a. April 13.
1. What is said of Gorges, and his scheme of government?

4. [1]In 1639 Ferdinand Gorges, a member of the Plymouth Company, obtained[a] a royal charter, constituting him Lord Proprietor of the country. The stately scheme of government which he attempted to establish was poorly suited to the circumstances of the people; and they finally sought a refuge from anarchy, and the contentions of opposing claimants to their territory, by taking into their own hands the powers of government, and placing[b] themselves under the protection of a sister colony.

2. Of the first arrival of Quakers in Massachusetts?

5. [2]In 1656 occurred the first arrival of Quakers in Massachusetts, a sect which had recently arisen in England. The report of their peculiar sentiments and actions had preceded them, and they were sent back by the vessels in which they came. [3]The four united colonies then concurred in a law[c] prohibiting the introduction of Quakers, but still they continued to arrive in increasing numbers, although the rigor of the law was increased against them. At length, in 1658, by the advice of the commissioners of the four colonies, the legislature of Massachusetts, after a long discussion, and by a majority of a single vote, denounced the punishment of death upon all Quakers returning from banishment.

4. What was the avowed object of the law of 1658?
5. What was its effect?

6. [4]The avowed object of the law was not to persecute the Quakers, but to exclude them; and it was thought that its severity would be effectual. [5]But the fear of death had no influence over men who believed they were divinely commissioned to proclaim the sin-bays and inlets, which furnish more good harbors than are found in any other state in the Union.

* The Piscataqua rises between Maine and New Hampshire, and throughout its whole course, of forty miles, constitutes the boundary between the two states. That part of the stream above Berwick Falls, it is called Salmon Falls river. Great Bay, with its tributaries, Lamprey, Exeter, Oyster River, and other streams, unites with it on the south, five miles above Portsmouth. (See Map, p. 101.)

fulness of a dying people; and four of those who had been banished, were executed according to the law,—rejoicing in their death, and refusing to accept a pardon, which was vainly urged upon them, on condition of their abandoning the colony for ever. 1659.

7. [1]During the trial of the last who suffered, another, who had been banished, entered the court, and reproached the magistrates for shedding innocent blood. [2]The prisons were soon filled with new victims, who eagerly crowded forward to the ranks of martyrdom; but, as a natural result of the severity of the law, public sympathy was turned in favor of the accused, and the law was repealed.[a] The other laws were relaxed, as the Quakers gradually became less ardent in the promulgation of their sentiments, and more moderate in their opposition to the usages of the people. 1660.

1. What occurred at the trial of the last who suffered?

2. What was the final result of these proceedings?

8. [3]Tidings of the restoration of monarchy in England were brought by the arrival,[b] at Boston, of two of the judges who had condemned Charles I. to death, and who now fled from the vengeance of his son. These judges, whose names were Edward Whalley and William Goffe, were kindly received by the people; and when orders were sent, and messengers arrived[c] for their arrest, they were concealed from the officers of the law, and were enabled to end their days in New England.

9. [4]The commercial restrictions from which the New England colonies were exempt during the time of the Commonwealth, were renewed after the restoration. The harbors of the colonies were closed against all but English vessels; such articles of American produce as were in demand in England were forbidden to be shipped to foreign markets; even the liberty of free trade among the colonies themselves was taken away, and they were finally forbidden to manufacture, for their own use, or for foreign markets, those articles which would come in competition with English manufactures. [5]These restrictions were the subject of frequent complaints, and could seldom be strictly enforced; but England would never repeal them, and they became a prominent link in the chain of causes which led to the revolution.

4. Give an account of the restrictions upon New England commerce.

5. Were these restrictions enforced?

10. [1]In 1664 a royal fleet, destined for the reduction of the Dutch colonies on the Hudson, arrived[a] at Boston, bringing commissioners who were instructed to hear and determine all complaints that might exist in New England, and take such measures as they might deem expedient for settling the peace and security of the country on a solid foundation. [2]Most of the New England colonies, ever jealous of their liberties, viewed this measure with alarm, and considered it a violation of their charters.

1. What is said of the arrival of royal commissioners in New England?
2. How was this measure viewed?

11. [3]In Maine and New Hampshire the commissioners occasioned much disturbance; in Connecticut they were received with coldness; in Plymouth with secret opposition; but, in Rhode Island, with every mark of deference and attention. [4]Massachusetts alone, although professing the most sincere loyalty to the king, asserted with boldness her chartered rights, and declining to acknowledge the authority of the commissioners, protested against its exercise within her limits. [5]In general, but little attention was paid to the acts of the commissioners, and they were at length recalled. After their departure, New England enjoyed a season of prosperity and tranquillity, until the breaking out of King Philip's war, in 1675.

[1]II. King Philip's War.—1. [6]The treaty of friendship which the Plymouth colony made[b] with Massasoit, the great sachem of the Wampanoags, was kept unbroken during his lifetime. [7]After his death,[c] his two sons, Alexander and Philip, were regarded with much jealousy by the English, and were suspected of plotting against them. [8]It is said by the early New England historians, that this chief, jealous of the growing power of the whites, and perceiving, in it, the eventual destruction of his own race, during several years secretly carried on his designs of uniting all the neighboring tribes in a warlike confederacy against the English. [9]By later, and more impartial writers, it is asserted that Philip received the news of the death of the first Englishmen who were killed, with so much sorrow as to cause him to weep; and that he was forced into the war by the ardor of his young men, against his own judgment, and that of his chief counsellors. 1674.

3. [1]A friendly Indian missionary, who had detected the supposed plot, and revealed it to the Plymouth people, was, soon after, found murdered.[a] Three Indians were arrested, tried, and convicted of the murder, —one of whom, at the execution, confessed they had been instigated by Philip to commit the deed. Philip, now encouraged by the general voice of his tribe, and seeing no possibility of avoiding the war, sent his women and children to the Narragansetts for protection, and, early in July, 1675, made an attack[b] upon Swanzey,* and killed several people.

They then attempted to guard the avenues leading from the swamp, in the hope of reducing the Indians by starvation; but, after a siege of thirteen days, the enemy contrived to escape in the night across an arm of the bay, and most of them, with Philip, fled westward to the Connecticut River, where they had previously induced the Nipmucks,§ a tribe in the interior of Massachusetts, to join them.

§ The Nipmucks occupied the country in the central and southern parts of Worcester county.

1675. 6. [1]The English, in the hope of reclaiming the Nipmucks, had sent Captains Wheeler and Hutchinson, with a party of twenty men, into their country, to treat with them. On the arrival of a party to the relief of the garrison the Indians abandoned the place.

8. [3]A few days later, 180 men attacked[b] the Indians in the southern part of the town of Deerfield,† killing twenty-six of the enemy, and losing ten of their own number. On the eleventh of September Deerfield was burned, by the Indians.

4. At Hadley?

The noise of the firing being heard at Deerfield, Captain Mosely, with seventy men, hastened to the scene of action. After a contest of several hours he found himself obliged to retreat, when a reenforcement of one hundred English and sixty friendly Mohegan Indians, came to his assistance, and the enemy were at length repulsed with a heavy loss. 1675.

[2]Before this fortress the New England forces arrived[a] on a cold stormy day in the month of December. Between the fort and the mainland was a body of water, over which a tree had been felled, and upon this, as many of the English as could pass rushed with ardor; but they were quickly swept off by the fire of Philip's men. 15. [6]After the absence of a year from the home of his tribe, during which time nearly all his warriors had fallen, and his wife and only son had been taken prisoners, the heart-broken chief, with a few followers, returned to Pokanoket. Tidings of his arrival were brought to Captain Church, who, with a small party, surrounded the place where Philip was concealed. The savage warrior attempted to escape, but was shot[a] by a faithless Indian, an ally of the English, one of his own tribe, whom he had previously offended. The southern and western Indians now came in and sued for peace, but the tribes in Maine and New Hampshire continued hostile until 1678, when a treaty was concluded[b] with them.

III. Controversies, and Royal Tyranny.—1. [7]In 1677, a controversy which had long subsisted between Massachusetts and the heirs of Gorges, relative to the province of Maine, was decided in England, in favor of the former; and Massachusetts then purchased[c] the claims of the heirs, both as to soil and jurisdiction. [8]In 1680, the claims of Massachusetts to New Hampshire were decided against the former, and the two provinces were separated, much against the wishes of the people of both. New Hampshire then became a 1677.

2. [1]Massachusetts had ever resisted, as unjust and illegal, the commercial restrictions which had been imposed upon the colonies; and when a custom-house officer was sent[a] over for the collection of duties, he was defeated in his attempts, and finally returned[b] to England without accomplishing his object. [2]The king seized the occasion for carrying out a project which he had long entertained, that of taking into his own hands the governments of all the New England colonies. [3]Massachusetts was accused of disobedience to the laws of England, and English judges, who held their offices at the pleasure of the crown, declared[c] that she had forfeited her charter. [4]The king died[d] before he had completed his scheme of subverting the charter governments of the colonies, but his plans were prosecuted with ardor by his brother and successor, James II.

[6]In December of the same year Sir Edmund Andros arrived[f] at Boston, with a commission as royal governor of all New England. [7]Plymouth, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island, immediately submitted; and, in a few months, Connecticut was added to his jurisdiction.

IV. MASSACHUSETTS DURING KING WILLIAM'S WAR.

2. [1]The opening of this war was signalized by several successful expeditions of the French and Indians against the northern colonies. In July,[a] 1689, a party of Indians surprised and killed Major Waldron and twenty of the garrison at Dover,† and carried twenty-nine of the inhabitants captives to Canada. In the following month an Indian war party, starting from the French settlement on the Penobscot, fell upon the English fort at Pemaquid,‡ which they compelled to surrender.[b]

It is about eighteen miles N.E. from the mouth of Kennebec River, and forty N.E. from Portland. The fort was at first called Fort George. In 1692 it was rebuilt of stone, by Sir William Phipps, and named Fort William Henry. In 1730 it was repaired, and called Fort Frederic. In 1690 the settlements extended around the western shore of the bay, and were embraced in what was then called the town of Falmouth. The fort and settlement mentioned above, were on a peninsula called Casco Neck, the site of the present city of Portland. The fort, called Fort Loyal, was on the southwesterly shore of the peninsula, at the end of the present King Street. (See Map.)

VICINITY OF PORTLAND

1690. 4. [1]Late in the same year a more important enterprise, the conquest of Canada, was undertaken by the people of New England and New York acting in concert. An armament, designed for the reduction of Quebec, was equipped by Massachusetts, and the command of it given to Sir William Phipps; while a land expedition was to proceed from New York against Montreal. The fleet proceeded up the St. Lawrence, and appeared before Quebec about the middle of October; but the land troops of New York having returned,[a] Quebec had been strengthened by all the French forces, and now bade defiance to the fleet, which soon returned to Boston. [2]This expedition imposed a heavy debt upon Massachusetts, and, for the payment of troops, bills of credit were issued;—the first emission of the kind in the American colonies.

3. Why was Phipps sent to England?

1691. 5. [3]Soon after the return of Sir William Phipps from this expedition, he was sent to England to request assistance in the farther prosecution of the war, and likewise to aid other deputies of Massachusetts in applying for the restoration of the colonial charter. [4]But in neither of these objects was he successful. England was too much engaged at home to expend her treasures in the defence of her colonies; and the king and his counsellors were secretly averse to the liberality of the former charter.

4. Was he successful? And why not?

1692. 6. [5]Early in 1692 Sir William Phipps returned[b] with a new charter, which vested the appointment of governor in the king, and united Plymouth, Massachusetts, Maine, and Nova Scotia, in one royal government. 7. [6]While Massachusetts was called to mourn the desolation of her frontiers by savage warfare, and to grieve the abridgment of her charter privileges, a new and still more formidable calamity fell upon her. 8. [1]In 1692 the delusion broke out[b] with new violence and frenzy in Danvers,* then a part of Salem. The daughter and niece of the minister, Mr. Parris, were at first moved by strange caprices, and their singular conduct was readily ascribed to the influence of witchcraft. The ministers of the neighborhood held a day of fasting and prayer, and the notoriety which the children soon acquired, with perhaps their own belief in some mysterious influence, led them to accuse individuals as the authors of their sufferings. An old Indian servant in the family was whipped until she confessed herself a witch; and the truth of the confession, although obtained in such a manner, was not doubted.

1. Give an account of the first appearance of the Salem witchcraft.

9. [2]Alarm and terror spread rapidly; evil spirits were thought to overshadow the land; and every case of nervous derangement, aggravated by fear; and every unusual symptom of disease, was ascribed to the influence of wicked demons, who were supposed to have entered the bodies of those who had sold themselves into the power of Satan.

2. What is said of the spread of the delusion, and its nature?

10. [3]Those supposed to be bewitched were mostly children, and persons in the lowest ranks of life; and the accused were at first old women, whose ill-favored looks seemed to mark them the fit instruments of unearthly wickedness. [4]But, finally, neither age, nor sex, nor station, afforded any safeguard against a charge of witchcraft. Magistrates were condemned, and a clergyman[c] of the highest respectability was executed.[d]

DIVISIONS.

What are its Divisions?

I. Massachusetts during Queen Anne's War.—II. King George's War.

I. MASSACHUSETTS DURING QUEEN ANNE'S WAR.—1. [1]After the death of James II., who died[a] in France, in 1701, the French government acknowledged his son, then an exile, as king of England; which was deemed an unpardonable insult to the latter kingdom, which had settled the crown on Anne, the second daughter of James. In addition to this, the French monarch was charged with attempting to destroy the proper balance of power in Europe, by placing his grandson, Philip of Anjou,* on the throne of Spain. These causes led to a war between England, on the one side, and France and Spain on the other, which is commonly known in America as "Queen Anne's War," but, in Europe, as the "War of the Spanish Succession."

a. Sept. 1. Give an account of the causes which led to Queen Anne's war.

2. [2]The Five Nations had recently concluded a treaty[b] of neutrality with the French of Canada, by which New York was screened from danger; so that the whole weight of Queen Anne's war, in the north, fell upon the New England colonies. [3]The tribes from the Merrimac† to the Penobscot had assented to a treaty[c] of peace with New England; but, through the influence of the French, seven weeks after, it was treacherously broken;[d] and, on one and the same day, the whole frontier, from Casco‡ to Wells,§ was devoted to the tomahawk and the scalping-knife.

* Anjou was an ancient province in the west of France, on the river Loire.

† The Merrimac River, in New Hampshire, is formed by the union of the Pemigewasset and the Winnipiseogee. The former rises near the Notch, in the White Mountains, and at Sanbornton, seventy miles below its source, receives the Winnipiseogee from Winnipiseogee Lake. The course of the Merrimac is then S.E. to the vicinity of Lowell, Massachusetts, when, turning to the N.E., after a winding course of fifty miles, it falls into the Atlantic, at Newburyport. ‡ Casco. See Casco Bay, p. 91.

§ Wells is a town in Maine, thirty miles S.W. from Portland, and twenty N.E. from Portsmouth.

1704. 3. [1]In the following year, 1704, four hundred and fifty French and Indians attacked Deerfield, burned[a] the village, killed more than forty of the inhabitants, and took one hundred and twelve captives, among whom were the minister, Mr. Williams, and his wife; all of whom were immediately ordered to prepare for a long march through the snow to Canada. [2]Those who were unable to keep up with the party were slain by the wayside, but most of the survivors were afterwards redeemed, and allowed to return to their homes. A little girl, a daughter of the minister, after a long residence with the Indians, became attached to them, adopted their dress and customs, and afterwards married a Mohawk chief.

a. March 11.

1. Give an account of the attack on Deerfield.

2. What became of the prisoners?

3. What was the general character of the war on the frontiers?

4. [3]During the remainder of the war, similar scenes were enacted throughout Maine and New Hampshire, and prowling bands of savages penetrated even to the interior settlements of Massachusetts. The frontier settlers abandoned the cultivation of their fields, and collected in buildings which they fortified; and if a garrison, or a family, ceased its vigilance, it was ever liable to be cut off by an enemy who disappeared the moment a blow was struck. The French often accompanied the savages in their expeditions, and made no effort to restrain their cruelties.

1707. June. 5. [4]In 1707 Massachusetts attempted the reduction of Port Royal; and a fleet conveying one thousand soldiers was sent against the place; but the assailants were twice obliged to raise the siege with considerable loss. Not disheartened by the repulse, Massachusetts spent two years more in preparation, and aided by a fleet from England, in 1710 again demanded[b] the surrender of Port Royal. The garrison, weak and dispirited, capitulated[c] after a brief resistance; the name of the place was changed to Annapolis, in honor of Queen Anne; and Acadia, or Nova Scotia, was permanently annexed to the British crown.

7. [1]A land expedition,[b] under General Nicholson, which had marched against Montreal, returned after learning the failure of the fleet. 8. [3]During the next thirty years after the close of Queen Anne's war, but few events of general interest occurred in Massachusetts. Throughout most of this period a violent controversy was carried on between the representatives of the people and three successive royal governors,[e] the latter insisting upon receiving a permanent salary, and the former refusing to comply with the demand; preferring to graduate the salary of the governor according to their views of the justice and utility of his administration. [4]A compromise was at length effected, and, instead of a permanent salary, a particular sum was annually voted.

e. Shute, Burnett, and Belcher.

II. KING GEORGE'S WAR.—1. [5]In 1744, during the reign of George II., war again broke out[f] between France and England, originating in European disputes, relating principally to the kingdom of Austria, and again involving the French and English possessions in America. This war is generally known in America as "King George's War," but, in Europe, as the "War of the Austrian Succession." 1744.

5. What is said of the origin of King George's war?

2. [6]The most important event of the war in America, was the siege and capture of Louisburg.† This

6. What is said of Louisburg?

* Utrecht is a rich and handsome city of Holland, situated on one of the mouths of the Rhine, twenty miles S.E. from Amsterdam. From the top of its lofty cathedral, 380 feet high, fifteen or sixteen cities may be seen in a clear day. The place is celebrated for the "Union of Utrecht," formed there in 1579, by which the United Provinces declared their independence of Spain;—and likewise for the treaty of 1713.

† Louisburg is on the S.E. side of the island of Cape Breton. It has an excellent harbor, of very deep water, nearly six miles in length, but frozen during the winter. After the capture of Louisburg in 1758 (see p. 186), its walls were demolished, and the materials of its buildings were carried away for the construction of Halifax, and other towns on the coast. Only a few fishermen's huts are now found within the environs

[1]William Shirley, the governor of Massachusetts, perceiving the importance of the place, and the danger to which its possession by the French subjected the British province of Nova Scotia, laid[a] before the legislature of the colony a plan for its capture.

3. [2]Although strong objections were urged, the governor's proposals were assented to; Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New Hampshire, furnished their quotas of men; New York sent a supply of artillery, and Pennsylvania of provisions. [3]Commodore Warren, then in the West Indies with an English fleet, was invited to co-operate in the enterprise, but he declined doing so without orders from England. [4]This unexpected intelligence was kept a secret, and in April, 1745, the New England forces alone, under William Pepperell commander-in-chief, and Roger Wolcott, second in command, sailed[b] for Louisburg.

* Cape Breton, called by the French Isle Royale, is a very irregularly shaped island, on the S.E. border of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and separated from Nova Scotia by the narrow channel of Canseau. It is settled mostly by Scotch Highlanders, together with a few of the ancient French Acadians. (See Map.)

in North America. [1]On the 11th of May the combined forces, numbering more than 4000 land troops, came in sight of Louisburg, and effected a landing at Gabarus Bay,* which was the first intimation the French had of their danger. 1745.

1. What is said of the landing of the troops?

5. [2]On the day after the landing a detachment of four hundred men marched by the city and approached the royal battery,[a] setting fire to the houses and stores on the way. The French, imagining that the whole army was coming upon them, spiked the guns and abandoned the battery, which was immediately seized by the New England troops. Its guns were then turned upon the town, and against the island battery at the entrance of the harbor.

a. See Map.

2. Give an account of the siege and conquest of Louisburg.

6. As it was necessary to transport the guns over a morass, where oxen and horses could not be used, they were placed on sledges constructed for the purpose, and the men with ropes, sinking to their knees in the mud, drew them safely over. Trenches were then thrown up within two hundred yards of the city,—a battery was erected on the opposite side of the harbor, at the Light House Point,—and the fleet of Warren captured[b] a French 74 gun-ship, with five hundred and sixty men, and a great quantity of military stores designed for the supply of the garrison.

b. May 29.

7. A combined attack by sea and land was planned for the 29th of June, but, on the day previous, the city, fort, and batteries, and the whole island, were surrendered. [3]This was the most important acquisition which England made during the war, and, for its recovery, and the desolation of the English colonies, a powerful naval armament under the Duke d'Anville was sent out by France in the following year. But storms, shipwrecks, and disease, dispersed and enfeebled the fleet, and blasted the hopes of the enemy.

3. What is said of the importance of this acquisition, and of the attempts of the French to recover the place?

[5]The new government was to consist of a president and council, to be appointed by the king, and a house of representatives to be chosen by the people. The Masonian controversy was finally terminated by a relinquishment, on the part of the claimants, of all except the unoccupied portions of the territory.

CONNECTICUT.*

DIVISIONS.

What are its Divisions?

I. Early Settlements.—II. Pequod War.—III. New Haven Colony.—IV. Connecticut under her own Constitution.—V. Connecticut under the Royal Charter.

I. EARLY SETTLEMENTS.—1. [1]In 1630 the soil of Connecticut was granted by the council of Plymouth to the Earl of Warwick; and, in the following year, the Earl of Warwick transferred[a] the same to Lord Say-and-Seal, Lord Brooke and others. Like all the early colonial grants, that of Connecticut was to extend westward from the Atlantic Ocean to the South Sea, or the Pacific. [2]During the same year some of the people of Plymouth, with their governor, Mr. Winslow, visited the valley of the Connecticut, by invitation of an Indian chief, who wished the English to make a settlement in that quarter.

* CONNECTICUT, the southernmost of the New England States, is from ninety to 100 miles long from E. to W., and from fifty to seventy broad, and contains an area of about 4,700 square miles. The country is, generally, uneven and hilly, and somewhat mountainous in the northwest. The valley of the Connecticut is very fertile, but in most parts of the state the soil is better adapted to grazing than to tillage. An excellent freestone, much used in building, is found in Chatham and Haddam; iron ore of a superior quality in Salisbury and Kent; and fine marble in Millford.

† Hartford, one of the capitals of Connecticut, is on the W. side of the Connecticut River, fifty miles from its mouth, by the river's course. Mill, or Little River, passes through the southern part of the city. The old Dutch fort was on the S. side of Mill River, at its entrance into the Connecticut. The Dutch maintained their position until 1654. (See Map, next page.)

[1]In the following year the Dutch sent a company to expel the English from the country, but finding them well fortified, they came to a parley, and finally returned in peace.

1634. 1. What occurred in the following year?

1635. 2. Give an account of the emigration from Massachusetts. a. See p. 76. 3. Of the settlement of Saybrook.

3. [2]In the summer of 1635, exploring parties from Massachusetts Bay colony visited the valley of the Connecticut, and, in the autumn of the same year, a company of about sixty men, women, and children, made a toilsome journey through the wilderness, and settled[a] at Windsor, Hartford, and Wethersfield.† [3]In October, the younger Winthrop, son of the governor of Massachusetts, arrived at Boston, with a commission from the proprietors of Connecticut, authorizing him to erect a fort at the mouth of the river of that name, and make the requisite preparations for planting a colony. Scarcely was the fort erected when a Dutch vessel appeared at the mouth of the river, but was not permitted to enter. In honor of Lord Say-and-Seal, and Lord Brooke, the new settlement was named Saybrook,‡ which continued a separate colony until 1644.

1636. 4. What is said of the Pequods? 5. Of their depredations upon the English?

II. PEQUOD WAR.—1. [4]During the year 1636 the Pequods, a powerful tribe of Indians residing mostly within the limits of Connecticut, began to annoy the infant colony. [5]In July, the Indians of Block Island,§ who were supposed to be in alliance with the Pequods, surprised and plundered a trading vessel and killed the captain. An expedition[a] from Massachusetts was sent against them, which invaded the territory of the Pequods, but as nothing important was accomplished, it served only to excite the Indians to greater outrages. During the winter, a number of whites were killed in the vicinity of Saybrook fort. In April following, nine persons were killed at Wethersfield, and the alarm became general throughout the plantations on the Connecticut. 1636. 1637.

2. [1]The Pequods, who had long been at enmity with the Narragansetts, now sought their alliance in a general war upon the English; but the exertions[b] of Roger Williams not only defeated their designs, but induced the Narragansetts again to renew the war against their ancient enemy. [2]Early in May, the magistrates of the three infant towns of Connecticut formally declared war against the Pequod nation, and, in ten days, a little army of eighty English, and seventy friendly Mohegan Indians, was on its way against the enemy, whose warriors were said to number more than two thousand men.

3. [3]The principal seat of the Pequods was near the mouth of Pequod River, now called the Thames,* in the eastern part of Connecticut. [4]Captain Mason sailed down the Connecticut with his forces, whence he proceeded to Narragansett Bay,[c] where several hundred of the Narragansetts joined him. He then commenced his march across the country, towards the principal Pequod fort, which stood on an eminence on the west side of Mystic† River, in the present town of Groton.‡ [5]The Pequods were ignorant of his approach, for they had seen the boats of the English pass the mouth of their river a few days before, and they believed that their enemies had fled through fear.

5. What did the Pequods think of the English?

* The Pequod, or Thames River, rises in Massachusetts, and, passing south through the eastern part of Connecticut, enters Long Island Sound, below New London. It is generally called Quinebaug from its source to Norwich. On the west it receives Shetucket, Yantic, and other small streams. It is navigable fourteen miles, to Norwich.

† Mystic River is a small river which enters L. I. Sound, six miles E. from the Thames

‡ The town of Groton lies between the Thames and the Mystic, bordering on the Sound. The Pequod fort, above mentioned, was on Pequod Hill, in the N.E. part of the town, about half a mile west from Mystic River, and eight miles N.E. from New London. A public road now crosses the hill, and a dwelling house occupies its summit 1637. 4. [1]Early in the morning of the 5th of June, the soldiers of Connecticut advanced against the fort, while their Indian allies stood aloof, astonished at the boldness of the enterprise. The barking of a dog betrayed their approach, and an Indian, rushing into the fort, gave the alarm; but scarcely were the enemy aroused from their slumbers, when Mason and his little band, having forced an entrance, commenced the work of destruction. The Indians fought bravely, but bows and arrows availed little against weapons of steel. Yet the vast superiority of numbers on the side of the enemy, for a time rendered the victory doubtful. "We must burn them!" shouted Mason, and applying a firebrand, the frail Indian cabins were soon enveloped in flame.

1. Give an account of the attack on the Pequod fort.

2. Of the destruction of the Pequods.

5. [2]The English now hastily withdrew and surrounded the place, while the savages, driven from their enclosure, became, by the light of the burning pile, a sure prey to the English muskets; or, if they attempted a sally, they were cut down by the broadsword, or they fell under the weapons of the Narragansetts, who now rushed forward to the slaughter. As the sun rose upon the scene of destruction it showed that the victory was complete. About six hundred Indians,—men, women, and children, had perished; most of them in the hideous conflagration. Of the whole number within the fort, only seven escaped, and seven were made prisoners. [3]Two of the whites were killed, and nearly twenty were wounded.

3. Loss of the English.

4. What was the farther history of the Pequods?

6. [4]The loss of their principal fort, and the destruction of the main body of their warriors, so disheartened the Pequods, that they no longer made a stand against the English. They scattered in every direction; straggling parties were hunted and shot down like deer in the woods; their Sachem, Sassacus, was murdered by the Mohawks, to whom he fled for protection; their territory was laid waste; their settlements were burned, and about two hundred survivors, the sole remnant of the Pequod nation, surrendering in despair, were enslaved by the English, or incorporated among their Indian allies. The governor and legislature were to be chosen annually by the freemen, who were required to take an oath of allegiance to the commonwealth, instead of the English monarch; and in the general court alone was vested the power of making and repealing laws. [2]At this time three separate colonies existed within the limits of the present state of Connecticut.

2. How many separate colonies then existed in Connecticut? What were they?

2. [3]The Connecticut colonies were early involved in disputes with the Dutch of New Netherlands, who claimed the soil as far eastward as the Connecticut River. The fear of an attack from that quarter, was one of the causes which, in 1643, led to the confederation of the New England colonies for mutual defence.

3. What is said of the disputes with the Dutch?

1644. [4]In 1644 Saybrook was purchased of George Fenwick, one of the proprietors, and permanently annexed to the Connecticut colony. [5]In 1650 Governor Stuyvesant visited Hartford, where a treaty was concluded, determining the line of partition between New Netherlands and Connecticut.

1651. 3. [6]In 1651 war broke out between England and Holland, and although their colonies in America had agreed to remain at peace, the governor of New Netherlands was accused of uniting with the Indians, in plotting the destruction of the English. [7]The commissioners of the United Colonies decided[a] in favor of commencing hostilities against the Dutch and Indians; but Massachusetts refused to furnish her quota of men, and thus prevented the war. [8]Connecticut and New Haven then applied to Cromwell for assistance, who promptly despatched[b] a fleet for the reduction of New Netherlands; but while the colonies were making preparations to co-operate with the naval force, the news of peace in Europe arrested the expedition.

When he appeared before the king with his petition, he presented him a favorite ring which Charles I. had given to Winthrop's grandfather. [3]The year after the grant of the Connecticut charter, Rhode Island received[b] one which extended her western limits to the Pawcatuck* River, thus including a portion of the territory granted to Connecticut, and causing a controversy between the two colonies, which continued more than sixty years.

Proceeding to Hartford, he found the assembly in session, and demanded[a] the surrender of the charter. A discussion arose, which was prolonged until evening. The charter was then brought in and laid on the table. While the discussion was proceeding, and the house was thronged with citizens, suddenly the lights were extinguished. [5]Colonel Fletcher, governor of New York, had received a commission vesting in him the command of the militia of Connecticut. Fletcher then repaired to Hartford, and ordered the militia under arms.

7. Give an account of Fletcher's visit to Hartford.

8. [7]The Hartford companies, under Captain Wadsworth, appeared, and Fletcher ordered his commission and instructions to be read to them. Upon this, Captain Wadsworth commanded the drums to be beaten. Colonel Fletcher commanded silence, but no sooner was the reading commenced a second time, than the drums, at the command of Wadsworth, were again beaten with more spirit than ever. But silence was again commanded, when Wadsworth, with great earnestness, ordered the drums to be beaten, and turning to Fletcher, said, with spirit and meaning in his looks,

"If I am interrupted again I will make the sun shine through you in a moment." Governor Fletcher made no farther attempts to read his commission, and soon judged it expedient to return to New York. 1693.

9. [1]In the year 1700, several clergymen assembled at Branford,* and each, producing a few books, laid them on the table, with these words: "I give these books for the founding of a college in this colony." Such was the beginning of Yale College, now one of the most honored institutions of learning in the land. It was first established[a] at Saybrook, and was afterwards removed[b] to New Haven. It derived its name from Elihu Yale, one of its most liberal patrons. 1700.

of preserving peace, all the settlers were required to subscribe to an agreement that they would submit to such rules, "not affecting the conscience," as should be made for the public good, by a majority of the inhabitants; and under this simple form of pure democracy, with all the powers of government in the hands of the people, the free institutions of Rhode Island had their origin. [1]The modest and liberal founder of the state reserved no political power to himself, and the territory which he had purchased of the natives he freely granted to all the inhabitants in common, reserving to himself only two small fields, which, on his first arrival, he had planted with his own hands. 1636.

1. What is said of the liberality of Mr. Williams?

5. [2]Soon after the removal of Mr. Williams to Providence, he gave to the people of Massachusetts, who had recently expelled him from their colony, the first intimation of the plot which the Pequods were forming for their destruction. [3]When the Pequods attempted to form an alliance with the Narragansetts, the magistrates of Massachusetts solicited the mediation of Mr. Williams, whose influence was great with the chiefs of the latter tribe. [4]Forgetting the injuries which he had received from those who now needed his favor, on a stormy day, alone, and in a poor canoe, he set out upon the Narragansett, and through many dangers repaired to the cabin of Canonicus.

2. Of what did he inform the people of Massachusetts?

3. What did Massachusetts solicit of him?

4. What did Mr. Williams do?

6. [5]There the Pequod ambassadors and Narragansett chiefs had already assembled in council, and three days and nights Roger Williams remained with them, in constant danger from the Pequods, whose hands, he says, seemed to be still reeking with the blood of his countrymen, and whose knives he expected nightly at his throat. But, as Mr. Williams himself writes, "God wonderfully preserved him, and helped him to break in pieces the negotiation and designs of the enemy, and to finish, by many travels and charges, the English league with the Narragansetts and Mohegans against the Pequods."

5. Give an account of Mr. Williams's embassy to the Narragansetts.

6. What was the situation of Providence during the Pequod war?

7. [6]The settlers at Providence remained unmolested during the Pequod war, as the powerful tribe of the Narragansetts completely sheltered them from the enemy. [7]Such, however, was the aid which Mr. Wil-

[1]The subject of recalling him from banishment was debated, but his principles were still viewed with distrust, and the fear of their influence overcame the sentiment of gratitude.

1. Why was he not recalled from banishment?

1638. 8. [2]In 1638 a settlement was made[a] at Portsmouth,* in the northern part of the island of Aquetneck, or Rhode Island,† by William Coddington and eighteen others, who had been driven from Massachusetts by persecution for their religious opinions. [3]In imitation of the form of government which once prevailed among the Jews, Mr. Coddington was chosen[b] judge, and three elders were elected to assist him, but in the following year the chief magistrate received the title of governor. [4]Portsmouth received considerable accessions during the first year, and in the spring of 1639, a number of the inhabitants removed to the southwestern part of the island, where they laid the foundation of Newport.‡ [5]The settlements on the island rapidly extended, and the whole received the name of the Rhode Island Plantation.

[7]Roger Williams therefore proceeded to England, and, in the following year, obtained[c] from parliament, which was then waging a civil war with the king, a free charter of incorporation, by which the two plantations were united under the same government.

† Rhode Island, so called from a fancied resemblance to the island of Rhodes in the Mediterranean, is in the southeastern part of Narragansett Bay. It is fifteen miles long, and has an average width of two and a half miles. The town of Portsmouth occupies the northern part of the island, Middletown the central portion, and Newport the southern. (See Map, p. 112.)

‡ Newport is on the S.W. side of Rhode Island, five miles from the sea, and twenty-five miles S. from Providence. The town is on a beautiful declivity, and has an excellent harbor. (See Map, p. 112.)

10. [1]In 1647 the General Assembly of the several towns met[a] at Portsmouth, and organized the government, by the choice of a president and other officers. A code of laws was also adopted, which declared the government to be a democracy, and which closed with the declaration, that "all men might walk as their consciences persuaded them, without molestation, every one in the name of his God." 1647.

1. Of the organization of the government and of the early laws of Rhode Island?

11. [2]After the restoration[b] of monarchy, and the accession of Charles II. to the throne of England, Rhode Island applied for and obtained[c] a charter from the king, in which the principles of the former parliamentary charter, and those on which the colony was founded, were embodied. The greatest toleration in matters of religion was enjoined by the charter, and the legislature again reasserted the principle. [3]It has been said that Roman Catholics were excluded from the right of voting, but no such regulation has ever been found in the laws of the colony; and the assertion that Quakers were persecuted and outlawed, is wholly erroneous.

12. [4]When Andros assumed the government of the New England colonies, Rhode Island quietly submitted[d] to his authority; but when he was imprisoned[e] at Boston, and sent to England, the people assembled[f] at Newport, and, resuming their former charter privileges, re-elected the officers whom Andros had displaced. Once more the free government of the colony was organized, and its seal was restored, with its symbol an anchor, and its motto Hope,—fit emblems of the steadfast zeal with which Rhode Island has ever cherished all her early religious freedom, and her civil rights.

NEW YORK.*

Section I.?

SEC. I.—NEW NETHERLANDS, PREVIOUS TO ITS CONQUEST BY THE ENGLISH IN 1664.

1. What is said of the first two voyages of Henry Hudson?

1. [1]During the years 1607 and 1608, Henry Hudson, an English mariner of some celebrity, and then in the employ of a company of London merchants, made two voyages to the northern coasts of America, with the hope of finding a passage, through those icy seas, to the genial climes of Southern Asia. [2]His employers being disheartened by his failure, he next entered the service of the Dutch East India Company, and in April, 1609, sailed[a] on his third voyage.

2. What did Hudson next do?

a. April 14.

3. Give an account of the voyage.

2. [3]Failing to discover a northern passage to India, he turned to the south, and explored the eastern coast, in the hope of finding an opening to the Pacific, through the continent. After proceeding south as far as the capes† of Virginia, he again turned north, examined the waters of Delaware Bay,‡ and, following the eastern coast of New Jersey, on the 13th of September he anchored his vessel within Sandy Hook.§

* NEW YORK, the most northern of the Middle States, and now the most populous in the Union, has an area of nearly 47,000 square miles. This state has a great variety of surface. Two chains of the Alleghanies pass through the eastern part of the state. The Highlands, coming from New Jersey, cross the Hudson near West Point, and soon after pass into Connecticut. The Catskill mountains, farther west, and more irregular in their outlines, cross the Mohawk, and continue under different names, along the western border of Lake Champlain. The western part of the state has generally a level surface, except in the southern tier of counties, where the western ranges of the Alleghanies terminate. The soil throughout the state is, generally, good; and along the valley of the Mohawk, and in the western part of the state, it is highly fertile.

† Capes Charles and Henry, at the entrance of Chesapeake Bay.

‡ Delaware Bay is a large arm of the sea, setting up into the land between New Jersey and Delaware; and having, at its entrance, Cape May on the north, and Cape Henlopen on the south, eighteen miles apart. Some distance within the capes the bay is thirty miles across. This bay has no safe natural harbor, but a good artificial harbor has been constructed by the general government within Cape Henlopen. It is formed by two massive stone piers, called the Delaware Breakwater.

§ Sandy Hook is a low sandy island, on the eastern coast of New Jersey, extending north from the N. Eastern extremity of Monmouth County, and separated from it by Shrewsbury Inlet. It is five miles in length, and seventeen miles S. from New York. At the northern extremity of the island is a light-house, but the accumulating sand is gradually extending the point farther north. Sandy Hook was a peninsula until 1778, when the waters of the ocean forced a passage, and cut it off from the mainland. In 1800 the inlet was closed but it was opened again in 1830, and now admits vessels through its channel.

[1]Having completed his discovery, he slowly descended the stream, and sailing[a] for Europe, reached England in the November[b] following. The king, James the First, jealous of the advantages which the Dutch might seek to derive from the discovery, forbade his return to Holland. 1609.

4. [2]In the following year, 1610, the Dutch East India Company fitted out a ship with merchandise, to traffick with the natives of the country which Hudson had explored. [3]The voyage being prosperous, the traffic was continued; and when Argall, in 1613, was returning from his excursion[c] against the French settlement of Port Royal, he found on the island of Manhattan‡ a few rude hovels, which the Dutch had erected there as a summer station for those engaged in the trade with the natives. 1610.

4. What was the result of Argall's visit?

* The entrance to New York harbor, between Long Island on the east and Staten Island on the west, is called the Narrows. It is about one mile wide, and is nine miles below the city. (See Map.)

† The city of Hudson is on the east side of Hudson River, 116 miles N. from New York, and twenty-nine miles S. from Albany.

‡ Manhattan, or New York island, lies on the east side of Hudson River, at the head of New York harbor. It is about fourteen miles in length, and has an average width of one mile and three fifths. It is separated from Long Island on the east, by a strait called the East River, which connects the harbor and Long Island Sound; and from the mainland on the east by Harlem River, a strait which connects the East River and the Hudson. The Dutch settlement on the southern part of the island, was called New Amsterdam. Here now stands the city of New York, the largest in America, and second only to London in the amount of its commerce. The city is rapidly increasing in size, although its compact parts already have a circumference of about nine miles. (See Map.)

[1]In 1615 they began a settlement at Albany,* which had been previously visited, and erected a fort which was called Fort Orange. The country in their possession was called New Netherlands.†

1. What new settlement was soon after made, and what was the country called?

2. How was the country governed,—when actually colonized,—and when was the first governor appointed?

6. [2]During several years, Directors, sent out by the East India Company, exercised authority over the little settlement of New Amsterdam on the island of Manhattan, but it was not until 1623 that the actual colonizing of the country took place, nor until 1625 that an actual governor was formally appointed. [3]In 1621 the Dutch West India Company was formed, and, in the same year, the States-General of Holland granted to it the exclusive privilege to traffick and plant colonies on the American coast, from the Straits of Magellan to the remotest north.

7. [4]In 1623 a number of settlers, duly provided with the means of subsistence, trade, and defence, were sent out under the command of Cornelius Mey, who not only visited Manhattan, but, entering Delaware Bay, and ascending the river,‡ took possession of the country, and, a few miles below Camden,§ in the present New Jersey, built Fort Nassau.‖ The fort, however, was soon after abandoned, and the worthy Captain Mey carried away with him the affectionate regrets of the natives, who long cherished his memory. * Albany, now the capital of the state of New York, is situated on the west bank of the Hudson River, 145 miles N. from New York by the river's course. It was first called by the Dutch Beaverwyck, and afterwards Williamstadt. (See Map.)

† The country from Cape Cod to the banks of the Delaware was claimed by the Dutch.

‡ The Delaware River rises in the S. Eastern part of the state of New York, west of the Catskill mountains. It forms sixty miles of the boundary line between New York and Pennsylvania, and during the remainder of its course is the boundary between New Jersey, on the one side, and Pennsylvania and Delaware on the other. It is navigable for vessels of the largest class to Philadelphia.

8. [1]In 1625 Peter Minuits arrived at Manhattan, as governor of New Netherlands, and in the same year the settlement of Brooklyn,† on Long Island,‡ was commenced. [2]The Dutch colony at this time showed a disposition to cultivate friendly relations with the English settlements in New England, and mutual courtesies were exchanged,—the Dutch cordially inviting[a] the Plymouth settlers to remove to the more fertile soil of the Connecticut, and the English advising the Dutch to secure their claim to the banks of the Hudson by a treaty with England.

[4]The pilgrims expressed the kindest wishes for the prosperity of the Dutch, but, at the same time, requested them not to send their skiffs into Narragansett Bay for beaver skins. [5]The Dutch at Manhattan were at that time little more than a company of hunters and traders, employed in the traffic of the furs of the otter and the beaver.

3. What is said of the opposing claims to the country?

4. What did the Pilgrims request of the Dutch?

5. What was the condition of the Dutch at Manhattan?

10. [6]In 1629 the West India Company, in the hope of exciting individual enterprise to colonize the country, promised, by "a charter of liberties," the grant of an extensive tract of land to each individual who should, within four years, form a settlement of fifty persons. Those who should plant colonies were to purchase the land of the Indians, and it was likewise enjoined upon them that they should, at an early period, provide for the support of a minister and a schoolmaster, that the service of God, and zeal for religion, might not be neglected.

‡ Long Island, forming a part of the state of New York, lies south of Connecticut, from which it is separated by Long Island Sound. It is 120 miles in length, and has an average width of about twelve miles. It contains an area of about 1,450 square miles, and is, therefore, larger than the entire state of Rhode Island. The north side of the island is rough and hilly,—the south low and sandy. (See Map, p. 117.)

1629. 11. [1]Under this charter, four directors of the company, distinguished by the title of patrons or patroons, appropriated to themselves some of the most valuable portions of the territory. [2]One[a] of the patroons having purchased[b] from the natives the southern half of the present state of Delaware, a colony under De Vriez was sent out, and early in 1631 a small settlement was formed near the present Lewistown.* [3]The Dutch now occupied Delaware, and the claims of New Netherlands extended over the whole country from Cape Henlopen† to Cape Cod.[c]

1632. 12. [4]After more than a year's residence in America, De Vriez returned to Holland, leaving his infant colony to the care of one Osset. The folly of the new commandant, in his treatment of the natives, soon provoked their jealousy, and on the return[d] of De Vriez, at the end of the year, he found the fort deserted. Indian vengeance had prepared an ambush, and every white man had been murdered. [5]De Vriez himself narrowly escaped the perfidy of the natives, being saved by the kind interposition of an Indian woman, who warned him of the designs of her countrymen.

1. What is said of the settlements on Long Island?

14. [2]While the English were thus encroaching upon the Dutch on the east, the southern portion of the territory claimed by the latter was seized by a new competitor. Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden, the hero of his age, and the renowned champion of the Protestant religion in Europe, had early conceived the design of planting colonies in America. Under the auspices of the Swedish monarch a commercial company was formed for this purpose as early as 1626, but the German war, in which Gustavus was soon after engaged, delayed for a time the execution of the project. [3]After the death[a] of Gustavus, which happened at the battle of Lutzen,* in 1633, his worthy minister renewed the plan of an American settlement, the execution of which he intrusted to Peter Minuits, the first governor of New Netherlands.

15. [4]Early in the year 1638, about the same time that Sir William Kieft succeeded Van Twiller in the government of New Netherlands, the Swedish colony under Minuits arrived, erected a fort, and formed a settlement on Christiana Creek,† near Wilmington,‡ within the present state of Delaware. [5]Kieft, considering this an intrusion upon his territories, sent[b] an unavailing remonstrance to the Swedes, and, as a check to their aggressions, rebuilt Fort Nassau on the eastern bank of the Delaware. 16. [2]In 1640 the Long Island and New Jersey Indians began to show symptoms of hostility towards the Dutch. Provoked by dishonest traders, and maddened by rum, they attacked the settlements on Staten Island,‡ and threatened New Amsterdam. A fruitless expedition[a] against the Delawares of New Jersey was the consequence. [3]The war continued, with various success, until 1643, when the Dutch solicited peace; and by the mediation of the wise and good Roger Williams, a brief truce was obtained.[b] But confidence could not easily be restored, for revenge still rankled in the hearts of the Indians, and in a few months they again began[c] the work of blood and desolation.

19. [1]William Kieft was succeeded[a] by Peter Stuyvesant, the most noted of the governors of New Netherlands. By his judicious treatment of the Indians he conciliated their favor, and such a change did he produce in their feelings towards the Dutch, that he was accused of endeavoring to enlist them in a general war against the English.

a. June.

1. What is said of Stuyvesant's treatment of the Indians?

20. [2]After long continued boundary disputes with the colonies of New England, Stuyvesant relinquished a portion of his claims, and concluded a provisional treaty,[b] which allowed New Netherlands to extend on Long Island as far as Oyster Bay,* and on the mainland as far as Greenwich,† near the present boundary between New York and Connecticut. [3]For the purpose of placing a barrier to the encroachments of the Swedes on the south, in 1651 Stuyvesant built Fort Casimir on the site of the present town of Newcastle,‡ within five miles of the Swedish fort at Christiana. 24. [2]In 1663 the village of Esopus, now Kingston,* was suddenly attacked[a] by the Indians, and sixty-five of the inhabitants were either killed or carried away captive. A force from New Amsterdam being sent to their assistance, the Indians were pursued to their villages; their fields were laid waste; many of their warriors were killed, and a number of the captives were released. These vigorous measures were followed by a truce in December, and a treaty of peace in the May following.[b]

3. What is said of the boundaries of New Netherlands—and of the opposition to the Dutch claims?

25. [3]Although the Dutch retained possession of the country as far south as Cape Henlopen, yet their claims were resisted, both by Lord Baltimore, the proprietor of Maryland, and by the governor of Virginia. The southern boundary of New Netherlands was never definitely settled. At the north, the subject of boundaries was still more troublesome; Massachusetts claimed an indefinite extent of territory westward, Connecticut had increased her pretensions on Long Island, and her settlements were steadily advancing towards the Hudson.

4. What discontents arose among the Dutch?

26. [4]Added to these difficulties from without, discontents had arisen among the Dutch themselves. The New England notions of popular rights began to prevail;—the people, hitherto accustomed to implicit deference to the will of their rulers, began to demand greater privileges as citizens, and a share in the government. [5]Stuyvesant resisted the demands of the people, and was sustained by the home government. [1]The prevalence of liberal principles, and the unjust exactions of an arbitrary government, had alienated the affections of the people, and when rumors of an English invasion reached them, they were already prepared to submit to English authority, in the hope of obtaining English rights. 1664.

1. To what extent had the affections of the people become alienated?

27. [2]Early in 1664, during a period of peace between England and Holland, the king of England, indifferent to the claims of the Dutch, granted[a] to his brother James, the Duke of York, the whole territory from the Connecticut River to the shores of the Delaware. [3]The duke soon fitted out a squadron under Colonel Nichols, with orders to take possession of the Dutch province. The arrival of the fleet found New Amsterdam in a defenceless state. The governor, Stuyvesant, faithful to his employers, assembled his council and proposed a defence of the place; but it was in vain that he endeavored to infuse his own spirit into his people, and it was not until after the capitulation had been agreed[b] to by the magistrates, that he reluctantly signed[c] it.

28. [4]The fall of the capital, which now received the name of New York, was followed by the surrender[d] of the settlement at Fort Orange, which received the name of Albany, and by the general submission of the province, with its subordinate settlements on the Delaware.[e] [5]The government of England was acknowledged over the whole, early in October, 1664.

4. What places were included in the surrender?

d. Oct. 4.

5. When was the government of England acknowledged over the whole?

29. [6]Thus, while England and Holland were at peace, by an act of the most flagrant injustice, the Dutch dominion in America was overthrown after an existence of little more than half a century. [7]Previous to the surrender, the Duke of York had conveyed[f] to Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret all that portion of New Netherlands which now forms the state of New Jersey, over which a separate government was established under its proprietors. [8]The settlements on the Delaware, subsequently called "The Territories," were connected with the province of New York until their purchase[g] by William Penn in 1682, when they were joined to the government of Pennsylvania.

Of what does Section II. treat?

NEW YORK, FROM THE CONQUEST OF NEW NETHERLANDS IN 1664, UNTIL THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR IN 1754. (DELAWARE* INCLUDED UNTIL 1682.)

1. What changes took place after the surrender of New Netherlands? a. 1623.

1. [1]On the surrender of New Netherlands, the new name of its capital was extended to the whole territory embraced under the government of the Duke of York. Long Island, which had been previously granted[a] to the Earl of Sterling, was now, in total disregard of the claims of Connecticut, purchased by the duke, and has since remained a part of New York. "The Territories," comprising the present Delaware, remained under the jurisdiction of New York, and were ruled by deputies appointed by the governors of the latter.

2. Give an account of the administration of Governor Nichols.

2. [2]Colonel Nichols, the first English governor of the province, exercised both executive and legislative powers, but no rights of representation were conceded to the people. The Dutch titles to land were held to be invalid, and the fees exacted for their renewal were a source of much profit to the new governor. The people were disappointed in not obtaining a representative government, yet it must be admitted that the governor, considering his arbitrary powers, ruled with much moderation.

1667. 1670. 3. Of the administration of Lovelace.

3. [3]Under Lovelace, the successor of Nichols, the arbitrary system of the new government was more fully developed. The people protested against being taxed for the support of a government in which they had no voice, and when their proceedings were transmitted to the governor, they were declared "scandalous, illegal, and seditious," and were ordered to be burned by the common hangman. Lovelace declared that, to keep the people in order, such taxes must be laid upon them as should give them time to think of nothing but how to discharge them.

* DELAWARE, one of the Middle States, and, next to Rhode Island, the smallest in the Union, contains an area of but little more than 2,000 square miles. The southern part of the state is level and sandy; the northern moderately hilly and rough; while the western border contains an elevated table land, dividing the waters which fall into the Chesapeake from those which flow into Delaware Bay.

4. [1]A war having broken out between England and Holland in 1672, in the following year the latter despatched a small squadron to destroy the commerce of the English colonies. Arriving at New York during the absence of the governor, the city was surrendered[a] by the traitorous and cowardly Manning, without any attempt at defence. New Jersey made no resistance, and the settlements on the Delaware followed the example. The name New Netherlands was again revived, but it was of short continuance. In February of the following year peace was concluded[b] between the contending powers, and early in November New Netherlands was again surrendered to the English.

5. [2]Doubts having been raised as to the validity of the Duke of York's title, because it had been granted while the Dutch were in full and peaceful possession of the country, and because the country had since been reconquered by them, the duke thought it prudent to obtain[c] from his brother, the king, a new patent, confirming the former grant. [3]The office of governor was conferred[d] on Edmund Andros, who afterwards became distinguished as the tyrant of New England.

2. Why did the Duke of York obtain a new patent to the country?

c. July 9.

3. Who was appointed governor?

d. July 11.

6. [4]His government was arbitrary; no representation was allowed the people, and taxes were levied without their consent. [5]As the Duke of York claimed the country as far east as the Connecticut River, in the following summer Andros proceeded to Saybrook, and attempted[e] to enforce the claim; but the spirited resistance of the people compelled him to return without accomplishing his object.

5. What is said of his attempt to enforce the duke's claim to Connecticut?

7. [6]Andros likewise attempted[f] to extend his jurisdiction over New Jersey, claiming it as a dependency of New York, although it had previously been regranted[g] by the duke to Berkeley and Carteret. [7]In 1682 the "Territories," now forming the state of Delaware, were granted[h] by the Duke of York to William Penn, from which time until the Revolution they were united with Pennsylvania, or remained under the jurisdiction of her governors.

The assembly, with the approval of the governor, established[a] a "CHARTER OF LIBERTIES," which conceded to the people many important rights which they had not previously enjoyed.

1. Under what circumstances was the "Charter of Liberties" established?
a. Nov. 9.

2. What were the provisions of the Charter?

9. [2]The charter declared that 'supreme legislative power should for ever reside in the governor, council, and people, met in general assembly;—that every freeholder and freeman might vote for representatives without restraint,—that no freeman should suffer, but by judgment of his peers, and that all trials should be by a jury of twelve men,—that no tax should be assessed, on any pretence whatever, but by the consent of the assembly,—that no seaman or soldier should be quartered on the inhabitants against their will,—that no martial law should exist,—and that no person professing faith in God, by Jesus Christ, should at any time, be in any way disquieted or questioned for any difference of opinion in matters of religion.' [3]In 1684 the governors of New York and Virginia met the deputies of the Five Nations at Albany, and renewed[b] with them a treaty of peace.

1685. 10. [4]On the accession[c] of the Duke of York to the throne of England, with the title of James II., the hopes which the people entertained, of a permanent representative government, were, in a measure, defeated. A direct tax was decreed,—printing presses, the dread of tyrants, were forbidden in the province; and many arbitrary exactions were imposed on the people.

4. What arbitrary measures followed the accession of James II.?

11. [5]It was the evident intention of the king to introduce the Catholic religion into the province, and most of the officers appointed by him were of that faith. [6]Among other modes of introducing popery, James instructed Governor Dongan to favor the introduction of Catholic priests, by the French, among the Iroquois; but Dongan, although a Catholic, clearly seeing the ambitious designs of the French for extending their influence over the Indian tribes, resisted the measure. [7]The Iroquois remained attached to the English, and a. In 1684 and 1687.

12. [1]Dongan was succeeded by Francis Nicholson, the lieutenant-general of Andros. Andros had been previously[b] appointed governor of New England, and his authority was now extended over the province of New York. [2]The discontents of the people had been gradually increasing since the conquest from the Dutch, and when, in 1689, news arrived of the accession of William and Mary to the throne of England, the people joyfully received the intelligence, and rose in open rebellion to the existing government. 1688.

13. [3]One Jacob Leisler, a captain of the militia, aided by several hundred men in arms, with the general approbation of the citizens took possession[c] of the fort at New York, in the name of William and Mary; while Nicholson, after having vainly endeavored to counteract the movements of the people, secretly went on board a ship and sailed for England. [4]The magistrates of the city, however, being opposed to the assumption of Leisler, repaired to Albany, where the authority of Leisler was denied, although, in both places, the government was administered in the name of William and Mary.

3. Give an account of the proceedings of Leisler and of Nicholson.

c. June.

4. What did the magistrates of the city do?

14. [5]Milborne, the son-in-law of Leisler, was sent to Albany to demand the surrender of the fort; but, meeting with opposition, he returned without accomplishing his object. [6]In December, letters arrived from the king, empowering Nicholson, or whoever administered the government in his absence, to take the chief command of the province. Leisler regarded the letter as addressed to himself, and assumed the title and authority of lieutenant-governor.

1. What is said of the northern colonies, and of the enterprise against Montreal and Quebec?

16. [1]The northern colonies, roused by the atrocities of the French and their savage allies at the commencement of King William's war, resolved to attack the enemy in turn. After the successful expedition[a] of Sir William Phipps against Port Royal; New York, Massachusetts, and Connecticut, united for the reduction of Montreal and Quebec. The naval armament sent against Quebec was wholly unsuccessful.[b] The land expedition, planned by Leisler, and placed under the command of General Winthrop of Connecticut, proceeded as far as Wood Creek,* near the head of Lake Champlain,† when sickness, the want of provisions, and dissensions among the officers, compelled a return.

2. What passed between Leisler and Ingoldsby?

17. [2]Early in 1691 Richard Ingoldsby arrived at New York, and announced the appointment of Colonel Sloughter, as governor of the province. He bore a commission as captain, and without producing any order from the king, or from Sloughter, haughtily demanded[c] of Leisler the surrender of the fort. With this demand Leisler refused to comply. He protested against the lawless proceedings of Ingoldsby, but declared his readiness to yield the government to Sloughter on his arrival.

d. March 29.

3. When did Sloughter arrive, and what followed?

18. [3]At length, in March, Sloughter himself arrived,[d] and Leisler immediately sent messengers to receive his orders. The messengers were detained, and Ingoldsby was twice sent to the fort with a verbal commission to demand its surrender.

4. Why did Leisler at first hesitate to yield, and what was the result?

[4]Leisler at first hesitated to yield to his inveterate enemy, preferring to deliver the fort into the hands of Sloughter himself; but, as his messengers and his letters to Sloughter were unheeded, the next day he personally surrendered the fort, and,

19. [1]Leisler and Milborne were soon after tried on the charge of being rebels and traitors, and were condemned to death, but Sloughter hesitated to put the sentence in execution. At length the enemies of the condemned, when no other measures could prevail with the governor, invited him to a feast, and, when his reason was drowned in wine, persuaded him to sign the death warrant. 20. [3]In June, Sloughter met a council of the Iroquois, or Five Nations, at Albany, and renewed the treaties which had formerly been in force. Soon after, having returned to New York, he ended, by a sudden death,[b] a short, weak, and turbulent administration. 21. [5]Benjamin Fletcher, the next governor of the province, was a man of strong passions, and of moderate abilities; but he had the prudence to follow the counsels of Schuyler, in his intercourse with the Indians. 6. How was New York screened from the attacks of the French?

22. [7]Fletcher having been authorized by the crown to take the command of the militia of Connecticut, he proceeded to Hartford to execute his commission; but the people resisted,[c] and he was forced to return without accomplishing his object. [8]He labored with great zeal, in endeavoring to establish the English church; but the people demanded toleration, and the assembly resolutely opposed the pretensions of the governor. [9]In 1696 the French, under Frontenac, with a large force, made an unsuccessful invasion[d] of the territory of the Iroquois. [1]In 1698, the Earl of Bellamont, an Irish peer a man of energy and integrity, succeeded[a] Fletcher in the administration of the government of New York, and, in the following year, New Hampshire and Massachusetts were added to his jurisdiction. [2]Piracy had at this time increased to an alarming extent, infesting every sea from America to China; and Bellamont had been particularly instructed to put an end to this evil on the American coast.

24. [3]For this purpose, before his departure for America, in connexion with several persons of distinction he had equipped a vessel, the command of which was given to William Kidd. [4]Kidd, himself, however, soon after turned pirate, and became the terror of the seas; but, at length, appearing publicly at Boston, he was arrested,[b] and sent to England, where he was tried and executed.[c] [5]Bellamont and his partners were charged with abetting Kidd in his piracies, and sharing the plunder, but after an examination in the House of Commons, nothing could be found to criminate them.

27. [1]As the history of the successive administrations of the governors of New York, from this period until the time of the French and Indian war, would possess little interest for the general reader, a few of the more important events only will be mentioned.

1. What is remarked of the following administrations?

28. [2]Queen Anne's war having broken out in 1702, the northern colonies, in 1709, made extensive preparations for an attack on Canada. While the New England colonies were preparing a naval armament to co-operate with one expected from England, New York and New Jersey raised a force of eighteen hundred men to march against Montreal by way of Lake Champlain. This force proceeded as far as Wood Creek,[a] when, learning that the armament promised from England had been sent to Portugal, the expedition was abandoned. 1709.

2. What is said of the preparations for invading Canada, and why was the enterprise abandoned?

a. N. p. 130.

29. [3]Soon after, the project was renewed, and a large fleet under the command of Sir Hovenden Walker being sent from England to co-operate with the colonial forces, an expedition of four thousand men from New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, commenced its march towards Canada. The fleet being shattered[b] by a storm, and returning to England, the land expedition, after proceeding as far as Lake George,* was likewise compelled to return. 1711.

3. Give an account of the second attempt.

b. Sept. 2, 3 See p. 97.

30. [4]The debt incurred by New York, in these expeditions, remained a heavy burden upon her resources for many years. * Lake George, called by the French Lac Sacrament, on account of the purity of its waters, and now frequently called the Horicon, lies mostly between Washington and Warren Counties, near the southern extremity of Lake Champlain, with which its outlet communicates. It is a beautiful sheet of water, 230 feet above the Hudson, and surrounded by high hills; it is thirty-three miles in length, and from two to three in width, and is interspersed with numerous islands. Lake George was long conspicuous in the early wars of the country, and several memorable battles were fought on its borders. (See Map, p. 181.)

1713. of King George's war,[a] relieved the English colonies, during a period of forty years, from the depredations of the French and their Indian allies. [1]In 1722 the governors of New York, Virginia, and Pennsylvania, met the deputies of the Iroquois at Albany, for the purpose of confirming treaties, and transacting other business. [2]During the same year Governor Burnett established a trading-house at Oswego,* on the southeastern shore of Lake Ontario; and in 1727 a fort was completed at the same place. [3]The primary object of this frontier establishment was to secure the favor of the Indians, by a direct trade with them, which had before been engrossed by the French.

1. What meeting was held at Albany in 1722?

2. What establishment was made at Oswego?

3. For what object?

32. [4]The French, at this time, had evidently formed the scheme of confining the English to the territory east of the Alleghanies, by erecting a line of forts and trading-houses on the western waters, and by securing the influence of the western tribes. [5]With this view, in 1726 they renewed the fortress at Niagara,† which gave them control over the commerce of the remote interior. Five years later they established a garrison on the eastern shore of Lake Champlain, but soon after removed it to Crown Point,‡ on the western shore. The latter defended the usual route to Canada, and gave security to Montreal. [6]With the exception of the English fortress at Oswego, the French had possession of the entire country watered by the St. Lawrence and its tributaries, while their claims to Louisiana, on the west, embraced the whole valley of the Mississippi.

34. [1]The people applauded their conduct, and, to Andrew Hamilton of Philadelphia, one of the defenders of the accused, the magistrates of the city of New York presented an elegant gold box, for his learned and generous defence of the rights of mankind and the liberty of the press. [2]This important trial shows the prevailing liberal sentiments of the people at that period, and may be regarded as one of the early germs of American freedom.

1. How did the people and magistrates regard the conduct of the jury?
2. What did this trial show, and how may its result be regarded?

35. [3]In 1741 a supposed negro plot occasioned great excitement in the city of New York. There were then many slaves in the province, against whom suspicion was first directed by the robbery of a dwelling house, and by the frequent occurrence of fires evidently caused by design. The magistrates of the city having offered rewards, pardon, and freedom, to any slave that would testify against incendiaries and conspirators, some abandoned females were induced to declare that the negroes had combined to burn the city and make one of their number governor.

3. What is related of the negro plot of 1741?

36. [4]There was soon no want of witnesses; the number of the accused increased rapidly; and even white men were designated as concerned in the plot. Before the excitement was over more than thirty persons were executed;—several of these were burned at the stake; and many were transported to foreign parts.

4. What was the result of the excitement?

37. [5]When all apprehensions of danger had subsided, and men began to reflect upon the madness of the project itself, and the base character of most of the witnesses, the reality of the plot began to be doubted; and the people looked back with horror upon the numerous and cruel punishments that had been inflicted.

39. [1]The subsequent history of New York, previous to the commencement of the French and Indian war, contains few events of importance. In 1745, during King George's war, the savages in alliance with France made some incursions into the territory north of Albany, and a few villages were deserted[a] on their approach. The province made some preparations to join the eastern colonies in an expedition against Canada, but in 1748 a treaty of peace was concluded[b] between the contending powers, and New York again enjoyed a short interval of repose, soon to be disturbed by a conflict more sanguinary than any which had preceded. A connected history of that contest, in which all the colonies acted in concert, is given in the "French and Indian War."[c]

NEW JERSEY.*

Of what does Chapter VII. treat?

2. In what was New Jersey at first included?

3. Give an account of the early settlements.

1. [2]The territory embraced in the present state of New Jersey was included in the Dutch province of New Netherlands; and the few events connected with its history, previous to the conquest by the English in 1664, belong to that province. [3]In 1623 Fort Nassau was built on the eastern bank of the Delaware, but was soon after deserted. Probably a few years before this the Dutch began to form settlements at Bergen, and other places west of the Hudson, in the vicinity of New York; but the first colonizing of the province dates, more properly, from the settlement of Elizabethtown† in 1664.

* NEW JERSEY, one of the Middle States, bordering on the Atlantic, and lying south of New York, and east of Pennsylvania and Delaware, contains an area of about 8,000 square miles. The northern part of the state is mountainous, the middle is diversified by hills and valleys, and is well adapted to grazing and to most kinds of grain, while the southern part is level and sandy, and, to a great extent, barren; the natural growth of the soil being chiefly shrub oaks and yellow pines.

† Elizabethtown is situated on Elizabethtown Creek, two and a half miles from its

2. [1]Soon after the grant of New Netherlands to the Duke of York, and previous to the surrender, the duke conveyed[a] that portion of the territory which is bounded on the east, south, and west, respectively, by the Hudson, the sea, and the Delaware, and north by the 41st degree and 40th minute of latitude, to Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret, who were already proprietors of Carolina. [2]This tract was called New Jersey, in compliment to Carteret, who had been governor of the island of Jersey,* and had defended it for the king during the civil war.[b] 1664.

3. [3]To invite settlers to the country, the proprietors soon published[c] a liberal constitution for the colony, promising freedom from taxation, except by the act of the colonial assembly, and securing equal privileges, and liberty of conscience to all. [4]In 1665 Philip Carteret, the first governor, arrived,[d] and established himself at Elizabethtown, recently settled by emigrants from Long Island, and which became the first capital of the infant colony. 1665.

4. Who was the first governor, and what was the capital of the province?

4. [5]New York and New England furnished most of the early settlers, who were attracted by the salubrity of the climate, and the liberal institutions which the inhabitants were to enjoy. [6]Fearing little from the neighboring Indians, whose strength had been broken by long hostilities with the Dutch, and guarded by the Five Nations and New York against the approaches of the French and their savage allies, the colonists of New Jersey, enjoying a happy security, escaped the dangers and privations which had afflicted the inhabitants of most of the other provinces.

5. What is said of the early settlers?

6. Of the causes of the security which they enjoyed?

5. [7]After a few years of quiet, domestic disputes began to disturb the repose of the colony. The proprietors, by their constitution, had required the payment, after 1670, of a penny or half penny an acre for the use of land; but when the day of payment arrived, the demand of the tribute met with general op- 1670.

[1]A weak and dissolute son of Sir George Carteret was induced to assume[a] the government, and after two years of disputes and confusion, the established authority was set at defiance by open insurrection, and the governor was compelled to return[b] to England.

1673. 6. [2]In the following year, during a war with Holland, the Dutch regained[c] all their former possessions, including New Jersey, but restored them to the English in 1674. [3]After this event, the Duke of York obtained[d] a second charter, confirming the former grant; and, in disregard of the rights of Berkeley and Carteret, appointed[e] Andros governor over the whole re-united province. On the application of Carteret, however, the duke consented to restore New Jersey; but he afterwards endeavored[f] to avoid the full performance of his engagement, by pretending that he had reserved certain rights of sovereignty over the country, which Andros seized every opportunity of asserting.

1674. 7. [4]In 1674 Lord Berkeley sold[g] his share of New Jersey to John Fenwick, in trust for Edward Byllinge and his assignees. [5]In the following year Philip Carteret returned to New Jersey, and resumed the government; but the arbitrary proceedings of Andros long continued to disquiet the colony. Carteret, attempting to establish a direct trade between England and New Jersey, was warmly opposed by Andros, who claimed, for the duke his master, the right of rendering New Jersey tributary to New York, and even went so far as to arrest Governor Carteret and convey him prisoner to New York.

with their peculiar religious principles. [1]The division* was accomplished[a] without difficulty; Carteret receiving the eastern portion of the province, which was called EAST JERSEY; and the assignees of Byllinge the western portion, which they named WEST JERSEY. [2]The western proprietors then gave[b] the settlers a free constitution, under the title of "Concessions," similar to that given by Berkeley and Carteret, granting all the important privileges of civil and religious liberty.

9. [3]The authors of the "Constitution" accompanied its publication with a special recommendation of the province to the members of their own religious fraternity, and in 1677 upwards of four hundred Quakers came over and settled in West New Jersey. [4]The settlers being unexpectedly called upon by Andros to acknowledge the sovereignty of the Duke of York, and submit to taxation, they remonstrated earnestly with the duke, and the question was finally referred to the eminent jurist, Sir William Jones, for his decision.

3. How were settlers invited to the colony, and with what result?

10. [5]The result was a decision against the pretensions of the duke, who immediately relinquished all claims to the territory and the government. Soon after, he made a similar release in favor of the representatives of Carteret, in East Jersey, and the whole province thus became independent of foreign jurisdiction.

5. What was the result,—and what the conduct of the duke?

11. [6]In 1681 the governor of West Jersey convoked the first representative assembly, which enacted[c] several important laws for protecting property, punishing crimes, establishing the rights of the people, and defining the powers of rulers. [7]The most remarkable feature in the new laws was a provision, that, in all criminal cases except treason, murder, and theft, the person aggrieved should have power to pardon the offender.

8. What disposal was made of East Jersey, and what is said of Barclay's administration?

* According to the terms of the deed, the dividing line was to run from the most southerly point of the east side of Little Egg Harbor, to the N. Western extremity of New Jersey; which was declared to be a point on the Delaware River in latitude 41° 40′, which is 18′ 23″ farther north than the present N. Western extremity of the state. Several partial attempts were made, at different times, to run the line, and much controversy arose from the disputes which these attempts occasioned.

1685. 13. [1]On the accession of the Duke of York to the throne, with the title of James II.,—disregarding his previous engagements, and having formed the design of annulling all the charters of the American colonies, he caused writs to be issued against both the Jerseys and in 1688 the whole province was placed under the jurisdiction of Andros, who had already[d] become the king's governor of New York and New England.

1688–9. 14. [2]The revolution in England terminated the authority of Andros, and from June, 1689, to August, 1692, no regular government existed in New Jersey, and during the following ten years the whole province remained in an unsettled condition. [3]For a time New York attempted to exert her authority over New Jersey, and at length the disagreements between the various proprietors and their respective adherents occasioned so much confusion, that the people found it difficult to ascertain in whom the government was legally vested. [4]At length the proprietors, finding that their conflicting claims tended only to disturb the peace of their territories, and lessen their profits as owners of the soil, made a surrender[e] of their powers of government to the crown; and in 1702 New Jersey became a royal province, and was united[f] to New York, under the government of Lord Cornbury.

6. What is said of Lord Cornbury's administration?

7. What formed the constitution of New Jersey?

15. [5]From this period until 1738 the province remained under the governors of New York, but with a distinct legislative assembly. [6]The administration[g] of Lord Cornbury, consisting of little more than a history of his contentions with the assemblies of the province, fully developed the partiality, frauds, and tyranny of the governor, and served to awaken in the people a vigorous and vigilant spirit of liberty. [7]The commission and instructions of Cornbury formed the constitution of New Jersey until the period when it ceased to be a British province. 1728.

16. [1]In 1728 the assembly petitioned the king to separate the province from New York; but the petition was disregarded until 1738, when, through the influence of Lewis Morris, the application was granted, and Mr. Morris himself received the first commission as royal governor over the separate province of New Jersey. [2]After this period we meet with no events of importance in the history of New Jersey until the Revolution.

Of what does Chapter VIII. treat?

MARYLAND.*

1. [3]The second charter given[a] to the London Company, embraced, within the limits of Virginia, all the territory which now forms the state of Maryland. [4]The country near the head of the Chesapeake was early explored[b] by the Virginians, and a profitable trade in furs was established with the Indians. [5]In 1631 William Clayborne, a man of resolute and enterprising spirit, who had first been sent out as a surveyor, by the London Company, and who subsequently was appointed a member of the council, and secretary of the colony, obtained[c] a royal license to traffick with the Indians.

6. What settlements did Clayborne form?

* MARYLAND, the most southern of the Middle States, is very irregular in its outline, and contains an area of about 11,000 square miles. The Chesapeake Bay runs nearly through the state from N. to S., dividing it into two parts, called the Eastern Shore and the Western Shore. The land on the eastern shore is generally level and low, and, in many places, is covered with stagnant waters; yet the soil possesses considerable fertility. The country on the western shore, below the falls of the rivers, is similar to that on the eastern, but above the falls the country becomes gradually uneven and hilly, and in the western part of the state is mountainous. Iron ore is found in various parts of the state, and extensive beds of coal between the mountains in the western part.

[1]Clayborne had obtained a monopoly of the fur trade, and Virginia aimed at extending her jurisdiction over the large tract of unoccupied territory lying between her borders and those of the Dutch in New Netherlands.

1. What is said of the claims of Virginia?

2. How were her claims defeated?

[2]But before the settlements of Clayborne could be completed, and the claim of Virginia confirmed, a new province was formed within her limits, and a government established on a plan as extraordinary as its results were benevolent.

3. What is related of Lord Baltimore?

3. [3]As early as 1621, Sir George Calvert, whose title was Lord Baltimore, a Roman Catholic nobleman, influenced by a desire of opening in America a refuge for Catholics, who were then persecuted in England, had established a Catholic colony in Newfoundland, and had freely expended his estate in advancing its interests. [4]But the rugged soil, the unfavorable climate, and the frequent annoyances from the hostile French, soon destroyed all hopes of a flourishing colony. [5]He next visited[a] Virginia, in whose mild and fertile regions he hoped to find for his followers a peaceful and quiet asylum. The Virginians, however, received him with marked intolerance, and he soon found that, even here, he could not enjoy his religious opinions in peace.

[6]He next turned his attention to the unoccupied country beyond the Potomac; and as the dissolution of the London Company had restored to the monarch his prerogative over the soil, Calvert, a favorite with the royal family, found no difficulty in obtaining a charter for domains in that happy clime. [7]The charter was probably drawn by the hand of Lord Baltimore himself, but as he died[b] before it received the royal seal, the same was made out to his son Cecil. [8]The terri-

It is twenty-five miles S. from Baltimore, and thirty-three N.E. from Washington. tory thus granted,[a] extending north to the 40th degree, the latitude of Philadelphia, was now erected into a separate province, and, in honor of Henrietta Maria, daughter of Henry IV. king of France, and wife of the English monarch, was named MARYLAND. 1632.

a. June 30.

5. [1]The charter granted to Lord Baltimore, unlike any which had hitherto passed the royal seal, secured to the emigrants equality in religious rights and civil freedom, and an independent share in the legislation of the province. [2]The laws of the colony were to be established with the advice and approbation of a majority of the freemen, or their deputies; and although Christianity was made the law of the land, yet no preferences were given to any sect or party.

1. What were the provisions of the charter?

2. How were the laws to be established?

6. [3]Maryland was also most carefully removed from all dependence upon the crown; the proprietor was left free and uncontrolled in his appointments to office; and it was farther expressly stipulated, that no tax whatsoever should ever be imposed by the crown upon the inhabitants of the province.

3. What farther liberties were granted to the people and the proprietor?

7. [4]Under this liberal charter, Cecil Calvert, the son, who had succeeded to the honors and fortunes of his father, found no difficulty in enlisting a sufficient number of emigrants to form a respectable colony; nor was it long before gentlemen of birth and fortune were found ready to join in the enterprise. [5]Lord Baltimore himself, having abandoned his original purpose of conducting the emigrants in person, appointed his brother, Leonard Calvert, to act as his lieutenant. 1633.

3. Describe the happy situation of the colony.

10. [2]The wise policy of Calvert, in paying the Indians for their lands, and in treating them with liberality and kindness, secured their confidence and friendship. [3]The English obtained from the forests abundance of game, and as they had come into possession of lands already cultivated, they looked forward with confidence to abundant harvests. No sufferings were endured,—no fears of want were excited,—and under the fostering care of its liberal proprietor the colony rapidly advanced in wealth and population.

1635. 11. [4]Early in 1635 the first legislative assembly of the province was convened[b] at St. Mary's, but as the records have been lost,[c] little is known of its proceedings. [5]Notwithstanding the pleasant auspices under which the colony commenced, it did not long remain wholly exempt from intestine troubles. Clayborne had, from the first, refused to submit to the authority of Lord Baltimore, and, acquiring confidence in his increasing strength, he resolved to maintain his possessions by force of arms. A bloody skirmish occurred[d] on one of the rivers‡ of Maryland, and several lives were lost, but Clayborne's men were defeated and taken prisoners.

In England, Clayborne applied to the king to gain redress for his alleged wrongs; but after a full hearing it was decided that the charter of Lord Baltimore was valid against the earlier license of Clayborne, and thus the claims of the proprietor were fully confirmed. 1638.

13. [1]At first the people of Maryland convened in general assembly for passing laws,—each freeman being entitled to a vote; but in 1639 the more convenient form of a representative government was established,—the people being allowed to send as many delegates to the general assembly as they should think proper. [2]At the same time a declaration of rights was adopted; the powers of the proprietor were defined; and all the liberties enjoyed by English subjects at home, were confirmed to the people of Maryland. 1639.

3. What is said of the Indian war which soon followed?

15. [4]Early in 1645 Clayborne returned to Maryland, and, having succeeded in creating a rebellion, compelled the governor to withdraw into Virginia for protection. [5]The vacant government was immediately seized by the insurgents, who distinguished the period of their dominion by disorder and misrule; and notwithstanding the most vigorous exertions of the governor, the revolt was not suppressed until August of the following year. 1645.

16. [6]Although religious toleration had been declared, by the proprietor, one of the fundamental principles of the social union over which he presided, yet the assembly, in order to give the principle the sanction of their authority, proceeded to incorporate it in the laws of the province. It was enacted[a] that no person, professing to believe in Jesus Christ, should be molested in respect of his religion, or the free exercise thereof; and that any one, who should reproach his neighbor with opprobrious names of religious distinction, should pay a fine to the person insulted. 1649.

[5]The commissioners appearing in Maryland, Stone, the lieutenant of Lord Baltimore, was at first removed[c] from his office, but was soon after restored.[d] In 1654, upon the dissolution of the Long Parliament, from which the commissioners had received their authority, Stone restored the full powers of the proprietor; but the commissioners, then in Virginia, again entered the province, and compelled Stone to surrender his commission and the government into their hands.[e]

[4]Soon after the death[e] of Cromwell, the Protector of England, the Assembly of Maryland, fearing a renewal of the dissensions which had long distracted the province, and seeing no security but in asserting the power of the people, dissolved the upper house, consisting of the governor and his council, and assumed[f] to itself the whole legislative power of the state.

1. What events in Maryland followed the revolution in England?

25. [1]At the time of the revolution in England, the repose of Maryland was again disturbed. The deputies of the proprietor having hesitated to proclaim the new sovereigns, and a rumor having gained prevalence that the magistrates and the Catholics had formed a league with the Indians for the massacre of all the Protestants in the province, an armed association was formed for asserting the right of King William, and for the defence of the Protestant faith.

2. What was then done by the Catholics?

3. How was the government administered until 1691, and what change then took place?

26. [2]The Catholics at first endeavored to oppose, by force, the designs of the association; but they at length surrendered the powers of government by capitulation. [3]A convention of the associates then assumed the government, which they administered until 1691, when the king, by an arbitrary enactment,[a] deprived Lord Baltimore of his political rights as proprietor, and constituted Maryland a royal government.

27. [4]In the following year Sir Lionel Copley arrived as royal governor,—the principles of the proprietary administration were subverted,—religious toleration was abolished,—and the Church of England was established as the religion of the state, and was supported by taxation.

5. What is said of the remaining history of Maryland, previous to the revolution?

28. [5]After an interval of more than twenty years, the legal proprietor, in the person of the infant heir of Lord Baltimore, was restored[b] to his rights, and Maryland again became a proprietary government, under which it remained until the Revolution. Few events of interest mark its subsequent history, until, as an independent state, it adopted a constitution, when the claims of the proprietor to jurisdiction and property were finally rejected.

CHAPTER IX.

PENNSYLVANIA.*

Of what does Chapter IX. treat?

1. [1]As early as 1643 the Swedes, who had previously settled[a] near Wilmington, in Delaware, erected a fort on the island of Tinicum, a few miles below Philadelphia; and here the Swedish governor, John Printz, established his residence. Settlements clustered along the western bank of the Delaware, and Pennsylvania was thus colonized by Swedes, nearly forty years before the grant of the territory to William Penn.

1. Give an account of the early Swedish settlements in Pennsylvania.

a. See p. 121.

2. [2]In 1681, William Penn, son of Admiral Penn, a member of the society of Friends, obtained[b] of Charles II. a grant of all the lands embraced in the present state of Pennsylvania. [3]This grant was given, as expressed in the charter, in consideration of the desire of Penn to enlarge the boundaries of the British empire, and reduce the natives, by just and gentle treatment, to the love of civil society and the Christian religion; and, in addition, as a recompense for unrequited services rendered by his father to the British nation.

b. March 14.

3. In consideration of what was this grant given?

3. [4]The enlarged and liberal views of Penn, however, embraced objects of even more extended benevolence than those expressed in the royal charter. His noble aim was to open, in the New World, an asylum where civil and religious liberty should be enjoyed; and where, under the benign influence of the principles of PEACE, those of every sect, color, and clime, might dwell together in unity and love. [5]As Pennsylvania included the principal settlements of the Swedes, Penn issued[c] a proclamation to the inhabitants, in which he assured them of his ardent desire for their welfare, and prom-

* PENNSYLVANIA contains an area of about 46,000 square miles. The central part of the state is covered by the numerous ridges of the Alleghanies, running N.E. and S.W., but on both sides of the mountains the country is either level or moderately hilly, and the soil is generally excellent. Iron ore is widely disseminated in Pennsylvania, and the coal regions are very extensive. The bituminous, or soft coal, is found in inexhaustible quantities west of the Alleghanies, and anthracite or hard coal on the east, particularly between the Blue Ridge and the N. branch of the Susquehanna. The principal coal-field is sixty-five miles in length, with an average breadth of about five miles.

1. How were settlers invited, and what is said of the first emigration?

4. [1]Penn now published a flattering account of the province, and an invitation to purchasers, and during the same year three ships, with emigrants, mostly Quakers, sailed[a] for Pennsylvania. [2]In the first came William Markham, agent of the proprietor, and deputy-governor, who was instructed to govern in harmony with law,—to confer with the Indians respecting their lands,—and to conclude with them a league of peace. [3]In the same year Penn addressed[b] a letter to the natives, declaring himself and them responsible to the same God, who had written his law in the hearts of all, and assuring them of his "great love and regard for them," and his "resolution to live justly, peaceably, and friendly" with them.

[8]In accordance with his directions a friendly correspondence had been opened with the neighboring tribes of Indians, by the deputy-governor Markham; they had assented to the form of a treaty, and they were now invited to a conference for the purpose of giving it their ratification. 7. [1]Taking his station beneath a spreading elm, Penn addressed the Indians through the medium of an interpreter. He told them that the Great Spirit knew with what sincerity he and his people desired to live in friendship with them. "We meet," such were his words, "on the broad pathway of good faith and good will; no advantage shall be taken on either side; disputes shall be settled by arbitrators mutually chosen; and all shall be openness and love." [2]Having paid the chiefs the stipulated price for their lands, he delivered to them a parchment record of the treaty, which he desired that they would carefully preserve, for the information of their posterity, for three generations.

1. What was Penn's address to them?

2. What is said of the record of the treaty?

8. [3]The children of the forest cordially acceded to the terms of friendship offered them, and pledged themselves to live in love with William Penn and his children, as long as the sun and moon should endure. [4]The friendship thus created between the province and the Indians continued more than seventy years, and was never interrupted while the Quakers retained the control of the government. Of all the American colonies, the early history of Pennsylvania alone is wholly exempt from scenes of savage warfare. The Quakers came without arms, and with no message but peace, and not a drop of their blood was ever shed by an Indian.

3. What did the Indians promise?

4. What were the happy effects of Penn's policy?

9. [5]A few months after Penn's arrival, he selected a place between the rivers Schuylkill* and Delaware, for the capital of his province,—purchased the land of the Swedes, who had already erected a church there, and having regulated the model of the future city by a 1683.

1. What is said of the names of the streets?

2. Of the growth of the city?

3. When and where was the second assembly held, and how were the laws amended?

10. [3]The second assembly of the province was held in the infant city in March, 1683. The "frame of government," and the laws previously agreed upon, were amended at the suggestion of Penn; and, in their place, a charter of liberties, signed by him, was adopted,[a] which rendered Pennsylvania, nearly all but in name, a representative democracy. [4]While in the other colonies the proprietors reserved to themselves the appointment of the judicial and executive officers, William Penn freely surrendered these powers to the people. His highest ambition, so different from that of the founders of most colonies, was to do good to the people of his care; and to his dying day he declared that if they needed any thing more to make them happier, he would readily grant it.

12. [1]In the mean time James II. had been driven from his throne, and William Penn was several times imprisoned in England, in consequence of his supposed adherence to the cause of the fallen monarch. [2]In 1692 Penn's provincial government was taken from him, by a royal commission[a] to Governor Fletcher, of New York; who, the following year, reunited[b] Delaware to Pennsylvania, and extended the royal authority over both. Soon after, the suspicions against Penn were removed, and in August, 1694, he was restored[c] to his proprietary rights.

NORTH CAROLINA.*

6. What extension was given to the grant?

7. What rights and powers were secured by the charter?

1. [1]The early attempts[a] of the English, under Sir Walter Raleigh, to form a settlement on the coast of North Carolina, have already been mentioned.[a] [2]About forty years later, the king of England granted[b] to Sir Robert Heath a large tract of country lying between the 30th and 36th degrees of north latitude, which was erected into a province by the name of Carolina. [3]No settlements, however, were made under the grant, which, on that account, was afterwards declared void.

2. [4]Between 1640 and 1650 exploring parties from Virginia penetrated into Carolina, and from the same source came the first emigrants, who soon after settled[c] near the mouth of the Chowan,† on the northern shore of Albemarle Sound. [5]In 1663 the province of Carolina was granted[d] to Lord Clarendon and seven others, and in the same year a government under William Drummond was established over the little settlement on the Chowan, which, in honor of the Duke of Albemarle, one of the proprietors, was called the Albemarle County Colony.

3. [6]Two years later, the proprietors having learned that the settlement was not within the limits of their charter, the grant was extended,[e] so as to embrace the half of Florida on the south, and, on the north, all within the present limits of North Carolina, and westward to the Pacific Ocean. [7]The charter secured religious freedom to the people, and a voice in the legis-

* NORTH CAROLINA, one of the Southern States, lying next south of Virginia contains an area of nearly 50,000 square miles. Along the whole coast is a narrow ridge of sand, separated from the mainland in some places by narrow, and in other places by broad sounds and bays. The country for more than sixty miles from the coast is a low sandy plain, with many swamps and marshes and inlets from the sea. The natural growth of this region is almost universally pitch pine. Above the falls of the rivers the country becomes uneven, and the soil more fertile. In the western part of the state is an elevated table land, and some high ranges of the Alleghanies. Black Mountain, the highest point in the United States east of the Rocky Mountains, is 6,476 feet high. The gold region of North Carolina lies on both sides of the Blue Ridge, in the S. Western part of the state.

† The Chowan River, formed by the union of Nottoway, Meherrin, and Blackwater Rivers, which rise and run chiefly in Virginia, flows into Albemarle Sound, a little north of the mouth of the Roanoke. The first settlements were on the N.E. side of the Chowan, near the present village of Edenton.

lation of the colony; but granted to the corporation of eight, an extent of powers and privileges, that made it evident that the formation of an empire was contemplated. 1665.

4. [1]During the same year that the grant to Clarendon was extended, another colony was firmly established within the present limits of North Carolina. In 1660 or 1661, a band of adventurers from New England entered Cape Fear River,* purchased a tract of land from the Indians, and, a few miles below Wilmington,† on Old Town Creek,‡ formed a settlement. The colony did not prosper. The Indians became hostile, and before the autumn of 1663, the settlement was abandoned. Two years later a number of planters from Barbadoes§ formed a permanent settlement near the neglected site of the New England colony, and a county named Clarendon was established, with the same constitution and powers that had been granted to Albemarle. [2]Sir John Yeamans, the choice of the people, ruled the colony with prudence and affection.

1. Give an account of the establishment of the Clarendon colony.

2. Who became governor?

5. [3]As the proprietors of Carolina anticipated the rapid growth of a great and powerful people within the limits of their extensive and fertile territory, they thought proper to establish a permanent form of government, commensurate, in dignity, with the vastness of their expectations. [4]The task of framing the constitution was assigned to the Earl of Shaftesbury, one of the number, who chose the celebrated philosopher, John Locke, as his friend and adviser in the work of legislation.

3. What did the proprietors anticipate, and what did they think proper to do?

4. Who were the framers of the constitution?

* Cape Fear River, in North Carolina, is formed by the union of Haw and Deep Rivers, about 125 miles N.W. from Wilmington. It enters the Atlantic by two channels, one on each side of Smith's Island, twenty and twenty-five miles below Wilmington. (See the Map.)

† Wilmington, the principal seaport in North Carolina, is situated on the east side of Cape Fear River, twenty-five miles from the ocean, by way of Cape Fear, and 150 miles N.E. from Charleston. (See Map.)

‡ Old Town Creek is a small stream that enters Cape Fear River from the W. eight miles below Wilmington. (Map.)

§ Barbadoes is one of the Caribbee or Windward Islands, and the most eastern of the West Indies. It is twenty miles long, and contains an area of about 150 square miles. The island was granted by James I. to the Earl of Marlborough in 1624.

VIC. OF WILMINGTON, N. C.

1669. 6. [1]The object of the proprietors, as expressed[a] by themselves, was "to make the government of Carolina agree, as nearly as possible, to the monarchy of which it was a part; and to avoid erecting a numerous democracy." [2]A constitution of one hundred and twenty articles, called the "Fundamental Constitutions," was adopted, establishing a government to be administered by lords and noblemen; connecting political power with hereditary wealth; and placing nearly every office in the government beyond the reach of the people.

a. Constitutions signed March 11.

1. What was the object of the proprietors?

2. What was the nature of the constitution adopted?

1670. 7. [3]The attempt to establish the new form of government proved ineffectual. The former plain and simple laws were suited to the circumstances of the people, and the magnificent model of government, with its appendages of royalty, contrasted too ludicrously with the sparse population, and rude cabins of Carolina. After a contest of little more than twenty years, the constitution, which was never in effectual operation, and which had proved to be a source of perpetual discord, was abrogated[b] by the proprietors themselves.

3. What is said of the attempt to establish the constitution —and what was the result?

b. 1693.

1671. 8. [4]The Clarendon county colony had never been very numerous, and the barrenness of the soil in its vicinity, offered little promise of reward to new adventurers. In 1671 Sir John Yeamans, the governor, was transferred[c] from the colony to the charge of another which had recently been established[d] in South Carolina. Numerous removals to the southward greatly reduced the numbers of the inhabitants, and nearly the whole country embraced within the limits of the Clarendon colony was a second time surrendered to the aborigines before the year 1690.

c. Dec.

4. What circumstances retarded, and finally defeated the settlement of Clarendon?

d. See p. 160.

9. [5]Domestic dissensions long retarded the prosperity of the Albemarle or northern colony. Disorder arose from the attempts of the governors to administer the government according to the constitution of the proprietors; excessive taxation, and restrictions upon the commerce of the colony, occasioned much discontent; while numerous refugees from Virginia, the actors in Bacon's rebellion, friends of popular liberty, being kindly sheltered in Carolina, gave encouragement to the people to resist oppression.

5. What is said of dissensions in the Albemarle colony?

1677. Dec. 10. [6]The very year after the suppression of Bacon's rebellion in Virginia, a revolt occurred in Carolina, occasioned by an attempt to enforce the revenue laws against a vessel from New England. The people took arms in support of a smuggler, and imprisoned the president of the colony and six members of his council. John Culpepper, who had recently fled from South Carolina, was the leader in the insurrection. [1]During several years, officers chosen by the people administered the government, and tranquillity was for a time restored. The inhabitants were restless and turbulent under a government imposed on them from abroad, but firm and tranquil when left to take care of themselves. 1677.

6. Of the revolt in Carolina, and of its leader?

1. How was tranquillity restored and preserved?

11. [2]In 1683 Seth Sothel, one of the proprietors, arrived as governor of the province. Being exceedingly avaricious, he not only plundered the colonists, but cheated his proprietary associates. He valued his office only as the means of gaining wealth, and in the pursuit of his favorite object, whether as judge, or executive, he was ever open to bribery and corruption. [3]An historian of North Carolina remarks, that "the dark shades of his character were not relieved by a single ray of virtue." [4]The patience of the inhabitants being exhausted after nearly six years of oppression, they seized their governor with the design of sending him to England; but, at his own request, he was tried by the assembly, which banished him from the colony. 1683. 1688. 1689.

2. When did Sothel become governor, and what was his character?

3. What is remarked of him?

4. What is said of his arrest and trial?

12. [5]Ludwell, the next governor, redressed the frauds, public and private, which Sothel had committed, and restored order to the colony. [6]In 1695 Sir John Archdale, another of the proprietors, a man of much sagacity and exemplary conduct, arrived as governor of both the Carolinas. [7]In 1698 the first settlements were made on Pamlico or Tar* River. The Pamlico Indians in that vicinity had been nearly destroyed, two years previous by a pestilential fever; while another numerous tribe had been greatly reduced by the arms of a more powerful nation.

5. What is said of the administration of Ludwell?

6. Of the arrival and character of Archdale?

7. Of the first settlements on Pamlico River, and what prepared the way for them?

* Tar River, in the eastern part of North Carolina, flows S.E., and enters Pamlico Sound. It is the principal river next south of the Roanoke. It expands into a wide estuary a short distance below the village of Washington, from which place to Pamlico Sound, a distance of forty miles, it is called Pamlico River.

1707. 13. [1]The want of harmony, which generally prevailed between the proprietors and the people, did not check the increase of population. [2]In 1707 a company of French Protestants, who had previously settled in Virginia, removed to Carolina. Two years later, they were followed by a hundred German families from the Rhine;* who had been driven in poverty, from their homes, by the devastations of war, and religious persecution. [3]The proprietors assigned to each family two hundred and fifty acres of land; and generous contributions in England furnished them with provisions and implements of husbandry, sufficient for their immediate wants.

1. What is said of the increase of population?
2. Of the arrival of emigrants?

3. What provision was made for the emigrants?

14. [4]A great change had fallen upon the numerous Indian tribes on the seacoast, since the time of Sir Walter Raleigh's attempted settlements. One tribe, which could then bring three thousand bowmen into the field, was now reduced to fifteen men; another had entirely disappeared; and, of the whole, but a remnant remained. After having sold most of their lands, their reservations had been encroached upon;—strong drink had degraded the Indians, and crafty traders had impoverished them; and they had passed away before the march of civilization, like snow beneath a vertical sun.

4. What changes had fallen upon the Indian tribes since the time of Sir Walter Raleigh?

15. [5]The Tuscaroras and the Corees, being farther inland, had held little intercourse with the whites; but they had observed, with jealousy and fear, their growing power, and the rapid advance of their settlements, and with Indian secrecy they now plotted the extermination of the strangers. [6]A surveyor, who was found upon their lands with his chain and compass, was the first victim.[a] Leaving their fire-arms, to avoid suspicion, in small parties, acting in concert, they approached the scattered settlements along Roanoke† River and Pamlico Sound; and in one night,[b] one hundred and thirty persons fell by the hatchet.

[3]From this time, until the period immediately preceding the Revolution, few events occurred to disturb the peace and increasing prosperity of North Carolina. In 1744 public attention was turned to the defence of the seacoast, on account of the commencement of hostilities between England and Spain. About the time of the commencement of the French and Indian war, the colony received large accessions to its numbers, by emigrants from Ireland and Scotland, and thus the settlements were extended into the interior, where the soil was far more fertile than the lands previously occupied. 1729.

2. Give an account of the planting of the first colony in South Carolina.

[2]After the establishment of a colony in the northern part of their province, the proprietors, early in 1670, fitted out several ships, with emigrants, for planting a southern colony, under the direction of William Sayle, who had previously explored the coast. The ships which bore the emigrants entered the harbor of Port Royal, near Beaufort,† whence, after a short delay, they sailed into Ashley‡ River, on the south side of which the settlement of Old Charleston was commenced. The colony, in honor of Sir George Carteret, one of the proprietors, was called the CARTERET COUNTY COLONY.

3. What occurred in 1671?

2. [3]Early in 1671 Governor Sayle sunk under the diseases of a sickly climate, and the council appointed Joseph West to succeed him, until they should learn the will of the proprietors. In a few months, Sir John Yeamans, then governor of Clarendon, was appointed[b] governor of the southern colony. [4]From Barbadoes he brought a number of African slaves, and South Carolina was, from the first, essentially, a planting state, with slave labor. [5]Representative government was early established[c] by the people, but the attempt to carry out the plan of government formed by the proprietors proved ineffectual.

* SOUTH CAROLINA, one of the Southern States, contains an area of nearly 33,000 square miles. The seacoast is bordered with a chain of fertile islands. The Low Country, extending from eighty to 100 miles from the coast, is covered with forests of pitch pine, called pine barrens, interspersed with marshes and swamps, which form excellent rice plantations. Beyond this, extending fifty or sixty miles in width, is the Middle Country, composed of numerous ridges of sand hills, presenting an appearance which has been compared to the waves of the sea suddenly arrested in their course. Beyond these sand hills commences the Upper Country, which is a beautiful and healthy, and generally fertile region, about 800 feet above the level of the sea. The Blue Ridge, a branch of the Alleghanies, passes along the N. Western boundary of the state.

† Beaufort, in South Carolina, is situated on Port Royal Island, on the W. bank of Port Royal River, a narrow branch of the ocean. It is sixteen miles from the sea, and about thirty-six miles, in a direct line, N.E. from Savannah. (See Map, p. 35.)

‡ Ashley River rises about thirty miles N.W. from Charleston, and, passing along the west side of the city, enters Charleston Harbor seven miles from the ocean. (See Map, next page.)

3. [1]Several circumstances contributed to promote the early settlement of South Carolina. A long and bloody war between two neighboring Indian tribes, and a fatal epidemic which had recently prevailed, had opened the way for the more peaceful occupation of the country by the English. The recent conquest of New Netherlands induced many of the Dutch to emigrate, and several ship loads of them were conveyed[a] to Carolina, by the proprietors, free of expense. Lands were assigned them west of the Ashley River, where they formed a settlement, which was called Jamestown. The inhabitants soon spread themselves through the country, and in process of time the town was deserted. Their prosperity induced many of their countrymen from Holland to follow them. A few years later a company of French Protestants, refugees from their own country, were sent[b] over by the king of England.

[3]In the same year the colony was involved in difficulties with the Indians. Straggling parties of the Westoes began to plunder the plantations, and several Indians were shot by the planters. War immediately broke out; a price was fixed on Indian prisoners; and † Charleston, a city and seaport of S. Carolina, is situated on a peninsula formed by the union of Ashley and Cooper Rivers, seven miles from the ocean. It is only about seven feet above high tide; and parts of the city have been overflowed when the wind and tide have combined to raise the waters. The harbor, below the city, is about two miles in width, and seven in length, across the mouth of which is a sand bar, having four passages, the deepest of which, near Sullivan's Island, has seventeen feet of water, at high tide. During the summer months the city is more healthy than the surrounding country.

1684. 1. What occurred at Port Royal? 5. [1]In 1684 a few families of Scotch emigrants settled at Port Royal; but two years later, the Spaniards of St. Augustine, claiming the territory, invaded the settlement, and laid it waste. [2]About this time the revocation[b] of the edict of Nantes,* induced a large number of French Protestants, generally called Huguenots, to leave their country, and seek an asylum in America.

1686. b. 1685. 2. What induced the Huguenots to remove to America? 3. Where did they settle? [3]A few settled in New England; others in New York; but South Carolina became their chief resort. 4. How were they at first regarded, and how treated by the English? [4]Although they had been induced, by the proprietors, to believe that the full rights of citizenship would be extended to them here, yet they were long viewed with jealousy and distrust by the English settlers, who were desirous of driving them from the country, by enforcing against them the laws of England respecting aliens.

c. 1686–90. 5. What events occurred during Gov. Colleton's administration? 6. [5]The administration[c] of Governor Colleton was signalized by a continued series of disputes with the people, who, like the settlers in North Carolina, refused to submit to the form of government established by the proprietors. An attempt of the governor to collect the rents claimed by the proprietors, finally drove the people to open rebellion. They forcibly took possession of the public records, held assemblies in opposition to the governor, and the authority of the proprietors, and imprisoned the secretary of the province. At length Colleton, pretending danger from Indians or Spaniards, called out the militia, and proclaimed the province under martial law. This only exasperated the people the more, and Colleton was finally impeached by the assembly, and banished from the province.

But his avarice led him to trample upon every restraint of justice and equity; and after two years of tyranny and misrule, he likewise was deposed, and banished by the people. [1]Philip Ludwell, for some time governor of North Carolina, was then sent to the southern province, to re-establish the authority of the proprietors. But the old disputes revived, and after a brief, but turbulent administration, he gladly withdrew into Virginia. 1690.

8. [2]In 1693, one cause of discontent with the people was removed by the proprietors; who abolished the "Fundamental Constitution," and returned to a more simple and more republican form of government. [3]But contentions and disputes still continuing, John Archdale, who was a Quaker, and proprietor, came over in 1695; and by a wise and equitable administration, did much to allay private animosities, and remove the causes of civil discord. [4]Matters of general moment were settled to the satisfaction of all, excepting the French refugees; and such was the antipathy of the English settlers against these peaceable, but unfortunate people, that Governor Archdale found it necessary to exclude the latter from all concern in the legislature. 1693.

2. What occurred in 1693?

3. Why did Archdale come over, and what is said of his administration?

4. What is said of the French refugees?

9. [5]Fortunately for the peace of the colony, soon after the return of Archdale, all difficulties with the Huguenots were amicably settled. Their quiet and inoffensive behavior, and their zeal for the success of the colony, had gradually removed the national antipathies; and the general assembly at length admitted[a] them to all the rights of citizens and freemen. The French and English Protestants of Carolina have ever since lived together in harmony and peace. [6]In 1702, immediately after the declaration[b] of war, by England, against France and Spain, Governor Moore proposed to the assembly of Carolina an expedition against the Spanish settlement of St. Augustine, in Florida. [7]The more considerate opposed the project, but a majority being in favor of it, a sum of about nine thousand dollars was voted for the war, and 1200 men were raised, of whom half were Indians. 1696.

As nothing could be effected against it, for the want of heavy artillery, Daniel was despatched to Jamaica,* for cannon, mortars, &c. 12. [3]The establishment of the Church of England, in Carolina, had long been a favorite object with several of the proprietors, and during the administration of Sir Nathaniel Johnson, who succeeded[b] Governor Moore, their designs were fully carried out; and not only was the Episcopal form of worship established, as the religion of the province, but all dissenters were excluded from the colonial legislature. [4]The dissenters then carried their cause before the English parliament, which declared that the acts complained of were repugnant to the laws of England, and contrary

13. [1]From these domestic troubles, a threatened invasion of the province turned the attention of the people towards their common defence against foreign enemies. [2]Queen Anne's war still continued; and Spain, considering Carolina as a part of Florida, determined to assert her right by force of arms. [3]In 1706, a French and Spanish squadron from Havanna appeared before Charleston; but the inhabitants, headed by the governor and Colonel Rhett, assembled in great numbers for the defence of the city. The enemy landed in several places, but were repulsed with loss. One of the French ships was taken, and the invasion, at first so alarming, was repelled with little loss, and little expense to the colony.

2. Why were the Spaniards hostile?

3. What events occurred in 1706?

14. [4]In 1715 a general Indian war broke out, headed by the Yamassees, and involving all the Indian tribes from Cape Fear River to the Alabama. The Yamassees had previously shown great friendship to the English; and the war commenced[b] before the latter were aware of their danger. The frontier settlements were desolated; Port Royal was abandoned; Charleston itself was in danger; and the colony seemed near its ruin. [5]But Governor Craven, with nearly the entire force of the colony, advanced against the enemy, drove their straggling parties before him, and on the banks of the Salkehatchie,* encountered[c] their main body in camp, and, after a bloody battle, gained a complete victory. [6]Happily for the claims of the latter, and the security of Carolina, in 1732 a number of persons in England, influenced by

2. [1]James Oglethorpe, a member of the British parliament; a soldier and a loyalist, but a friend of the unfortunate; first conceived the idea of opening, for the poor of his own country, and for persecuted Protestants of all nations, an asylum in America, where former poverty would be no reproach, and where all might worship without fear of persecution. [2]The benevolent enterprise met with favor from the king, who granted,[a] for twenty-one years, to a corporation, "In trust for the poor," the country between the Savannah and the Altamaha, and westward to the Pacific Ocean. He reminded them that the feathers of the eagle were soft, and signified love; that the skin of the buffalo was warm, and signified protection; and therefore he hoped that the English would love and protect the little families of the Indians.

1. What is said of the character of the early settlers?

5. [1]The settlers rapidly increased in numbers, but as most of those who first came over, were not only poor, but unaccustomed to habits of industry, they were poorly qualified to encounter the toil and hardships to which their situation exposed them. [2]The liberality of the trustees then invited emigrants of more enterprising habits; and large numbers of Swiss, Germans, and Scotch, accepted their proposals. [3]The regulations of the trustees at first forbade the use of negroes,—prohibited the importation of rum,—and interdicted all trade with the Indians, without a special license. 7. [2]The celebrated John Wesley, founder of the Methodist church, had returned with Oglethorpe, with the charitable design of rendering Georgia a religious colony, and of converting the Indians. [3]Having become unpopular by his zeal and imprudence, he was indicted for exercising unwarranted ecclesiastical authority; and, after a residence of two years in the colony, he returned to England, where he was long distinguished for his piety and usefulness. [4]Soon after his return the Rev. George Whitefield, another and more distinguished Methodist, visited[a] Georgia, with the design of establishing an orphan asylum on lands obtained from the trustees for that purpose. 10. [1]Two years later, the Spaniards, in return, made preparations for an invasion of Georgia. In July, a fleet of thirty-six sail from Havanna and St. Augustine, bearing more than three thousand troops, entered the harbor of St. Simon's;* landed[b] on the west side of the island, a little above the town of the same name; and erected a battery of twenty guns. [2]General Oglethorpe, who was then on the island with a force of less than eight hundred men, exclusive of Indians, withdrew to Frederica; anxiously awaiting an expected reinforcement from Carolina. A party of the enemy, having advanced within two miles of the town, was driven back with loss; another party of three hundred, coming to their assistance, was ambuscaded,[c] and two-thirds of the number were slain or taken prisoners.

[4]Apprehensive that the enemy would now discover his weakness, he devised an expedient for destroying the credit of any information that might be given. He wrote a letter to the deserter, requesting that he would urge the Spaniards to an immediate attack, or, if he should not succeed in this, that he would induce them to remain on the island three days longer, for in that time several British ships, and a reinforcement, were expected from Carolina. He also dropped some hints of an expected attack on St. Augustine by a British fleet. This letter he bribed a

12. [1]The deserter was immediately arrested as a spy, but the letter sorely perplexed the Spanish officers, some of whom believed it was intended as a deception, while others, regarding the circumstances mentioned in it as highly probable, and fearing for the safety of St. Augustine, advised an immediate return of the expedition. [2]Fortunately, while they were consulting, there appeared, at some distance on the coast, three small vessels, which were regarded as a part of the British fleet mentioned in the letter. [3]It was now determined to attack Oglethorpe at Frederica, before the expected reinforcement should arrive.

[5]On their way south they made an attack[b] on Fort William,* but were repulsed; and two galleys were disabled and abandoned. [1]The people complained, that, as they were poor, the want of a free title to their lands almost wholly deprived them of credit; they wished that the unjust rule of descent, which gave their property to the eldest son, to the exclusion of the younger children, should be changed for one more equitable; but, more than all, they complained that they were prohibited the use of slave labor, and requested that the same encouragements should be given to them as were given to their more fortunate neighbors in Carolina.

1. Of what did the people complain?

16. [2]The regulations of the trustees began to be evaded, and the laws against slavery were not rigidly enforced. At first, slaves from Carolina were hired for short periods; then for a hundred years, or during life; and a sum equal to the value of the negro paid in advance; and, finally, slavers from Africa sailed directly to Savannah; and Georgia, like Carolina, became a planting state, with slave labor.

[3]In 1752, the trustees of Georgia, wearied with complaints against the system of government which they had established, and finding that the province languished under their care, resigned[a] their charter to the king; and the province was formed[b] into a royal government. [4]The people were then favored with the same liberties and privileges that were enjoyed by the provinces of Carolina; but it was not until the close of the French and Indian war, and the surrender of the Floridas to England, by which security was given to the frontiers, that the colony began to assume a flourishing condition.

Of what does the first Division treat?

1. Why have separate accounts of the colonies been thus far given?

2. What change is now made, and for what reason?

I. CAUSES OF THE WAR, AND EVENTS OF 1754.—Thus far, separate accounts of the early American colonies have been given, for the purpose of preserving that unity of narration which seemed best adapted to render prominent the distinctive features which marked the settlement and progress of each. [2]But as we have arrived at a period when the several colonies have be-1753. come firmly established, and when their individual histories become less eventful, and less interesting, their general history will now be taken up, and continued in those more important events which subsequently affected all the colonies. [1]This period is distinguished by the final struggle for dominion in America, between the rival powers of France and England.

1. By what is this period distinguished?

2. [2]Those previous wars between the two countries, which had so often embroiled their transatlantic colonies, had chiefly arisen from disputes of European origin; and the events which occurred in America, were regarded as of secondary importance to those which, in a greater measure, affected the influence of the rival powers in the affairs of Europe. [3]But the growing importance of the American possessions of the two countries, occasioning disputes about territories tenfold more extensive than either possessed in Europe, at length became the sole cause of involving them in another contest, more important to America than any preceding one, and which is commonly known as the French and Indian War.

2. What is said of previous wars between France and England?

3. What led to the French and Indian war?

3. [4]The English, by virtue of the early discovery by the Cabots, claimed the whole seacoast from Newfoundland to Florida; and by numerous grants of territory, before the French had established any settlements in the Valley of the Mississippi, they had extended their claims westward to the Pacific Ocean. [5]The French, on the contrary, founded their claims upon the actual occupation and exploration of the country. [6]Besides their settlements in New France, or Canada, and Acadia, they had long occupied Detroit,* had explored the Valley of the Mississippi, and formed settlements at Kaskaskia† and Vincennes,‡ and along the northern border of the Gulf of Mexico.

4. What was the ground, and what the extent of the English claim?

5. Upon what did the French found their claims?

6. How far did their settlements extend?

4. [7]According to the French claims, their northern possessions of New France and Acadia embraced, within their southern limits, the half of New York, and the greater portion of New England; while their western possessions, of Upper and Lower Louisiana, were held to embrace the entire valley of the Mississippi and its tributary streams. [1]For the purpose of vindicating their claims to these extensive territories, and confining the English to the country east of the Alleghanies, the French were busily engaged in erecting a chain of forts, by way of the Great Lakes and the Mississippi, from Nova Scotia to the Gulf of Mexico. 1753.

1. How were they preparing to defend it?

5. [2]A royal grant[a] of an extensive tract of land on the Ohio* River, to a company of merchants, called the Ohio Company, gave the French the first apprehension that the English were designing to deprive them of their western trade with the Indians, and cut off their communication between Canada and Louisiana. [3]While the company were surveying these lands, with the view of settlement, three British traders were seized[b] by a party of French and Indians, and conveyed to a French fort at Presque Isle.† The Twightwees, a tribe of Indians friendly to the English, resenting the violence done to their allies, seized several French traders, and sent them to Pennsylvania.

3. What violent measures followed?

6. [4]The French soon after began the erection of forts south of Lake Erie, which called forth serious complaints from the Ohio Company. As the territory in dispute was within the original charter limits of Virginia, Robert Dinwiddie, lieutenant-governor of the colony, deemed it his duty to remonstrate with the French commandant of the western posts, against his proceedings, and demand a withdrawal of his troops. [5]The person employed to convey a letter to the French commandant was George Washington, an enterprising and public-spirited young man, then in his twenty-second year, who thus early engaged in the public

* The Ohio River is formed by the confluence of the Alleghany from the N., and the Monongahela from the S., at Pittsburg, in the western part of Pennsylvania. From Pittsburg the general course of the river is S.W. to the Mississippi, a distance of 950 miles by the river, but only about 520 in a direct line. It separates the states of Virginia and Kentucky on the S., from Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois on the N., and drains a valley containing more than 200,000 square miles. The only considerable falls in the river are at Louisville, where the water descends twenty-two and a half feet in two miles, around which has been completed a canal that admits the passage of the largest steamboats.

† Presque Isle (almost an island, as its name implies,) is a small peninsula on the southern shore of Lake Erie, at the northwestern extremity of Pennsylvania. 1753. service, and who afterwards became illustrious in the annals of his country.

1. What is said of the service to which Washington was called?

7. [1]The service to which Washington was thus called, was both difficult and dangerous; as half of his route, of four hundred miles, lay through a trackless wilderness, inhabited by Indian tribes, whose feelings were hostile to the English. [2]Departing, on the 31st of October, from Williamsburg,* then the seat of government of the province, on the 4th of December he reached a French fort at the mouth of French Creek,† from which he was conducted to another fort higher up the stream, where he found the French commandant, M. De St. Pierre,[a] who entertained him with great politeness, and gave him a written answer to Governor Dinwiddie's letter.

b. Dec. 16.

3. What dangers did he meet during his return?

8. [3]Having secretly taken the dimensions of the fort, and made all possible observations, he set out[b] on his return. At one time he providentially escaped being murdered by a party of hostile Indians; one of whom, at a short distance, fired upon him, but fortunately missed him. At another time, while crossing a river on a raft, he was thrown from it by the floating ice; and, after a narrow escape from drowning, he suffered greatly from the intense severity of the cold.

4. What was the answer of the French commander?

[4]On his arrival[c] at Williamsburg, the letter of St. Pierre was found to contain a refusal to withdraw his troops; with the assurance that he was acting in obedience to the commands of the governor-general of Canada, whose orders alone he should obey.

5. What measures were taken in consequence?

9. [5]The hostile designs of the French being apparent from the reply of St. Pierre, the governor of Virginia made immediate preparations to resist their encroachments. The Ohio Company sent out a party of thirty men to erect a fort at the confluence of the Alleghany‡

11. [4]It having been seen by England, that war with France would be inevitable, the colonies had been advised to unite upon some plan of union for the general defence. [5]A convention had likewise been proposed to be held at Albany, in June, for the purpose of conferring with the Six Nations, and securing their friendship. [6]After a treaty had been made with the Indians, the convention took up the subject of the proposed union; and, on the fourth of July, the very day of the surrender of Fort Necessity, adopted a plan which had been drawn up by Dr. Franklin, a delegate from Pennsylvania.

4. What did England advise the colonies?

1. Why was it rejected?

13. [1]This plan, although approved by all the delegates present, except those from Connecticut, who objected to the negative voice of the governor-general, shared the singular fate of being rejected, both by the colonial assemblies, and by the British government: by the former, because it was supposed to give too much power to the representative of the king; and by the latter, because it was supposed to give too much power to the representatives of the people. [2]As no plan of union could be devised, acceptable to both parties, it was determined to carry on the war with British troops, aided by such forces as the colonial assemblies might voluntarily furnish.

2. What was then determined?

1755. II. 1755: EXPEDITIONS OF MONCKTON, BRADDOCK, SHIRLEY, AND SIR WILLIAM JOHNSON.—1. [3]Early in 1755, General Braddock arrived[a] from Ireland, with two regiments of British troops, and with the authority of commander-in-chief of the British and colonial forces. [4]At a convention of the colonial governors, assembled at his request in Virginia, three expeditions were resolved upon; one against the French at Fort du Quesne, to be led by General Braddock himself; a second against Niagara, and a third against Crown Point, a French post on the western shore of Lake Champlain.

jour[a] surrendered,[b] after an investment of four days. The name of the fort was then changed to Cumberland. Fort Gaspereau,[c] on Bay Verte,[d] or Green Bay,* was next taken; and the forts on the New Brunswick coast were abandoned. In accordance with the views of the governor of Nova Scotia, the plantations of the French settlers were laid waste; and several thousands of the hapless fugitives, ardently attached to their mother country, and refusing to take the oath of allegiance to Great Britain, were driven on board the British shipping, at the point of the bayonet, and dispersed, in poverty, through the English colonies. 1755.

4. [1]The expedition against the French on the Ohio, was considerably delayed, by the difficulty of obtaining supplies of wagons and provisions; but, on the tenth of June, General Braddock set out from Fort Cumberland,† with a force of little more than two thousand men, composed of British regulars and provincials. [2]Apprehending that Fort du Quesne might be reenforced, he hastened his march with a select corps of 1200 men; leaving Col. Dunbar to follow in the rear with the other troops and the heavy baggage.

1. What delayed the expedition of Braddock, and when did he commence his march?

2. In what manner did he hasten his march, and why?

5. [3]Neglecting the proper measures necessary for guarding against a surprise, and too confident in his own views, to receive the advice of Washington, who acted as his aid, and who requested to lead the provincials in advance; Braddock continued to press forward, heedless of danger, until he had arrived within nine or ten miles of Fort du Quesne. [4]While marching in apparent security, his advanced guard of regulars, commanded by Lieutenant-colonel Gage, was fired upon[e] by an unseen enemy; and, unused to Indian warfare, was thrown into disorder; and falling back on the main body, a general confusion ensued.

[1]General Braddock, vainly endeavoring to rally his troops on the spot where they were first attacked, after having had three horses killed under him, and after seeing every mounted officer fall, except Washington, was himself mortally wounded, when his troops fled in dismay and confusion. [2]The cool bravery of the Virginia provincials, who formed under the command of Washington, covered the retreat of the regulars, and saved the army from total destruction. [3]In this disastrous defeat more than two-thirds of all the officers, and nearly half the privates, were either killed or wounded.

2. What saved the army from total destruction?

3. How many were killed or wounded?

7. [4]No pursuit was made by the enemy, to whom the success was wholly unexpected; yet so great was the panic communicated to Colonel Dunbar's troops, that they likewise fled with precipitation, and made no pause until they found themselves sheltered by the walls of Fort Cumberland. The forces designed for this enterprise were to assemble at Oswego,[b] whence they were to proceed by water to the mouth of the Niagara River.* The main body of the troops, however, did not arrive until the last of August; and then a succession of western winds and rain, the prevalence of sickness in the camp, and the desertion of the Indian allies, rendered it unadvisable to proceed; and most of the forces were withdrawn.[c] The erection of two new forts had been commenced on the east side of the river; and suitable garrisons were left to defend them.

[3]In the mean time, Johnson had sent out a party of a thousand provincials under the command of Colonel Williams; and two hundred Indians under the command of Hendricks, a Mohawk sachem; for the purpose of intercepting the return of the enemy, whether they succeeded, or failed, in their designs against Fort Edward.

* Fort Edward was on the site of the present village of Fort Edward, in Washington County, on the E. side of Hudson River, and about forty-five miles N. from Albany. (See Map.)

1755. 12. [1]The fugitives had scarcely arrived at the camp, when the enemy appeared and commenced a spirited attack; but the unexpected reception which the English cannon gave them, considerably cooled their ardor. The Canadian militia and the Indians soon fled; and the French troops, after continuing the contest several hours, retired in disorder. [2]Dieskau was found wounded and alone, leaning against the stump of a tree. While feeling for his watch, in order to surrender it, an English soldier, thinking he was searching for a pistol, fired upon him, and inflicted a wound which caused his death. III. 1756: DELAYS: LOSS OF OSWEGO: INDIAN INCURSIONS.—1. [5]The plan for the campaign of 1756, which had been agreed upon in a council of the colonial governors held at Albany, early in the season, was similar to that of the preceding year; having for its object the reduction of Crown Point, Niagara, and Fort du Quesne. [6]Lord Loudon was appointed by the king commander-in-chief of his forces in America, and also governor of Virginia; but, being unable to depart immediately, General Abercrombie was ordered

* Fort Wm. Henry was situated at the head of Lake George, a little E. from the village of Caldwell, in Warren County. After the fort was levelled by Montcalm, in 1757, (see page 185,) Fort George was built as a substitute for it, on a more commanding site; yet it was never the scene of any important battle. to precede him, and take the command of the troops until his arrival. 2. [2]In June, General Abercrombie arrived, with several regiments, and proceeded to Albany, where the provincial troops were assembled; but deeming the forces under his command inadequate to carry out the plan of the campaign, he thought it prudent to await the arrival of the Earl of Loudon. This occasioned a delay until the latter part of July; and even after the arrival of the earl, no measures of importance were taken. [3]The French, in the mean time, profiting by the delays of the English, seized the opportunity to make an attack upon Oswego.*

2. What is said of the measures of Abercrombie and Lord Loudon?

3. [4]Early in August, the Marquis Montcalm, who had succeeded the Baron Dieskau in the chief command of the French forces in Canada, crossed Lake Ontario with more than five thousand men, French, Canadians, and Indians; and, with more than thirty pieces of cannon, commenced[c] the siege of Fort Ontario, on the east side of Oswego River.† After an obstinate, but short defence, this fort was abandoned,[d] —the garrison safely retiring to the old fort on the west side of the river.

5. [1]After the defeat of Braddock, the Indians on the western frontiers, incited by the French, renewed their depredations, and killed, or carried into captivity, more than a thousand of the inhabitants. [2]In August of this year, Colonel Armstrong, with a party of nearly 300 men, marched against Kittaning,* their principal town, on the Alleghany River. The Indians, although surprised,[a] defended themselves with great bravery; refusing quarter when it was offered them. Their principal chiefs were killed, their town was destroyed, and eleven prisoners were recovered. The English suffered but little in this expedition. Among their wounded was Captain Mercer, afterwards distinguished in the war of the revolution. IV. 1757: DESIGNS AGAINST LOUISBURG, AND LOSS OF FORT WILLIAM HENRY.—1. [4]The plan of the campaign of 1757, was limited, by the commander-in-chief, to an attempt upon the important fortress of Louisburg. [5]With the reduction of this post in view, Lord Loudon sailed[b] from New York, in June, with 6000 regular troops; and, on the thirtieth of the same month, arrived at Halifax; where he was reenforced by a powerful naval armament commanded by Admiral Holbourn; and a land force of 5000 men from England. [6]Soon after, information was received,[c] that a French fleet, larger than that of the English, had already arrived in the harbor of Louisburg, and that the city was garrisoned by more than 6000 men. The expedition was, therefore, necessarily abandoned. The admiral proceeded to cruise off Louisburg, and Lord Loudon returned[d] to New York.

consisted of between two and three thousand men, commanded by Colonel Monro; and, for the farther security of the place, Colonel Webb was stationed at Fort Edward, only fifteen miles distant, with an army of 4000 men. During six days, the garrison maintained an obstinate defence; anxiously awaiting a reinforcement from Fort Edward; until, receiving positive information that no relief would be attempted, and their ammunition beginning to fail them, they surrendered[a] the place by capitulation. 1757.

[3]The otherwise fair fame of Montcalm has been tarnished by this unfortunate affair; but it is believed that he and his officers used their utmost endeavors, except firing upon the Indians, to stop the butchery.

V. 1758: Reduction of Louisburg; Abercrombie's Defeat; the taking of Forts Frontenac and Du Quesne.—1. [4]The result of the two preceding campaigns was exceedingly humiliating to England, in view of the formidable preparations that had been made for carrying on the war; and so strong was the feeling against the ministry and their measures, that a change was found necessary. [5]A new administration was formed, at the head of which was placed Mr. Pitt, afterwards Lord Chatham; Lord Loudon was recalled; additional forces were raised in America; and a large naval armament, and twelve thousand additional troops, were promised from England. At length, all the shipping being destroyed, and the batteries from the land side having made several breaches in the walls, near the last of July, the city and island, together with St. John's,* were surrendered[e] by capitulation.

On the following morning, the troops landed near the northern extremity of the lake, and commenced their march through a thick wood towards the fort, then defended by about four thousand men under the command of the Marquis Montcalm. Ignorant of the nature of the ground, and without proper guides, the troops became bewildered; and the centre column, commanded by Lord Howe, falling in with an advanced guard of the French, Lord Howe himself was killed; but after a warm contest, the enemy were repulsed.[g] the intrenchments were unfinished, and might be attempted with good prospect of success. Unexpectedly, the breastwork was found to be of great strength, and covered with felled trees, with their branches pointing outwards; and notwithstanding the intrepidity of the troops, after a contest of nearly four hours, they were repulsed[a] with great slaughter; leaving nearly two thousand of their number killed or wounded on the field of battle. 1758.

Proceeding by the way of Oswego, Bradstreet crossed the lake, landed[b] within a mile of the fort without opposition, and, in two days, compelled that important fortress to surrender.[c] The fort was destroyed, and nine armed vessels, sixty cannon, and a large quantity of military stores and goods, designed for the Indian trade, fell into the hands of the English.

[1]The high reputation which General Amherst had acquired in the siege of Louisburg, had gained him a vote of thanks from parliament, and had procured for him the appointment of commander-in-chief of the army in North America, with the responsibility of carrying out the vast and daring project of Mr. Pitt, which was no less than the entire conquest of Canada in a single campaign.

What are the subjects of the sixth division?

1. What honors were bestowed on General Amherst?

2. [2]For the purpose of dividing and weakening the power of the French, General Wolfe, a young officer of uncommon merit, who had distinguished himself at the siege of Louisburg, was to ascend the St. Lawrence and lay siege to Quebec: General Amherst was to carry Ticonderoga and Crown Point; and then, by way of Lake Champlain and the St. Lawrence, was to unite with the forces of General Wolfe; while a third army, after the reduction of Niagara, was to proceed down the lake and river against Montreal.

2. What was the plan of the campaign of 1759?

3. [3]In the prosecution of the enterprise which had been intrusted to him, General Amherst arrived[a] before Ticonderoga[b] in the latter part of July, with an army of little more than 11,000 men. While preparing for a general attack, the French abandoned[c] their lines, and withdrew to the fort; but, in a few days, abandoned[d] this also, after having partially demolished it, and retired to Crown Point.[e]

Cape Diamond, the most elevated part of the Upper Town, on which stands the citadel, is 345 feet above the level of the river, and commands a grand view of an extensive tract of country. The fortifications of the Upper Town, extending nearly across the peninsula, enclose a circuit of about two miles and three-quarters. 7. [1]General Wolfe took possession[a] of Point Levi,[b] where he erected batteries which destroyed the Lower Town, but did little injury to the defences of the city. He soon after crossed the north channel of the St. Lawrence, and encamped[c] his army near the enemy's left, the river Montmorenci lying between them. [2]Convinced, however, of the impossibility of reducing the place unless he could erect batteries nearer the city than Point Levi, he soon decided on more daring measures. He resolved to cross the St. Lawrence and the Montmorenci, with different divisions, at the same time, and storm the intrenchments of the French camp.

1. What were the first measures which Wolfe adopted?

2. On what daring measures did he next resolve?

8. [3]For this purpose, on the last day of July, the boats of the fleet, filled with grenadiers, and with troops from Point Levi, under the command of General Monckton, crossed the St. Lawrence, and, after considerable delay by grounding on a ledge of rocks, effected a landing a little above the Montmorenci; while Generals Townshend and Murray, fording that stream at low water, near its mouth, hastened to the assistance of the troops already landed. [4]But as the grenadiers rushed impetuously forward without waiting for the troops that were to support them, they were driven back with loss, and obliged to seek shelter behind a redoubt which the enemy had abandoned. [5]Here they were detained a while by a thunder storm, still exposed to a galling fire; when night approaching, and the tide setting in, a retreat was ordered. This unfortunate attempt was attended with the loss of nearly 500 men.

proposed a second attack on the French lines. They were of opinion, however, that this was inexpedient, but proposed that the army should attempt a point above Quebec, where they might gain the heights which overlooked the city. The plan being approved, preparations were immediately made to carry it into execution. 1759.

10. [1]The camp at Montmorenci being broken up, the troops and artillery were conveyed to Point Levi; and, soon after, to some distance above the city; while Montcalm's attention was still engaged with the apparent design of a second attack upon his camp. All things being in readiness, during the night of the 12th of September, the troops in boats silently fell down the stream; and, landing within a mile and a half of the city, ascended the precipice,—dispersed a few Canadians and Indians; and, when morning dawned, were drawn up in battle array on the plains of Abraham.

1. Give an account of the execution of the plan adopted.

11. [2]Montcalm, surprised at this unexpected event, and perceiving that, unless the English could be driven from their position, Quebec was lost, immediately crossed the St. Charles with his whole army, and advanced to the attack. [3]About nine in the morning fifteen hundred Indians and Canadians, advancing in front, and screened by surrounding thickets, began the battle;[a] but the English reserved their fire for the main body of the French, then rapidly advancing; and, when at the distance of forty yards, opened upon them with such effect as to compel them to recoil with confusion.

Colonel Monckton, the second officer in rank, was dangerously wounded by his side, when the command devolved on General Townshend. The French general, Montcalm, likewise fell; and his second in command was mortally wounded. General Wolfe died on the field of battle, but he lived long enough to be informed that he had gained the victory.

4. Relate the circumstances of the deaths of the two commanders.

Montcalm lived to be carried into the city. When informed that his wound was mortal, "So much the better," he replied, "I shall not then live to witness the surrender of Quebec."

CHAPTER XIV.

CAUSES WHICH LED TO THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Of what does Chapter XIV. treat?

1. [3]By the treaty of Paris in 1763, England gained a large addition to her American territory; extending it from the northeastern extremity of the continent to the Gulf of Mexico; and from the Mississippi to the Atlantic. [4]During a century and a half, the rival powers of France and England had contended for supremacy in America; involving, in the mean time,

* Iberville, an outlet of the Mississippi, leaves that river fourteen miles below Baton Rouge, and flowing E. enters Amite River, which falls into Lake Maurepas. It now receives water from the Mississippi only at high flood. In 1698 the French naval officer, Iberville, sailed up the Mississippi to this stream, which he entered, and thence passed through Lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain to Mobile Bay.

† Maurepas is a lake about twenty miles in circumference, communicating with Lake Pontchartrain on the E. by an outlet seven miles long.

‡ Pontchartrain is a lake more than a hundred miles in circumference, the southern shore of which is about five miles N. from New Orleans. The passage by which it communicates with Lake Borgne on the E. is called The Rigolets.

§ That part of the country ceded by Spain was divided, by the English monarch, into the governments of East and West Florida. East Florida included all embraced in the present Florida, as far W. as the Apalachicola River. West Florida extended from the Apalachicola to the Mississippi, and was bounded on the N. by the 31st degree of latitude, and on the S. by the Gulf of Mexico, and a line drawn through Lakes Pontchartrain and Maurepas, and the Rivers Amite and Iberville, to the Mississippi. Thus those parts of the states of Alabama and Mississippi which extend from the 31st degree down to the Gulf of Mexico, were included in West Florida.

dian warfare, at an enormous expense of blood and treasure.

1. How was the downfall of the French power in America regarded? But what contest arose soon after?

2. [1]The subversion of the French power in America was looked to as the harbinger of long-continued peace and prosperity to the colonies; but scarcely had the struggle ended, when a contest arose, between the desire of power on the one hand, and the abhorrence of oppression on the other, which finally resulted in the dismemberment of the British empire.

2. What is said of the feelings of the early colonists towards England?

3. [2]Although the colonists had ever cherished feelings of filial regard for the mother country; and were proud of their descent from one of the most powerful nations of Europe; yet, even before any decided acts of oppression had driven them to resistance, other causes had strongly operated to prepare the way for American Independence.

3. By what causes were the colonies socially united as one people?

4. [3]Although the Americans were under different colonial governments; yet they were socially united as one people, by the identity of their language, laws, and customs, and the ties of a common kindred; and still more, by a common participation in the vicissitudes of peril and suffering through which they had passed.

4. What effect had these causes on their attachment to England?

[4]These and other causes, had closely united them in one common interest; and, in the ratio of their fraternal union as colonies, had weakened their attachment to the parent land.

5. What is said of the republican principles of the people?

5. [5]Before they left England, they were allied in principle and in feeling with the republican, or liberal party; which was ever seeking to abridge the prerogatives of the crown, and to enlarge the liberties of the people. They scoffed at the "divine right of kings," looked upon rulers as public servants bound to exercise their authority for the sole benefit of the governed; and maintained that it is the inalienable right of the subject, freely to give his money to the crown, or to withhold it at his discretion.

6. In view of such principles, what are we surprised to find?

6. [6]With such principles, it is not surprising that any attempt on the part of Great Britain to tax her colonies, should be met with determined opposition; and we are surprised to find that severe restrictions upon American commerce, highly injurious to the col onies, but beneficial to England, had long been submitted to without open resentment. 1763.

7. [1]Such were the navigation acts, which, for the benefit of English shipping, declared[a] that no merchandise of the English plantations should be imported into England in any other than English vessels;—which, for the benefit of English manufacturers, prohibited[b] the exportation from the colonies, and the introduction from one colony into another, of hats and woollens of domestic manufacture;—which forbade hatters to have, at one time, more than two apprentices;—which prohibited[c] the importation of sugar, rum, and molasses, without the payment of exorbitant duties;—which forbade[d] the erection of certain iron works, and the manufacture of steel; and which prohibited the felling of pitch and white-pine trees, not comprehended within enclosures.

8. [2]Although parliament, as early as 1733, had imposed duties on sugar and molasses imported into the colonies; yet the payment of them was for many years evaded, or openly violated, with but little interference by the British authorities. [3]In 1761 an attempt was made to enforce the act, by the requisition, from the colonial courts, of "writs of assistance;" which were general search-warrants, authorizing the king's officers to search for suspected articles which had been introduced into the provinces without the payment of the required duties. [4]In Boston, violent excitements prevailed; the applications for the writs were met by the spirited opposition of the people, and the bold denunciations of Thatcher, Otis, and others. [5]In 1763, the admiralty undertook to enforce the strict letter of the laws; vessels engaged in the contraband commerce were seized and confiscated; and the colonial trade with the West Indies was nearly annihilated.

1764. but the consideration of the proposed act was postponed to the next session of parliament; giving to the Americans, in the mean time, an opportunity of expressing their sentiments with regard to these novel measures of taxation.

1. How did the colonies receive the intelligence of these proceedings, and what did they do in return?

10. [1]The colonies received the intelligence of these proceedings with a general feeling of indignation. They considered them the commencement of a system of revenue, which, if unresisted, opened a prospect of oppression, boundless in extent, and endless in duration. The proposed stamp-act was particularly obnoxious. Numerous political meetings were held; remonstrances were addressed to the king, and the two houses of parliament; and agents were sent to London, to exert all their influence in preventing, if possible, the intended act from becoming a law.

2. What were the arguments urged in favor of taxing the colonies?

11. [2]While England asserted her undoubted right to tax her colonies, the latter strongly denied both the justice and the constitutionality of the claim. The former maintained that the colonies were but a portion of the British empire; that they had ever submitted, as in duty bound, to the jurisdiction of the mother country; that the inhabitants of the colonies were as much represented in parliament as the great majority of the English nation; that the taxes proposed were but a moderate interest for the immense sums which had already been bestowed in the defence of the colonies, and which would still be required, for their protection; and that protection itself is the ground that gives the right of taxation.

3. What were the arguments opposed to taxation?

12. [3]On the other hand it was maintained, as a fundamental principle, that taxation and representation are inseparable; that the colonies were neither actually nor virtually represented in the British parliament; and that, if their property might be taken from them without their consent, there would be no limit to the oppression which might be exercised over them. They said they had hitherto supposed, that the assistance which Great Britain had given them, was offered from motives of humanity, and not as the price of their liberty; and if she now wished pay for it, she must make an allowance for the assistance she herself had received from the colonies, and for the advantages she had gained by her oppressive restrictions on American commerce; and that, as for future protection, the colonies had full confidence in their ability to defend themselves against any foreign enemy. 1764.

13. [1]Notwithstanding the murmurs which had arisen from every quarter, the British ministers were not to be diverted from their plan; and early in 1765, the stamp act passed[a] the House of Commons by a majority of five to one,—the House of Lords,[b] without any opposition,—and soon after received[c] the royal assent. This act ordained that instruments of writing, such as deeds, bonds, notes, and printed pamphlets, almanacs, newspapers, &c., should be executed on stamped paper; for which a duty should be paid to the crown. The act was to go into operation on the first day of November of the same year. 1765.

14. [2]When the news of the passage of this act reached America, a general indignation spread through the country; breaking forth, in some places, in acts of outrage and violence; and, in others, assuming the spirit of calm but determined resistance. [3]At Boston and Philadelphia, the bells were muffled and rung a funeral peal; at New York, the act was carried through the streets with a death's head affixed to it, and styled "The folly of England and the ruin of America." [4]The stamps themselves, in many places, were seized and destroyed; the houses of those who sided with the government were plundered; the stamp officers were compelled to resign; and the doctrine was openly avowed, that England had no right to tax America.

2. In what manner was the indignation of the colonies manifested?

3. At Boston and Philadelphia?

At New York?

4. What is said of the stamps, and the stamp officers, and what doctrine was openly avowed?

15. [5]In the assembly of Virginia, Patrick Henry introduced[d] a series of seven resolutions; the first four asserting the rights and privileges of the colonists; the fifth declaring the exclusive right of that assembly to tax the inhabitants of that colony; and the other two asserting that the people were "not bound to yield obedience to any law or ordinance whatsoever," designed to impose taxation upon them, other than the laws and ordinances of the general assembly; and that any person who, "By writing or speaking," should

1. What were Patrick Henry's remarks?

16. [1]In the heat of the discussion which followed, Henry boldly denounced the policy of the British government; and, carried by the fervor of his zeal beyond the bounds of prudence, he declared that the king had acted the part of a tyrant. Alluding to the fate of other tyrants, he exclaimed, "Cæsar had his Brutus, Charles I. his Cromwell, and George the Third,"—here pausing a moment until the cry of "Treason, treason," had ended,—he added, "may profit by their example. If this be treason, make the most of it."

a. May 29.

2. What was done with the resolutions?

17. [2]After a violent debate, the first five resolutions were carried[a] by the bold eloquence of Henry, though by a small majority. The other two were considered too audacious and treasonable, to be admitted, even by the warmest friends of America. On the following day, in the absence of Henry, the fifth resolution was rescinded; but the whole had already gone forth to the country, rousing the people to a more earnest assertion of their rights, and kindling a more lively enthusiasm n favor of liberty.

3. What was done by the Assembly of Massachusetts?

b. June 6.

18. [3]The assembly of Massachusetts had been moved by a kindred spirit; and before the news of the proceedings in Virginia reached them, they had taken[b] the decisive step of calling a congress of deputies from the several colonies, to meet in the ensuing October, a few weeks before the day appointed for the stamp act to go into operation. [4]In the mean time the popular feeling against the stamp act continued to increase; town and country meetings were held in every colony; associations were formed; inflammatory speeches were made; and angry resolutions were adopted; and, in all directions, every measure was taken to keep up and aggravate the popular discontent.

4. What was the state of popular feeling, and how exhibited?

5. Give an account of the proceedings of the first Colonial Congress.

19. [5]In the midst of the excitement, which was still increasing in violence, the FIRST COLONIAL CONGRESS met[c] at New York, on the first Tuesday in October. Nine colonies were represented, by twenty-eight delegates. Timothy Ruggles, of Massachusetts, was chosen president. After mature deliberation, the congress agreed on a DECLARATION OF RIGHTS and a statement of grievances. They asserted, in strong terms, the right of the colonies to be exempted from all taxes not imposed by their own representatives. They also concurred in a petition to the king, and prepared a memorial to each house of parliament. 1765.

20. [1]The proceedings were approved by all the members, except Mr. Ruggles of Massachusetts, and Mr. Ogden of New Jersey; but the deputies of three of the colonies had not been authorized by their respective legislatures to apply to the king or parliament. The petition and memorials were, therefore, signed by the delegates of six colonies only; but all the rest, whether represented or not, afterwards approved the measures adopted.

1. By whom were the proceedings approved, and by whom signed?

21. [2]On the arrival of the first of November, the day on which the stamp act was to go into operation, scarcely a sheet of the numerous bales of stamped paper which had been sent to America, was to be found in the colonies. Most of it had been destroyed, or reshipped to England. [3]The first of November was kept as a day of mourning. Shops and stores were closed; the vessels displayed their flags at half mast; bells were muffled and tolled as for a funeral; effigies were hung and burned; and every thing was done to manifest the determined opposition of the people to the act, its authors, and advocates.

2. What is said of the arrival of the first of November?

3. How was the day kept?

22. [4]As, by the terms of the act, no legal business could be transacted without the use of stamped paper, business was, for a time, suspended. The courts were closed; marriages ceased; vessels were delayed in the harbors; and all the social and mercantile affairs of a continent stagnated at once. By degrees, however, things resumed their usual course: law and business transactions were written on unstamped paper; and the whole machinery of society went on as before, without regard to the act of parliament.

4. What effect had the Stamp Act on business transactions?

23. [5]About this time the associations of the "Sons of Liberty" assumed an extent and importance which exerted great influence on subsequent events. These societies, forming a powerful combination of the defenders of liberty throughout all the colonies, denounced the stamp act as a flagrant outrage on the British con-

1. What non-importation agreements were entered into?

24. [1]The merchants of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, and, subsequently, of many other places, entered into engagements with each other to import no more goods from Great Britain, until the stamp act should be repealed. [2]Individuals and families denied themselves the use of all foreign luxuries; articles of domestic manufacture came into general use; and the trade with Great Britain was almost entirely suspended.

2. What course was taken by individuals and families? The effect?

3. How was the news of these proceedings received in England, and what change of ministry occurred?

25. [3]When the accounts of the proceedings in America were transmitted to England, they were received, by the government, with resentment and alarm. Fortunately, however, the former ministry had been dismissed; and, in the place of Lord Grenville, the Marquis of Rockingham, a friend of America, had been appointed first lord of the treasury. [4]To the new ministry it was obvious that the odious stamp act must be repealed, or that the Americans must, by force of arms, be reduced to submission. The former being deemed the wiser course, a resolution to repeal was introduced into parliament.

4. What course was taken by the new ministry?

5. Give an account of the proceedings which attended the repeal of the Stamp Act.

1766. March.

26. [5]A long and angry debate followed. The resolution was violently opposed by Lord Grenville and his adherents; and as warmly advocated by Mr. Pitt, in the House of Commons, and by Lord Camden in the House of Peers. Mr. Pitt boldly justified the colonists in opposing the stamp act. [6]"You have no right," said he, "to tax America. I rejoice that America has resisted. Three millions of our fellow-subjects, so lost to every sense of virtue, as tamely to give up their liberties, would be fit instruments to make slaves of the rest." He concluded by expressing his deliberate judgment, that the stamp act "ought to be repealed, absolutely, totally, and immediately."

6. What were some of Mr. Pitt's remarks?

a. March 18.

7. By what was the repeal accompanied?

27. [7]The repeal was at length carried;[a] but it was accompanied by a declaratory act, designed as a kind of salvo to the national honor, affirming that parliament had power to bind the colonies in all cases whatsoever.

[1]The repeal was received with great joy, in London, by the manufacturers and the friends of America. The shipping in the river Thames displayed their colors, and houses were illuminated throughout the city. [2]The news was received in America with lively expressions of joy and gratitude. Public thanksgivings were held; the importation of British goods was again encouraged; and a general calm, without a parallel in history, immediately succeeded the storm which had raged with such threatening violence. 1766.

1. How was it received in London?

2. In America?

28. [3]Other events, however, soon fanned the flame of discord anew. The passage of the declaratory act might have been a sufficient warning that the repeal of the stamp act was but a truce in the war against American rights. [4]The Rockingham ministry having been dissolved, a new cabinet was formed[a] under Mr. Pitt, who was created Earl of Chatham. [5]While Mr. Pitt was confined by sickness, in the country, Mr. Townsend, chancellor of the exchequer, revived the scheme of taxing America. By him a bill was introduced into parliament, imposing duties on glass, paper, painters' colors, and tea.

5. What new scheme of taxing America was introduced?

29. [6]In the absence of Mr. Pitt the bill passed with but little opposition, and was approved[b] by the king. [7]A bill was also passed establishing a board of trade in the colonies, independent of colonial legislation; and another, suspending the legislative power of the assembly of New York, until it should furnish the king's troops with certain supplies at the expense of the colony. [8]The excitement produced in America, by the passage of these bills, was scarcely less than that occasioned by the passage of the stamp act, two years before. 1767.

b. June 29.

7. What other obnoxious bills were passed?

30. [9]The colonial assemblies promptly adopted spirited resolutions against the odious enactments; new associations, in support of domestic manufactures, and against the use and importation of British fabrics, were entered into; the political writers of the day filled the columns of the public papers with earnest appeals to the people; and, already, the legislative authority of parliament over the colonies, instead of being longer the subject of doubt, began to be boldly denied. The "Massachusetts circular?"

31. [1]This circular highly displeased the British ministry, who instructed the governor of Massachusetts to require the assembly, in his majesty's name, to "rescind" the resolution adopting the circular; and to express their "disapprobation of that rash and hasty proceeding." [2]The assembly, however, were not intimidated. They passed a nearly unanimous vote not to rescind; and citing, as an additional cause of complaint, this attempt to restrain their right of deliberation, reaffirmed their opinions in still more energetic language. [3]Governor Bernard then dissolved the assembly, but not before they had prepared a list of accusations against him, and petitioned the king for his removal.

1. What then did the British ministry require?

2. What did the Assembly do?

3. The Governor?

32. [4]These proceedings were soon after followed by a violent tumult in Boston. A sloop having been seized[b] by the custom-house officers for violating some of the new commercial regulations, the people assembled in crowds, attacked the houses of the officers, assaulted their persons, and, finally, obliged them to take refuge in Castle William,* situated at the entrance of the harbor. [5]At the request of the governor, who had complained of the refractory spirit of the Bostonians, General Gage, the commander-in-chief of the British forces in America, was ordered to station a military force in Boston, to overawe the citizens, and protect the custom-house officers in the discharge of their duties.

[7]The selectmen of Boston having peremptorily refused to provide quarters for the soldiers, the governor ordered the state-house to be opened for their reception. The imposing display of military force served only to excite the indignation of the inhabitants; the most irritating language passed between the soldiers and the citizens; the former looking upon the latter as rebels, and the latter regarding the former as the instruments of a most odious tyranny. 1768.

34. [1]Early in the following year, both houses of parliament went a step beyond all that had preceded—censuring, in the strongest terms, the conduct of the people of Massachusetts,—approving the employment of force against the rebellious, and praying the king to direct the governor of Massachusetts to cause those guilty of treason to be arrested and sent to England for trial. [2]These proceedings of parliament called forth, from the colonial assemblies, still stronger resolutions, declaring the exclusive right of the people to tax themselves, and denying the right of his majesty to remove an offender out of the country for trial. 1769.

1. What odious proceedings of parliament followed? Feb. 1769

2. How were they received by the colonial assemblies?

35. [3]The refractory assemblies of Virginia and North Carolina were soon after dissolved by their governors. The governor of Massachusetts having called upon the assembly of that province to provide funds for the payment of the troops quartered among them, they resolved that they never would make such provision. The governor, therefore, prorogued the assembly, and, soon after being recalled, was succeeded[a] in office by Lieutenant-governor Hutchinson.

3. What events occurred in Virginia, Carolina, and Massachusetts?

a. Aug.

36. [4]In March of the following year, an event occurred in Boston, which produced a great sensation throughout America. An affray having taken place between some citizens and soldiers, the people became greatly exasperated; and, on the evening of the 5th of March, a crowd surrounded, and insulted a portion of the city guard, under Captain Preston, and dared them to fire. The soldiers at length fired, and three of the populace were killed, and several badly wounded. 1770.

37. [5]The greatest commotion immediately prevailed. The bells were rung, and, in a short time, several thousands of the citizens had assembled under arms. 1. What is said of Lord North's partial repeal act?

38. [1]On the very day of the Boston outrage, Lord North, who had been placed at the head of the administration, proposed to parliament the repeal of all duties imposed by the act of 1767, except that on tea. The bill passed, though with great opposition, were not satisfied with this partial concession, and the non-importation agreements were still continued against the purchase and use of tea.

2. What was done in 1772?

39. [2]In 1772, by a royal regulation, provision was made for the support of the governor and judges of Massachusetts, out of the revenues of the province, independent of any action of the colonial assemblies.

3. How regarded by the Assembly?

[3]This measure the assembly declared to be an "Infraction of the rights of the inhabitants granted by the royal charter."

1773.

4. What were the next measures of the British ministry?

40. [4]In 1773, the British ministry attempted to effect, by artful policy, what open measures, accompanied by coercion, had failed to accomplish. A bill passed parliament, allowing the British East India Company to export their tea to America, free from the duties which they had before paid in England; retaining those only which were to be paid in America. [5]It was thought that the Americans would pay the small duty of three-pence per pound, as they would, even then, obtain tea cheaper in America than in England.

6. Why did the colonies resist the project?

41. [6]In this, however, the parliament was mistaken. Although no complaint of oppressive taxation could be made to the measure, yet the whole principle against which the colonies had contended was involved in it; and they determined, at all hazards, to defeat the project.

7. What became of the tea sent to New York and Philadelphia?

[7]Vast quantities of tea were soon sent to America; but the ships destined for New York and Philadelphia, finding the ports closed against them, were obliged to return to England, without effecting a landing.

42. [1]In Charleston the tea was landed, but was not permitted to be offered for sale; and, being stored in damp cellars, it finally perished. [2]The tea designed for Boston had been consigned to the particular friends of Governor Hutchinson, and permission to return it to England was positively refused. But the people as obstinately refused to allow it to be landed. In this position of the controversy, a party of men, disguised as Indians, boarded the ships; and, in the presence of thousands of spectators, broke open three hundred and forty-two chests of tea, and emptied[a] their contents into the harbor. 1773.

43. [3]In the spirit of revenge for these proceedings, parliament soon after passed[b] the Boston Port Bill; which forbade the landing and shipping of goods, wares, and merchandise, at Boston, and removed the custom-house, with its dependencies, to Salem. [4]The people of Salem, however, nobly refused to raise their own fortunes on the ruins of their suffering neighbors; and the inhabitants of Marblehead* generously offered the merchants of Boston the use of their harbor, wharves, and warehouses, free of expense. 1774.

b. March 31.

3. What is said of the Boston Port Bill?

4. Of the generosity of Salem and Marblehead?

44. [5]Soon after, the charter of Massachusetts was subverted;[c] and the governor was authorized to send to another colony, or to England, for trial, any person indicted for murder, or any other capital offence, committed in aiding the magistrates in the discharge of their duties. [6]The Boston Port Bill occasioned great suffering in Boston. The assembly of the province resolved that "The impolicy, injustice, inhumanity, and cruelty of the act, exceeded all their powers of expression." [7]The Virginia assembly appointed the 1st of June, the day on which the bill was to go into effect, as a day of "fasting, humiliation, and prayer."

5. What is said of the final measure of determined oppression on the part of England?

48. [5]As the last measures of determined oppression, a bill was passed for restraining the commerce of the New England colonies; which was afterwards extended to embrace all the provinces, except New York and North Carolina. The inhabitants of Massachusetts were declared rebels; and several ships of the line, and ten thousand troops, were ordered to America, to aid in reducing the rebellious colonies to submission.

6. Of the determined resistance of the Americans?

49. [6]The Americans, on the other hand, having no longer any hope of reconciliation, and determined to resist oppression, anxiously waited for the fatal moment to arrive, when the signal of war should be given. Though few in numbers, and feeble in resources, when compared with the power which sought to crush them, they were confident of the justice of their cause, and the rectitude of their purposes; and they resolved, if no other alternative were left them, to die freemen, rather than live slaves.

PART III.

AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Of what does Part III. treat?

CHAPTER I.

EVENTS OF 1775.

Of what does Chapter I. treat?

1. [1]In the beginning of April, the royal troops in Boston numbered nearly 3000 men. [2]With so large a force at his disposal, General Gage indulged the hope, either of awing the provincials into submission, or of being able to quell any sudden outbreak of rebellion. [3]Deeming it important to get possession of the stores and ammunition which the people had collected at various places, on the night of the 18th of April he secretly despatched a force of eight hundred men, to destroy the stores at Concord,* sixteen miles from Boston.

1. What is said of the royal troops in Boston?
2. Of the views of Gen. Gage?
3. What measures were taken by him?

* Concord is in Middlesex county, sixteen miles N.W. from Boston. A marble monument, erected in 1836, marks the spot where the first of the enemy fell in the war of the revolution.

1775. 2. [1]Notwithstanding the great precautions which had been taken to prevent the intelligence of this expedition from reaching the country, it became known to some of the patriots in Boston, who despatched confidential messengers along the supposed route; and early on the morning of the 19th, the firing of cannon, and the ringing of bells, gave the alarm that the royal troops were in motion.

1. How did intelligence of the expedition reach the country?

3. [2]At Lexington* a number of the militia had assembled, as early as two o'clock in the morning; but as the intelligence respecting the regulars was uncertain, they were dismissed, with orders to appear again at beat of drum. At five o'clock, they collected a second time, to the number of seventy, under command of Captain Parker. The British, under Colonel Smith and Major Pitcairn, soon made their appearance. The latter officer rode up to the militia, and called out, "Disperse, you rebels, throw down your arms and disperse;" but not being obeyed, he discharged his pistol, and ordered his soldiers to fire. Several of the militia were killed, and the rest dispersed.

2. What events occurred at Lexington?

4. [3]The detachment then proceeded to Concord, and destroyed a part of the stores; but the militia of the country having begun to assemble in numbers, a skirmish ensued, and several were killed on both sides. [4]The British then commenced a hasty retreat,—the Americans pursuing, and keeping up a continual fire upon them. Fortunately for the British, they were met at Lexington by a reenforcement of nine hundred men with two field-pieces, under Lord Percy. The united forces then moved rapidly to Charlestown, and, the following day, crossed over to Boston. [5]During this expedition, the British lost, in killed, wounded, and missing, about two hundred and eighty;—the provincials, about ninety.

3. What at Concord?

4. Give an account of the retreat of the British.

scene of action; and, in a few days, a line of encampment was formed from Roxbury to the river Mystic,* and the British forces in Boston were environed by an army of 20,000 men. Ammunition, forts, and fortifications, were secured for the use of the provincials; and the most active measures were taken for the public defence. 1775.

6. [1]A number of volunteers from Connecticut and Vermont, under Colonel Ethan Allen and Benedict Arnold, formed and executed the plan of seizing the important fortresses of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, on the western shore of Lake Champlain, and commanding the entrance into Canada. The pass of Skeenesborough, now Whitehall,† was likewise secured; and by this fortunate expedition, more than one hundred pieces of cannon, and other munitions of war, fell into the hands of the provincials.

7. [2]These events were soon followed by others of still greater importance, in the vicinity of Boston. The British troops had received[a] reinforcements, under three distinguished generals,—Howe, Clinton, and Burgoyne; which, with the garrison, formed a well-disciplined army, of from ten to twelve thousand men. [3]General Gage, being now prepared to act with more decision and vigor, issued[b] a proclamation, declaring those in arms rebels and traitors; and offering pardon to such as would return to their allegiance, and resume their peaceful occupations. From this indulgence, however, Samuel Adams and John Hancock, two distinguished patriots, were excepted; as their crimes were deemed too flagitious to admit of pardon.

8. [4]As the British were evidently prepared to penetrate into the country, the Americans first strengthened their intrenchments across Boston neck; but afterwards, learning that the views of the British had changed, and were then directed towards the peninsula of Charlestown, they resolved to defeat this new project of the enemy. [5]Orders were therefore given

1. What was done by him?

9. [1]By some mistake, the detachment proceeded to Breed's Hill,† an eminence within cannon shot of Boston; and, by the dawn of day, had erected a square redoubt, capable of sheltering them from the fire of the enemy. [2]Nothing could exceed the astonishment of the British, at beholding, on the following morning, this daring advance of the Americans. As the eminence overlooked the city of Boston, it was immediately perceived that a powerful battery, planted there, would soon compel the British to evacuate the place.

2. How was this daring advance regarded?

3. What measures were taken by the British?

[3]A heavy fire was therefore commenced on the Americans, from vessels in the harbor, and from a fortification on Copp's Hill, in Boston; but with little effect; and about noon, a force of three thousand regulars, commanded by General Howe, crossed over to Charlestown, in boats, with the design of storming the works.

approaching battle. [1]While the British were advancing, orders were given by General Gage to set fire to the village of Charlestown; by which wanton act two thousand people were deprived of their habitations; and property, to a large amount, perished in the flames. 1775.

1. What is said of the burning of Charlestown?

11. [2]The Americans waited in silence the advance of the enemy to within ten rods of the redoubt, when they opened upon them so deadly a fire of musketry, that whole ranks were cut down; the line was broken, and the royal troops retreated in disorder and precipitation. With difficulty rallied by their officers, they again reluctantly advanced, and were a second time beaten back by the same destructive and incessant stream of fire. At this critical moment General Clinton arrived with reenforcements. By his exertions, the British troops were again rallied, and a third time advanced to the charge, which at length was successful.

2. Give an account of the battle.

12. [3]The attack was directed against the redoubt at three several points. The cannon from the fleet had obtained a position commanding the interior of the works, which were battered in front at the same time. [4]Attacked by a superior force,—their ammunition failing,—and fighting at the point of the bayonet, without bayonets themselves,—the provincials now slowly evacuated their intrenchments, and drew off with an order not to have been expected from newly-levied soldiers. [5]They retreated across Charlestown Neck, with inconsiderable loss, although exposed to a galling fire from a ship of war, and floating batteries, and intrenched themselves on Prospect Hill,* still maintaining the command of the entrance to Boston.

1. What were the measures of Congress at this time?

b. Dated July 6.

2. What language did they use?

14. [1]In the mean time the American congress had assembled[a] at Philadelphia. Again they addressed the king, and the people of Great Britain and Ireland, and, at the same time, published[b] to the world the reasons of their appeal to arms. [2]"We are reduced," said they, "to the alternative of choosing an unconditional submission to the tyranny of irritated ministers, or resistance by force. The latter is our choice. We have counted the cost of this contest, and find nothing so dreadful as voluntary slavery." [3]Having voted to raise an army of 20,000 men, they unanimously elected[c] George Washington commander-in-chief of all the forces raised or to be raised for the defence of the colonies, resolving that they would "assist him and adhere to him, with their lives and fortunes, in the defence of American liberty."

3. What other measures were adopted?

c. June 15.

4. On what terms did Washington accept the command?

5. How was the army organized and arranged?

15. [4]Washington, who was present, with great modesty and dignity accepted the appointment, but declined all compensation for his services, asking only the remuneration of his expenses. [5]At the same time the higher departments of the army were organized by the appointment of four major-generals, one adjutant, and eight brigadier-generals. Washington soon repaired[d] to Cambridge, to take command of the army, which then amounted to about 14,000 men. These were now arranged in three divisions;[e] the right wing, under General Ward, at Roxbury; the left, under General Lee, at Prospect Hill; and the centre at Cambridge, under the commander-in-chief.

6. What difficulties had Washington to encounter?

7. What objects were soon effected?

16. [6]In entering upon the discharge of his duties, Washington had a difficult task to perform. The troops under his command were undisciplined militia, —hastily collected,—unaccustomed to subordination,— and destitute of tents, ammunition, and regular supplies of provisions. [7]But by the energy and skill of the commander-in-chief, aided, particularly, by General Gates, an officer of experience, order and discipline were soon introduced; stores were collected, and the American army was soon enabled to carry on, in due form, a regular siege. [1]General Gage having been recalled, he was succeeded by Sir William Howe, in the chief command of the English forces in America. 1775.

1. What change occurred in the British army?

17. [2]During the summer, royal authority ended in the colonies;—most of the royal governors fleeing from the popular indignation, and taking refuge on board the English shipping. Lord Dunmore, the governor of Virginia, having seized[a] a quantity of the public powder, and conveyed it on board a ship, the people assembled in arms, under Patrick Henry, and demanded a restitution of the powder, or its value. Payment was made, and the people quietly dispersed.

2. What difficulties occurred with the royal governors?

a. May.

18. [3]Other difficulties occurring, Lord Dunmore retired on board a man-of-war,—armed a few ships,—and, by offering freedom to such slaves as would join the royal standard, collected a force of several hundred men, with which he attacked[b] the provincials near* Norfolk;† but he was defeated with a severe loss. Soon after, a ship of war arriving from England, Lord Dunmore gratified his revenge by reducing Norfolk to ashes.[c]

19. [4]The capture of Ticonderoga and Crown Point having opened the gates of Canada, congress resolved to seize the favorable opportunity for invading that province; hoping thereby to anticipate the British, who were evidently preparing to attack the colonies through the same quarter. [5]For this purpose, a body of troops from New York and New England was placed under the command of Generals Schuyler and Montgomery, who passed up Lake Champlain, and, on the 10th of September, appeared before St. John's,‡ the first British post in Canada.

1. What course did he pursue?

21. [1]This enterprising officer, having first induced the Indians to remain neutral, in a few days returned to St. John's, and opened a battery against it; but want of ammunition seriously retarded the progress of the siege. While in this situation, by a sudden movement he surprised, and, after a siege of a few days, captured[a] Fort Chambly,* a few miles north of St. John's, by which he obtained several pieces of cannon, and a large quantity of powder. [2]During the siege of St. John's, Colonel Ethan Allen, having with extraordinary rashness forced his way to Montreal, with only eighty men, was defeated, captured, and sent to England in irons.

a. Oct. 18.

2. What is said of Col. Allen?

3. When did St. John's surrender, and what events followed?

22. [3]On the third of November St. John's surrendered, after which Montgomery proceeded rapidly to Montreal, which capitulated on the 13th; Governor Carleton having previously escaped with a small force to Quebec. Having left a garrison in Montreal, and also in the Forts Chambly and St. John's, Montgomery, with a corps of little more than three hundred men, the sole residue of his army, marched towards Quebec, expecting to meet there another body of troops which had been sent from Cambridge to act in concert with him. [4]This detachment, consisting of about a thousand men, under the command of General Arnold, had, with amazing difficulty and hardships, passed up the Kennebec, a river of Maine, and crossing the mountains, had descended the Chaudiere,[b]† to Point Levi, opposite Quebec, where it arrived on the 9th of November.

tired to Point aux Trembles, twenty miles above Quebec, and there awaited the arrival of Montgomery.

24. [1]On the arrival[a] of the latter, the united forces, numbering in all but nine hundred effective men, marched to Quebec, then garrisoned by a superior force under command of Governor Carleton. A summons to surrender was answered by firing upon the bearer of the flag. After a siege of three weeks, during which the troops suffered severely from continued toil, and the rigors of a Canadian winter, it was resolved, as the only chance of success, to attempt the place by assault.

1. What occurred after the arrival of Montgomery?

25. [2]Accordingly, on the last[b] day of the year, between four and five o'clock in the morning, in the midst of a heavy storm of snow, the American troops, in four columns, were put in motion. While two of the columns were sent to make a feigned attack on the Upper Town,[c] Montgomery and Arnold, at the head of their respective divisions, attacked opposite quarters of the Lower Town.[c] [3]Montgomery, advancing upon the bank of the river by the way of Cape Diamond, had already passed the first barrier, when the single discharge of a cannon, loaded with grape shot, proved fatal to him,—killing, at the same time, several of his officers who stood near him.

2. Describe the plan of attack.

c. See Note and Map, p. 189.

3. Give an account of the fall of Montgomery.

26. [4]The soldiers shrunk back on seeing their general fall, and the officer next in command ordered a retreat. In the mean time Arnold had entered the town, but, being soon severely wounded, was carried to the hospital, almost by compulsion. Captain Morgan, afterwards distinguished by his exploits[d] at the South, then took the command; but, after continuing the contest several hours, against far superior and constantly increasing numbers, and at length vainly attempting a retreat, he was forced to surrender the remnant of his band prisoners of war.

4. What other events happened, and what was the result of the attack?

d. See p. 269

27. [5]The fall of Montgomery was deplored by friends and foes. Born of a distinguished Irish family, he had early entered the profession of arms;—had distinguished himself in the preceding French and Indian war;—had shared in the labors and triumph of Wolfe; and, ardently attached to the cause of liberty, had

1. How was his memory honored by congress; and by New York?

28. [2]After the repulse, Arnold retired with the remainder of his army to the distance of three miles above Quebec, where he received occasional reenforcements; but at no time did the army consist of more than 3000 men, of whom more than one half were generally unfit for duty. [3]General Thomas, who had been appointed to succeed Montgomery, arrived early in May; soon after which, Governor Carleton receiving reenforcements from England, the Americans were obliged to make a hasty retreat; leaving all their stores, and many of their sick, in the power of the enemy.

2. What was the condition of the army after the repulse?

3. What is said of the retreat of the army?

29. [4]The latter were treated with great kindness and humanity, and after being generously fed and clothed, were allowed a safe return to their homes; a course of policy which very much strengthened the British interests in Canada. [5]At the mouth of the Sorel the Americans were joined by several regiments, but were still unable to withstand the forces of the enemy. Here General Thomas died of the small-pox, a disease which had prevailed extensively in the American camp. After retreating from one post to another, by the 18th of June the Americans had entirely evacuated Canada.

4. What treatment did the sick receive?

CHAPTER II.

EVENTS OF 1776.

Of what does Chapter II. treat?

1. [6]At the close of the year 1775, the regular troops under Washington, in the vicinity of Boston, numbered but little more than 9000 men; but by the most strenuous exertions on the part of congress, and the commander-in-chief, the number was augmented, by the middle of February, to 14,000. [7]Perceiving that

6. What is said of the American forces in the vicinity of Boston?

7. What course did congress urge Washington to take?

this force would soon be needed to protect other parts of the American territory, congress urged Washington to take more decisive measures, and, if possible, to dislodge the enemy from their position in Boston. 1776.

2. [1]In a council of his officers, Washington proposed a direct assault; but the decision was unanimous against it; the officers alledging, that, without incurring so great a risk, but by occupying the heights[a] of Dorchester, which commanded the entire city, the enemy might be forced to evacuate the place. [2]Acquiescing in this opinion, Washington directed a severe cannonade[b] upon the city; and while the enemy were occupied in another quarter, a party of troops, with intrenching tools, on the evening of the fourth of March, took possession of the heights, unobserved by the enemy; and, before morning, completed a line of fortifications, which commanded the harbor and the city.

1. What plan was proposed by Washington, and what by his officers?

a. See Map, p. 210.

2. What events followed?

b. March 2d, 3d, 4th.

3. [3]The view of these works excited the astonishment of the British general, who saw that he must immediately dislodge the Americans, or evacuate the town. [4]An attack was determined upon; but a furious storm rendering the harbor impassable, the attack was necessarily deferred; while, in the mean time, the Americans so strengthened their works, as to make the attempt to force them hopeless. No resource was now left to General Howe but immediate evacuation.

3. How did the British general regard the works of the Americans?

4. What prevented an attack; and what, finally, was the only resource left to the British?

4. [5]As his troops and shipping were exposed to the fire of the American batteries, an informal agreement was made, that he should be allowed to retire unmolested, upon condition that he would abstain from burning the city. [6]Accordingly, on the 17th, the British troops, amounting to more than 7000 soldiers, accompanied by fifteen hundred families of loyalists, quietly evacuated Boston, and sailed for Halifax. [7]Scarcely was the rear-guard out of the city, when Washington entered it, to the great joy of the inhabitants, with colors flying, and drums beating, and all the forms of victory and triumph.

5. What agreement was made?

March 17.

6. What is said of the departure of the British?

7. Of the entrance of Washington into Boston?

8. What circumstances called Washington to New York, and what disposition was made of the troops?

5. [8]Washington, ignorant of the plans of General Howe, and of the direction which the British fleet had taken, was not without anxiety for the city of New 1776. York. Therefore, after having placed Boston in a state of defence, the main body of the army was put in motion towards New York, where it arrived early in April.

1. What is said of Gen. Lee; of Sir Henry Clinton; and of the plan of the British?

6. [1]General Lee, with a force of Connecticut militia had arrived before the main body, about the time that Sir Henry Clinton, with a fleet from England, appeared off Sandy Hook. Clinton, foiled in his attempt against New York, soon sailed south; and at Cape Fear River was joined[a] by Sir Peter Parker, who had sailed[b] with a large squadron directly from Europe, having on board two thousand five hundred troops, under the command of the Earl of Cornwallis. The plan of the British was now to attempt the reduction of Charleston.

2. To what command had Gen. Lee been appointed; and what is said of the preparations to receive the enemy?

3. What had been done for the defence of Charleston?

7. [2]General Lee, who had been appointed to command the American forces in the Southern States, had pushed on rapidly from New York, anxiously watching the progress of Clinton; and the most vigorous preparations were made throughout the Carolinas, for the reception of the hostile fleet. [3]Charleston had been fortified, and a fort on Sullivan's Island,* commanding the channel leading to the town, had been put in a state of defence, and the command given to Colonel Moultrie.

June 28.

8. [4]Early in June, the British armament appeared[c] off the city, and having landed a strong force under General Clinton, on Long Island,[d] east of Sullivan's Island, after considerable delay advanced against the fort, and commenced a heavy bombardment on the morning of the 28th. Three of the ships that had attempted to take a station between the fort and the city were stranded. Two of them were enabled to get off much damaged, but the third was abandoned and burned. [5]It was the design of Clinton to cross the narrow channel which separates Long Island from Sullivan's Island, and assail the fort by land, during the attack by the ships; but, unexpectedly, the channel was found too deep to be forded, and a strong force, under Colonel Thompson, was waiting on the opposite bank ready to receive him. 1776.

9. [1]The garrison of the fort, consisting of only about 400 men, mostly militia, acted with the greatest coolness and gallantry,—aiming with great precision and effect, in the midst of the tempest of balls hailed upon them by the enemy's squadron. [2]After an engagement of eight hours, from eleven in the forenoon until seven in the evening, the vessels drew off and abandoned the enterprise. [3]In a few days the fleet, with the troops on board, sailed for New York, where the whole British force had been ordered to assemble.

1. What is said of the conduct of the garrison?

2. Of the result of the action?

3. Of the departure of the fleet?

10. [4]In this engagement the vessels of the enemy were seriously injured, and the loss in killed and wounded exceeded 200 men. The admiral himself, and Lord Campbell, late governor of the province, were wounded,—the latter mortally. The loss of the garrison was only 10 killed and 22 wounded. [5]The fort, being built of palmetto, a wood resembling cork, was little damaged. In honor of its brave commander it has since been called Fort Moultrie. [6]This fortunate repulse of the enemy placed the affairs of South Carolina, for a time, in a state of security, and inflamed the minds of the Americans with new ardor.

4. What was the loss on each side?

5. What is said of the fort and its brave commander?

6. What were the effects of this repulse of the enemy?

11. [7]The preparations which England had recently been making for the reduction of the colonies, were truly formidable. By a treaty with several of the German princes, the aid of 17,000 German or Hessian troops had been engaged; 25,000 additional English troops, and a large fleet, had been ordered to America; amounting, in all, to 55,000 men, abundantly supplied with provisions, and all the necessary munitions of war; and more than a million of dollars had been voted to defray the extraordinary expenses of the year.

7. Give an account of the formidable warlike preparations of England.

12. [8]Yet with all this threatening array against them, and notwithstanding all the colonies were now in arms against the mother country, they had hitherto professed allegiance to the British king, and had continually protested that they were contending only for their just rights and a redress of grievances. [9]But as it became more apparent that England would abandon 1776. none of her claims, and would accept nothing but the total dependence and servitude of her colonies, the feelings of the latter changed; and sentiments of loyalty gave way to republican principles, and the desire for independence.

1. What did congress recommend to the colonies?

13. [1]Early in May, congress, following the advance of public opinion, recommended to the colonies, no longer to consider themselves as holding or exercising any powers under Great Britain, but to adopt "Such governments as might best conduce to the happiness and safety of the people." [2]The recommendation was generally complied with, and state constitutions were adopted, and representative governments established, virtually proclaiming all separation from the mother country, and entire independence of the British crown. [3]Several of the colonies, likewise, instructed their delegates to join in all measures which might be agreed to in congress, for the advancement of the interests, safety, and dignity of the colonies.

2. How was the recommendation complied with?

3. What instructions did some colonies give to their delegates?

June 7.

4. What resolution was offered in congress by Richard Henry Lee?

14. [4]On the 7th of June, Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, offered a resolution in congress, declaring that "The United Colonies are, and ought to be, free and independent states;—that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown;—and that all political connexion between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved." [5]This resolution was debated with great earnestness, eloquence, and ability; and although it finally passed, it at first encountered a strong opposition from some of the most zealous partisans of American liberty. Having at length been adopted by a bare majority, the final consideration of the subject was postponed to the first of July.

5. How was the resolution received?

6. What committee was appointed, and for what purpose?

15. [6]In the mean time a committee,—consisting of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman, and Robert R. Livingston,—was instructed to prepare a declaration in accordance with the object of the resolution. [7]This paper, principally drawn up by Mr. Jefferson, came up for discussion on the first of July; and, on the fourth, received the assent of the delegates of all the colonies; which thus dissolved their allegiance to the British crown, and declared themselves free and independent, under the name of the thirteen UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. 1776.

16. [1]The declaration of independence was every where received by the people with demonstrations of joy. Public rejoicings were held in various parts of the Union; the ensigns of royalty were destroyed; and nothing was forgotten that might tend to inspire the people with affection for the new order of things, and with the most violent hatred towards Great Britain and her adherents.

1. How did the people manifest their joy on receiving it?

17. [2]Before the declaration of independence, General Howe had sailed[a] from Halifax,—had arrived at Sandy Hook on the 25th of June,—and, on the second of July, had taken possession of Staten Island. Being soon after joined[b] by his brother, Admiral Howe, from England, and by the forces of Clinton from the south, he found himself at the head of an army of 24,000 of the best troops of Europe. Others were expected soon to join him, making, in the whole, an army of 35,000 men. [3]The design of the British was to seize New York, with a force sufficient to keep possession of the Hudson River,—open a communication with Canada, —separate the Eastern from the Middle States,—and overrun the adjacent country at pleasure.

2. What military events occurred about the time of the declaration of independence?

a. June 11.
b. July 12.

3. What was the design of the British?

18. [4]To oppose the designs of the enemy, the American general had collected a force, consisting chiefly of undisciplined militia, amounting to about 27,000 men; but many of these were invalids, and many were unprovided with arms; so that the effective force amounted to but little more than 17,000 men. [5]Soon after the arrival of the fleet, Lord Howe, the British admiral, sent a letter, offering terms of accommodation, and directed to "George Washington, Esq."

4. What forces were at the command of the American general?

5. What is said of the letters that Lord Howe sent to General Washington?

19. This letter Washington declined receiving; asserting that, whoever had written it, it did not express his public station; and that, as a private individual, he could hold no communication with the enemies of his country. A second letter, addressed to "George Washington, &c. &c. &c.," and brought by the adjutant-general of the British army, was in like manner declined. [6]It appeared, however, that the powers of the British generals extended no farther than

6. What powers appeared to have been granted to the British generals?

2. What did the British generals now resolve?

3. Give an account of the landing of the enemy, and their march towards the American camp.

20. [2]The British generals, having gained nothing by their attempts at accommodation, now directing their attention to the prosecution of the war, resolved to strike the first blow without delay. [3]Accordingly, on the 22d of August, the enemy landed on the southern shore of Long Island, near the villages of New Utrecht* and Gravesend;† and having divided their army into three divisions, commenced their march towards the American camp, at Brooklyn, then under the command of General Putnam.

4. Describe the country which separated the two armies.

21. [4]A range of hills, running from the Narrows to Jamaica, separated the two armies. Through these hills were three passes,—one by the Narrows,—a second by the village of Flatbush,‡—and a third by the way of Flatland;§ the latter leading to the right, and intersecting, on the heights, the road which leads from Bedford‖ to Jamaica. [5]General Grant, commanding the left division of the army, proceeded by the Narrows; General Heister directed the centre, composed of the Hessian regiments; and General Clinton the right.

22. [6]Detachments of the Americans, under the command of General Sullivan, guarded the coast, and the road from Bedford to Jamaica. On the evening of the 26th, General Clinton advanced from Flatland,—reached the heights, and, on the morning of the 27th, seized an important defile, which, through carelessness, the Americans had left unguarded. With the morning light he descended with his whole force by the village of Bedford, into the plain which lay between the hills and the American camp. In the mean time Generals Grant and De Heister had engaged nearly the whole American force, which had advanced to defend the defiles on the west—ignorant of the movements of Clinton, who soon fell upon their left flank. 1776.

23. [1]When the approach of Clinton was discovered, the Americans commenced a retreat; but being intercepted by the English, they were driven back upon the Hessians; and thus attacked, both in front and rear, many were killed, and many were made prisoners. Others forced their way through the opposing ranks, and regained the American lines at Brooklyn. [2]During the action, Washington passed over to Brooklyn, where he saw, with inexpressible anguish, the destruction of many of his best troops, but was unable to relieve them.

1. How did the action terminate?

2. What is said of Washington?

24. [3]The American loss was stated by Washington at one thousand, in killed, wounded, and prisoners; and by the British general, at 3,300. Among the prisoners, were Generals Sullivan, Stirling, and Woodhull. The loss of the British was less than 400. [4]The consequences of the defeat were more alarming to the Americans than the loss of their men. The army was dispirited; and as large numbers of the militia were under short engagements of a few weeks, whole regiments deserted and returned to their homes.

3. What losses were sustained on each side?

4. What were the consequences of this defeat?

25. [5]On the following day[a] the enemy encamped in front of the American lines, designing to defer an attack until the fleet could co-operate with the land troops. [6]But Washington, perceiving the impossibility of sustaining his position, profited by the delay; and, on the night of the 29th, silently drew off his troops to New York; nor was it until the sun had dissipated the mist on the following morning, that the English discovered, to their surprise, that the Americans had abandoned their camp, and were already sheltered from pursuit. [7]A descent upon New York being the next design of the enemy, a part of their fleet doubled

2. What positions did the Americans take?

26. [1]In a council of war, held on the 12th of September, the Americans determined to abandon the city; and, accordingly, no time was lost in removing the military stores, which were landed far above, on the western shore of the Hudson. [2]The commander-in-chief retired to the heights of Harlem,* and a strong force was stationed at Kingsbridge,† in the northern part of the island.

[3]On the 15th, a strong detachment of the enemy landed on the east side of New York Island, about three miles above the city, and meeting with little resistance, took a position extending across the island at Bloomingdale,‡ five miles north of the city, and within two miles of the American lines. [4]On the following day[a] a skirmish took place between advanced parties of the armies, in which the Americans gained a decided advantage; although their two principal officers, Colonel Knowlton and Major Leitch, both fell mortally wounded. [5]Washington commended the valor displayed by his troops on this occasion, and the result was highly inspiriting to the army.

28. [6]General Howe, thinking it not prudent to attack the fortified camp of the Americans, next made a movement with the intention of gaining their rear, and cutting off their communication with the Eastern States. [7]With this view, the greater part of the royal army left New York, and passing into the Sound, landed[b] in the vicinity of Westchester;§ while, at the same time, three frigates were despatched up the Hudson, to interrupt the American communications with New Jersey. [8]By the arrival of new forces, the British army now amounted to 35,000 men.

29. [1]Washington, penetrating the designs of the enemy, soon withdrew the bulk of his army from New York Island, and extended it along the western bank of Bronx River,* towards White Plains;† keeping his left in advance of the British right. [2]On the 28th, a partial action was fought at White Plains, in which the Americans were driven back with some loss. 2. Nov. 18. Of the attempt against Fort Lee, and the result?

3. What is said of the retreat of the Americans, and the condition of the army?

31. [1]On the 16th, this fort was attacked by a strong force of the enemy, and after a spirited defence, in which the assailants lost nearly a thousand men, was forced to surrender. [2]Lord Cornwallis crossed[a] the Hudson at Dobbs' Ferry,* with six thousand men, and proceeded against Fort Lee, the garrison of which saved itself by a hasty retreat; but all the baggage and military stores fell into the possession of the victors.

32. [3]The Americans retreated across the Hackensack,† and thence across the Passaic,‡ with forces daily diminishing by the withdrawal of large numbers of the militia, who, dispirited by the late reverses, returned to their homes, as fast as their terms of enlistment expired; so that, by the last of November, scarcely three thousand troops remained in the American army; and these were exposed in an open country, without intrenching tools, and without tents to shelter them from the inclemency of the season.

[4]Newark,§ New Brunswick,‖ Princeton,¶ and Trenton, successively fell into the hands of the enemy, as they were abandoned by the retreating army; and finally, on the eighth of December, Washington crossed the Delaware, then the only barrier which prevented the British from taking possession of Philadelphia. 34. [1]Congress, then in session at Philadelphia, adjourned[a] to Baltimore,* and soon after invested[b] Washington with almost unlimited powers, "To order and direct all things relating to the department and to the operations of war." [2]The British general, awaiting only the freezing of the Delaware to enable him to cross and seize Philadelphia, arranged about 4000 of his German troops along the river, from Trenton to Burlington. Strong detachments occupied Princeton and New Brunswick. The rest of the troops were cantoned about in the villages of New Jersey.

35. [3]On the very day that the American army crossed the Delaware, the British squadron, under Sir Peter Parker, took possession of the island of Rhode Island,[c] together with the neighboring islands, Prudence,[c] and Conanicut;[c] by which the American squadron, under Commodore Hopkins, was blocked up in Providence River, where it remained a long time useless. [4]On the 13th, General Lee, who had been left in command of the forces stationed on the Hudson, having incautiously wandered from the main body, was surprised and taken prisoner by the enemy. His command then devolving on General Sullivan, the latter conducted his troops to join the forces of Washington, which were then increased to nearly seven thousand men.

1. What obstacles were encountered?

37. [1]Generals Ewing and Cadwallader, after the most strenuous efforts, were unable to cross, owing to the extreme cold of the night, and the quantity of floating ice that had accumulated in this part of the river. [2]Washington alone succeeded, but it was three o'clock in the morning[a] before the artillery could be carried over. The troops were then formed into two divisions, commanded by Generals Sullivan and Greene, under whom were Brigadiers Lord Stirling, Mercer, and St. Clair.

a. Dec. 26.

2. Give a particular account of the enterprise; the battle which followed; and the result.

38. Proceeding by different routes, they arrived at Trenton about eight o'clock in the morning, and commenced a nearly simultaneous attack upon the surprised Hessians, who, finding themselves hemmed in by the Americans on the north and west, and by a small creek and the Delaware River on the east and south, were constrained to lay down their arms, and surrender at discretion. About one thousand were made prisoners, and between thirty and forty were killed and wounded. About 600 of the enemy, who were out on a foraging party, escaped to Bordentown.‡ Among the killed was Colonel Rahl, the commanding officer.

3. Why did Washington immediately recross the Delaware?

4. How did this brilliant success affect the public mind?

39. [3]As the British had a strong force at Princeton, and likewise a force yet remaining on the Delaware, superior to the American army, Washington, on the evening of the same day, recrossed into Pennsylvania with his prisoners. [4]This unexpected and brilliant success suddenly elevated the public mind from despondency to extreme confidence. About 1400 soldiers, whose terms of service were on the point of expiring, agreed to remain six weeks longer; and the militia from the neighboring provinces again began to join the army. 1776.

40. [1]The British general, startled by this sudden reanimation of an enemy whom he had already considered vanquished, resolved, though in the depth of winter, to recommence operations. Lord Cornwallis, then in New York, and on the point of sailing for England, hastily returned to New Jersey, with additional troops, to regain the ground that had been lost.

1. What was its effect upon the British general?

41. [2]Nor was Washington disposed to remain idle. On the 28th of December he boldly returned into New Jersey, and took post at Trenton, where the other divisions of the army, which had passed lower down, were ordered to join him. General Heath, stationed at Peekskill, on the Hudson, was ordered to move into New Jersey with the main body of the New England forces, while the newly raised militia were ordered to harass the flank and rear, and attack the outposts of the enemy. [3]The British had fallen back from the Delaware, and were assembling in great force at Princeton—resolved to attack Washington in his quarters at Trenton, before he should receive new reenforcements.

Dec. 28.

2. What new movements were made by the army of Washington?

3. What were the British doing in the mean time?

42. [4]Such was the situation of the opposing armies at the close of the year. Only a week before, General Howe was leisurely waiting the freezing of the Delaware, to enable him to take quiet possession of Philadelphia, or annihilate the American army at a blow, should it not previously be disbanded by the desertion of its militia. But, to the astonishment of the British general, the remnant of the American army had suddenly assumed offensive operations; and its commander, although opposed by far superior forces, now indulged the hope of recovering, during the winter, the whole, or the greater part of New Jersey.

4. What is remarked of the situation of the opposing armies at the close of the year?

CHAPTER III.

EVENTS OF 1777.

Of what does Chapter III. treat?

Jan. 1.

1. What occurred during the night of the first of January?

1. [1]On the night of the first of January, Generals Mifflin and Cadwallader, with the forces which lay at Bordentown and Crosswicks,* joined Washington at Trenton, whose whole effective force did not then exceed five thousand men.

a. Jan. 2.

2. What occurred in the afternoon of the next day?

b. See Map, p. 223.

[2]In the afternoon of the next day,[a] the van of the army of Lord Cornwallis reached Trenton; when Washington immediately withdrew to the east side of the creek[b] which runs through the town, where he drew up his army, and commenced intrenching himself.

2. The British attempted to cross in several places, when some skirmishing ensued, and a cannonading commenced, which continued until nightfall; but the fords being well guarded, the enemy thought it prudent to wait for the reenforcements which were near at hand, designing to advance to the assault on the following morning.

3. To what dangers was the American army now exposed?

3. [3]Washington again found himself in a very critical situation. To remain and risk a battle, with a superior and constantly increasing force, would subject his army, in case of repulse, to certain destruction; while a retreat over the Delaware, then very much obstructed with floating ice, would, of itself, have been a difficult undertaking, and a highly dangerous one to the American troops when pursued by a victorious enemy.

4. What is remarked of the sagacity and boldness of Washington?

[4]With his usual sagacity and boldness, Washington adopted another extraordinary but judicious scheme, which was accomplished with consummate skill, and followed by the happiest results.

5. In what manner did he elude the enemy?

4. [5]Kindling the fires of his camp as usual, and having left a small guard and sentinels to deceive the enemy, he silently despatched his heavy baggage to Burlington; and then,[c] by a circuitous route, unperceived, gained the rear of the enemy, and pressed on rapidly towards Princeton; designing to attack, by surprise, the British force at that place, which was about equal to his own. 1777.

5. [1]A part of the British, however, had already commenced their march, and were met by the Americans, at sunrise, a mile and a half from Princeton,* when a brisk conflict ensued, in which the American militia at first gave way; but Washington soon coming up with his select corps, the battle was restored. One division of the British, however, broke through the Americans; the others, after a severe struggle, and after losing nearly four hundred men in killed and wounded, retreated towards New Brunswick. The American loss was somewhat less than that of the British, but among the killed was the highly esteemed and deeply regretted General Mercer.

1. Give an account of the battle of Princeton, and the losses sustained by each party.

6. [2]When the dawn of day discovered to Lord Cornwallis the deserted camp of the Americans, he immediately abandoned his own camp, and marched with all expedition towards New Brunswick; fearing lest the baggage and military stores collected there should fall into the hands of the enemy. [3]As he reached Princeton almost at the same time with the American rear guard, Washington again found himself in imminent danger. His soldiers had taken no repose for the two preceding days, and they were likewise destitute of suitable provisions and clothing; while the pursuing enemy, besides the advantage of numbers, was supplied with all the conveniences, and even the luxuries of the camp.

2. What course did Cornwallis then pursue?

3. What was the situation of each army at this time?

7. [4]Not being in a situation to accomplish his designs on New Brunswick, Washington departed abruptly from Princeton, and moved with rapidity towards the upper and mountainous parts of New Jersey, and finally encamped at Morristown,† where he was able to afford shelter and repose to his suffering army. [5]Cornwallis proceeded directly to New Brunswick, where he found the commanding officer greatly alarm-

1. What success did Washington meet with soon after?

8. [1]In a few days Washington entered the field anew,—overran the whole northern part of New Jersey,—and made himself master of Newark, of Elizabethtown, and finally of Woodbridge;* so that the British army, which had lately held all New Jersey in its power, and had caused even Philadelphia to tremble for its safety, found itself now restricted to the two posts, New Brunswick and Amboy;† and compelled to lay aside all thoughts of acting offensively, and study self-defence. [2]The people of New Jersey, who, during the ascendency of the British, had been treated with harshness, insult, and cruelty, especially by the mercenary Hessian troops, now rose upon their invaders, and united in the common cause of expelling them from the country.

2. What is said of the situation and conduct of the people of New Jersey?

3 With what successes did they meet?

9. [3]In small parties they scoured the country in every direction,—cutting off stragglers; and suddenly falling on the outposts of the enemy, and in several skirmishes gained considerable advantage. At Springfield,‡ between forty and fifty Germans were killed, with less than five hundred men, defeated a much larger foraging party of the enemy, near Somerset Court House.§ [4]As no important military enterprise took place on either side during the two or three months following the battle of Princeton, Washington seized the interval of repose for inoculating his whole army with the small-pox; a disease which had already commenced its dreadful ravages among his troops, but which was thus stripped of its terrors, and rendered harmless.

10. [1]Congress, in the mean time, had returned to Philadelphia, where it was busily occupied with measures for enlarging and supplying the army, and for obtaining aid from foreign powers. [2]So early as the beginning of the year 1776, Silas Deane, a member of congress from Connecticut, was sent to France, for the purpose of influencing the French government in favor of America. Although France secretly favored the cause of the Americans, she was not yet disposed to act openly; yet Mr. Deane found means to obtain supplies from private sources, and even from the public arsenals.

1. How was congress engaged in the mean time?

2. What is said of Mr. Deane's embassy to France?

11. [3]After the declaration of independence, Benjamin Franklin was likewise sent to Paris; and other agents were sent to different European courts. The distinguished talents, high reputation, and great personal popularity of Dr. Franklin, were highly successful in increasing the general enthusiasm which began to be felt in behalf of the Americans. [4]His efforts were in the end eminently successful: and although France delayed, for a while, the recognition of American independence, yet she began to act with less reserve; and by lending assistance in various ways,—by loans, gifts, supplies of arms, provisions, and clothing, she materially aided the Americans, and showed a disposition not to avoid a rupture with England.

3. What is said of Dr. Franklin, and others?

4. What course was taken by France, and what aid was afforded by her?

12. [5]The tardy action of the French court was outstripped, however, by the general zeal of the nation. Numerous volunteers, the most eminent of whom was the young Marquis de Lafayette, offered to risk their fortunes, and bear arms in the cause of American liberty. Lafayette actually fitted out a vessel at his own expense, and, in the spring of 1777, arrived in America. He at first enlisted as a volunteer in the army of Washington, declining all pay for his services; but congress soon after bestowed upon him the appointment of major-general.

5. What is said of Lafayette, and other volunteers?

[1]On the 13th of April, General Lincoln, then stationed at Boundbrook,* in New Jersey, was surprised by the sudden approach of Lord Cornwallis on both sides of the Raritan.† With difficulty he made his retreat, with the loss of a part of his baggage, and about sixty men.

[3]During their retreat they were assailed[c] by the militia, which had hastily assembled in several detachments, commanded by Generals Arnold, Silliman, and Wooster. Pursued and constantly harassed by the Americans, the enemy succeeded in regaining[d] their shipping; having lost, during the expedition, in killed, wounded, and prisoners, nearly three hundred men. [4]The loss of the Americans was much less; but among the number was the veteran General Wooster, then in his seventieth year.

of May, Colonel Meigs crossed the Sound, and arriving before day, surprised[a] the enemy, destroyed the stores, burned a dozen vessels, and brought off ninety prisoners, without having a single man either killed or wounded. [1]Congress ordered an elegant sword to be presented to Colonel Meigs for his good conduct on this occasion. 1777.

a. May 23.

1. How was the good conduct of Col. Meigs rewarded?

16. [2]While these events were transpiring, Washington remained in his camp at Morristown, gradually increasing in strength by the arrival of new recruits, and waiting the development of the plans of the enemy; who seemed to be hesitating, whether to march upon Philadelphia, in accordance with the plan of the previous campaign, or to seize upon the passes of the Hudson, and thus co-operate directly with a large force under General Burgoyne, then assembling in Canada, with the design of invading the states from that quarter.

2. Where was Washington at this time; and what is said of the plans of the enemy?

17. [3]As a precaution against both of these movements, the northern forces having first been concentrated on the Hudson, and a large camp under General Arnold having been formed on the western bank of the Delaware, so that the whole could be readily assembled at either point, in the latter part of May Washington broke up his winter quarters, and advanced to Middlebrook,[b]—a strong position within ten miles of the British camp, and affording a better opportunity for watching the enemy and impeding his movements.

[4]General Howe soon after passed over from New York, which had been his head-quarters during the winter, and concentrated[c] nearly his whole army at New Brunswick; but after having examined the strength of the posts which Washington occupied, he abandoned the design of assaulting him in his camp. [5]He next, with the design of enticing Washington from his position, and bringing on a general engagement, advanced[d] with nearly his whole body to Somerset Court House, with the apparent design of crossing the Delaware. Failing in his object, a few days afterwards he tried another feint, and made as rapid a retreat, first[e] to Brunswick and afterwards[f] to Amboy, and even sent over several detachments to Staten

1. What advances did Washington make?

19. [1]Washington, in the hope of deriving some advantage from the retreat, pushed forward strong detachments to harass the British rear, and likewise advanced his whole force to Quibbletown,* five or six miles from his strong camp at Middlebrook. [2]General Howe, taking advantage of the success of his maneuvre, suddenly recalled his troops on the night of the 25th, and, the next morning, advanced rapidly towards the Americans; hoping to cut off their retreat and bring on a general action.

3. How did Washington escape the danger?

20. [3]Washington, however, had timely notice of this movement, and discerning his danger, with the utmost celerity regained his camp at Middlebrook. [4]The enemy only succeeded in engaging the brigade of Lord Stirling; which, after maintaining a severe action, retreated with little loss. [5]Failing in this second attempt, the British again withdrew to Amboy, and, on the 30th, passed finally over to Staten Island; leaving Washington in undisturbed possession of New Jersey.

6. Give an account of the capture of General Prescott.

21. [6]A few days later, the American army received the cheering intelligence of the capture of Major-general Prescott, the commander of the British troops on Rhode Island. Believing himself perfectly secure while surrounded by a numerous fleet, and at the head of a powerful army, he had taken convenient quarters at some distance from camp, and with few guards about his person. On the night of the 10th of July, Colonel Barton, with about forty militia, crossed over to the island in whale-boats, and having silently reached the lodgings of Prescott, seized him in bed, and conducted him safely through his own troops and fleet, back to the mainland. This exploit gave the Americans an officer of equal rank to exchange for General Lee.

7. What movement was made by the British fleet?

22. [7]The British fleet, under the command of Admiral Howe, then lying at Sandy Hook, soon moved to Prince's Bay,† and thence to the northern part of the island. [1]This movement, together with the circumstance that Burgoyne, with a powerful army, had already taken Ticonderoga, at first induced Washington to believe that the design of the British general was to proceed up the Hudson, and unite with Burgoyne. [2]Having taken about 18,000 of the army on board, and leaving a large force, under General Clinton, for the defence of New York, the fleet at length sailed from Sandy Hook on the 23d of July, and being soon after heard from, off the capes of Delaware, Washington put his forces in motion towards Philadelphia. 1777.

23. [3]The fleet having sailed up the Chesapeake, the troops landed near the head of Elk* River, in Maryland, on the 25th of August, and immediately commenced their march towards the American army, which had already arrived and advanced beyond Wilmington. [4]The superior force of the enemy soon obliged Washington to withdraw across the Brandywine,† where he determined to make a stand for the defence of Philadelphia. [5]On the morning of the 11th of September, the British force, in two columns, advanced against the American position. The Hessians under General Knyphausen proceeded against Chad's Ford,‡ and commenced a spirited attack, designing to deceive the Americans with the belief that the whole British army was attempting the passage of the Brandywine at that point.

A connected account of these transactions requires that we should now go back a few months in the order of time, to the beginning of the campaign in the north.

3. What events does the history now proceed to narrate, and why?

30. [4]Early in the spring of 1777, General Burgoyne, who had served under Governor Carleton in the previous campaign, arrived[b] at Quebec; having received the command of a powerful force, which was designed to invade the states by the way of Lake Champlain and the Hudson.

1. Of the course pursued by St. Clair?

32. [1]On the approach of the enemy, General St. Clair, who commanded at Ticonderoga with a force of but little more than 3000 men, unable to defend all the outworks, withdrew to the immediate vicinity of the fort.

2. Of the investment of Ticonderoga?

[2]The British troops, now extending their lines in front of the peninsula, invested the place on the northwest; while their German allies took post on the opposite side of the lake, in the rear of Mount Independence, which had likewise been fortified, and was then occupied by the Americans.

3. What design was St. Clair obliged to abandon, and why?

[3]St. Clair had at first contemplated the erection of fortifications on Mount Defiance, which commands the peninsula; but finding his numbers insufficient to garrison any new works, the design was abandoned.

4. What arduous work did the British undertake and accomplish?

33. [4]The English generals, perceiving the advantage that would be gained if their artillery could be planted on the summit of Mount Defiance, immediately undertook the arduous work; and on the fifth[a] of the month the road was completed, the artillery mounted, and ready to open its fire on the following morning.

[5]St. Clair, seeing no possibility of a longer resistance, immediately took the resolution to evacuate the works, while yet it remained in his power to do so. Accordingly, on the night[b] of the fifth of July, the fires were suffered to burn out, the tents were struck, and amid profound silence the troops commenced their retreat; but, unfortunately, the accidental burning of a building on Mount Independence, revealed their situation to the enemy.

provisions, which had been embarked on South River, or Wood Creek,[a] were overtaken and destroyed at Skeenesborough.[b] The rear division of the main body, which had retreated by way of Mount Independence, was overtaken at Hubbardton,* on the morning of the 7th, and, after an obstinate action, was routed with considerable loss. At length the remnants of the several divisions arrived[c] at Fort Edward, on the Hudson, the head-quarters of General Schuyler; having lost, in the late reverses, nearly two hundred pieces of artillery, besides a large quantity of warlike stores and provisions.

35. [1]Unable to retain Fort Edward with his small force, which then numbered but little more than four thousand men, General Schuyler soon after evacuated that post, and gradually fell back along the river until he had retired to the islands at the mouth of the Mohawk. [2]Here, by the arrival of the New England militia under General Lincoln, and several detachments from the regular army, his number was increased, by the middle of August, to thirteen thousand men. At the same time, however, a successful sortie from the fort penetrated the camp of the besiegers, killed many, and carried off a large quantity of baggage. * Fort Schuyler was situated at the head of navigation of the Mohawk, and at the carrying place between that river and Wood Creek, whence boats passed to Oswego. In 1758 Fort Stanwix was erected on this spot; but in 1776 it was repaired and named Fort Schuyler. The Fort occupied a part of the site of the present village of Rome, in Oneida County. It has been confounded by some with a Fort Schuyler which was built, in the French wars, near the place where Utica now stands, but which, at the time of the revolution, had gone to decay. (See Map.)

† Saratoga is a town on the west bank of the Hudson, from twenty-six to thirty-two miles north from Albany. Fish Creek runs through the northern part of the town. On the north side of its entrance into the Hudson is the village of Schuylerville, immediately south of which, on the ruins of Fort Hardy, which was built during the French and Indian wars, occurred the surrender of Burgoyne. The place then called Saratoga was a small settlement on the south side of Fish Creek.—(The Map on the left shows the towns of Saratoga and Stillwater; that on the right, the camps of Gates and Burgoyne, at the time of the surrender.)

[1]General Gates, who had recently been appointed to the command of the northern American army, had moved forward from the mouth of the Mohawk, and was then encamped near Stillwater.* Burgoyne continued to advance, until, on the 18th, he had arrived within two miles of the American camp. [2]On the 19th of September some skirmishing commenced between scouting parties of the two armies, which soon brought on a general battle, that continued three hours without any intermission. Night put an end to the contest. The Americans withdrew to their camp, while the enemy passed the night under arms on the field of battle. Both parties claimed the victory, but the loss of the enemy was the greatest.

His Canadian and Indian forces began to desert him, and, cut off in a great measure from the means of obtaining supplies of provisions, he was soon obliged to curtail his soldiers' rations. [4]On the 7th of October, an advance of the enemy towards the American left wing, again brought on a general battle, which was fought on nearly the same ground as the former, and with the most desperate bravery on both sides; but at length the British gave way, with the loss of some of their best officers, a considerable quantity of baggage, and more than four hundred men, while the loss of the Americans did not exceed eighty.

43. [1]The Americans thereby acquired a fine train of brass artillery, nearly five thousand muskets, and an immense quantity of other ordinary implements of war. The news of this brilliant victory caused the greatest exultation throughout the country, and doubts were no longer entertained of the final independence of the American colonies.

2. What was the next object of Gen. Gates?

44. [2]The army of Gates was immediately put in motion to stop the devastations of General Clinton, who had proceeded up the Hudson with a force of 3000 men, with the hope of making a diversion in favor of Burgoyne. [3]Forts Clinton* and Montgomery, after a severe assault, fell[a] into his hands,—and the village of Kingston[b] was wantonly burned,[c]—but on hearing the news of Burgoyne's surrender, Clinton immediately withdrew to New York. [4]At the same time, Ticonderoga and all the forts on the northern frontier were abandoned by the British, and occupied by the Americans. The attack on Fort Mifflin was at first alike unsuccessful; but after a series of attacks, the fort was at length abandoned,[a] —the garrison retiring to Fort Mercer. 4. Of the design to supplant Gen. Washington?

1777. [1]In the summer of 1775, Benjamin Franklin had proposed to the American congress articles of confederation and union among the colonies; but the majority in congress not being then prepared for so decisive a step, the subject was for the time dropped, but was resumed again shortly before the declaration of independence, in the following year.

1. Of the proposition of Dr. Franklin?

50. [2]On the 11th of June,[a] congress appointed a committee to prepare a plan of confederation. A plan was reported by the committee in July following, and, after various changes, was finally adopted by congress on the 15th of November, 1777. [3]Various causes, the principal of which was a difference of opinion with respect to the disposition of the vacant western lands, prevented the immediate ratification of these articles by all the states; but at length those states which claimed the western lands having ceded them to the Union, for the common benefit of the whole, the articles of confederation were ratified by Maryland, the last remaining state, on the first of March, 1781; at which time they became the constitution of the country.

CHAPTER IV.

EVENTS OF 1778.

1. [6]Previous to the defeat of Burgoyne, the British ministry had looked forward, with confidence, to the speedy termination of the war, by the conquest of the rebellious colonies. The minority in parliament endeavored, in vain, to stay the course of violent measures, and the warlike policy of the ministers was sustained by powerful majorities in both houses. [1]But the unexpected news of the surrender of the entire northern British army, produced a great change in the aspect of affairs, and plunged the nation into a dejection as profound as their hopes had been sanguine, and the promises of ministers magnificent. 1778.

1. What effect did the surrender of the northern army produce?

2. [2]Lord North, compelled by the force of public opinion, now came forward[a] with two conciliatory bills, by which England virtually conceded all that had been the cause of controversy between the two countries, and offered more than the colonies had asked or desired previous to the declaration of independence. These bills passed rapidly through parliament, and received the royal assent.[b]

2. What bills were then brought forward by Lord North, and how were they received?

b. March 11.

3. [3]Commissioners were then sent to America, with proposals for an amicable adjustment of differences; but these were promptly rejected by the congress, which refused to treat with Great Britain until she should either withdraw her fleets and armies, or, in positive and express terms, acknowledge the independence of the states. [4]One of the commissioners then attempted to gain the same ends by private intrigue and bribery, —which coming to the knowledge of congress, that body declared it incompatible with their honor to hold any correspondence or intercourse with him.

3. What proposals were made to congress, and what was the result?

4. What unworthy act is mentioned, and what did congress resolve?

4. [5]Soon after the rejection of the British terms of accommodation, congress received the news of the acknowledgment of American independence by the court of France, and the conclusion of a treaty of alliance and commerce between the two countries. a. April 18. 6. [1]A French fleet, under the command of Count D'Estaing, was despatched* to America, with the design of blockading the British fleet in the Delaware, while Washington should hold the land forces in check in New Jersey. [2]But Admiral Howe had already anticipated the scheme, and, before the arrival of D'Estaing, had sailed for New York, where all the British forces had been ordered to concentrate. General Clinton, who had succeeded General Howe in the command of the land forces, evacuated Philadelphia on the 18th of June, and with about eleven thousand men, and an immense quantity of baggage and provisions, commenced his retreat towards New York.

[4]The commander-in-chief was anxious to try a general engagement, but his opinion was overruled in a council of officers.

5. Nevertheless, what orders did Lee receive? [5]Nevertheless, when the British had arrived at Monmouth,* Washington, unwilling to permit them to reach the secure heights of Middletown† without a battle, ordered General Lee, who had been previously exchanged, to attack their rear.

6. What events occurred on the morning of the 28th? 8. [6]On the morning of the 28th, the light-horse of Lafayette advanced against the enemy, but, being briskly charged by Cornwallis and Clinton, was forced to fall back. Lee, surprised by the sudden charge of the enemy, ordered a retreat across a morass in his rear for the purpose of gaining a more favorable position; but part of his troops, mistaking the order, continued to retreat, and Lee was compelled to follow, briskly pursued by the enemy. At this moment, Washington, coming up, and both surprised and vexed at observing the retreat, or rather flight of the troops, addressed Lee with some warmth, and ordered him to rally his troops and oppose the enemy. 1778.

9. [1]Stung by the reproaches of his general, Lee made extreme exertions to rally, and, having disposed his troops on more advantageous ground, opposed a powerful check to the enemy, until at length, overpowered by numbers, he was forced to fall back, which he did, however, without any confusion. The main body soon coming up in separate detachments, the battle became general, and was continued until night put an end to the contest. [2]Washington kept his troops under arms during the night, designing to renew the battle on the coming morning; but Clinton, in the mean time, silently drew off his troops, and proceeded rapidly on his route towards New York.

2. What occurred the following night?

10. [3]The British left upon the field of battle about three hundred killed; while the loss of the Americans was less than seventy. On both sides many died of the intense heat of the weather, added to the fatigue of the day. [4]General Lee, who had been deeply irritated by the reprimand of Washington on the day of battle, addressed to him two haughty and offensive letters, demanding reparation. [5]The result was the arrest of Lee, and his trial, by a court-martial, on the charges of disobedience of orders, misbehavior before the enemy, and disrespect to the commander-in-chief. He was found guilty, and was suspended from his command one year. He never rejoined the army, but died in seclusion at Philadelphia, just before the close of the war.

Washington proceeded to White Plains, where he remained until late in autumn, when he retired to winter quarters at Middlebrook,[b] in New Jersey. The English pursued, and attacked[e] him in the northern part of the island, but were repulsed with considerable loss. About 400 of the settlers, who marched out to meet the enemy, were defeated[e] with the loss of nearly their whole number. The last fort offered no resistance, and shared the same fate. All the settlements were then ravaged and desolated by fire and sword, with the most cold-blooded and remorseless barbarity. The tories appeared to vie with, and even to surpass the savages in these scenes of horror.

Many of the inhabitants were killed, and others were carried into captivity; but the fort, containing about 200 soldiers, was not taken. [3]These excursions were the only events, requiring notice, which took place in the middle and northern sections of the country during the remainder of the year 1778. CHAPTER V.

Of what does Chapter V. treat?

EVENTS OF 1779.

1. [3]The military operations during the year 1779, were carried on in three separate quarters. The British force at the south was engaged in prosecuting the plan of reducing Georgia and South Carolina; the forces of Washington and Clinton were employed in the northern section of the Union; and the fleets of France and England contended for superiority in the West Indies.

3. How were the operations of the year 1779 conducted?

2. [4]Soon after the fall of Savannah, General Prevost, with a body of troops from East Florida, captured[b] the fort at Sunbury,* the only remaining military post in Georgia; after which, he united his forces with those of Colonel Campbell, and took the chief command of the southern British army. 1. Why did the British advance to Augusta?

3. [1]In order to encourage and support the loyalists, large numbers of whom were supposed to reside in the interior and northern portions of the province, the British advanced to Augusta. [2]A body of tories, having risen in arms, and having placed themselves under the command of Colonel Boyd, proceeded along the western frontiers of Carolina in order to join the royal army, committing great devastations and cruelties on the way. When near the British posts, they were encountered* by Colonel Pickens at the head of a party of Carolina militia, and, in a desperate engagement, were totally defeated.[a] Colonel Boyd was killed, and seventy of his men were condemned to death, as traitors to their country,—but only five were executed.

3. What expedition did Gen. Lincoln send across the Savannah?

4. [3]Encouraged by this success, General Lincoln, who had previously been placed in command of the southern department, and who had already advanced to the west bank of the Savannah, sent a detachment of nearly 2000 men, under General Ash, across the river, for the purpose of repressing the incursions of the enemy, and confining them to the low country near the ocean.

b. March 3.

4. Give an account of the defeat of Gen. Ash.

5. [4]Having taken a station on Brier Creek,† General Ash was surprised and defeated[b] by General Prevost, with the loss of nearly his whole army. Most of the militia, who fled at the first fire of the enemy, were either drowned in the river, or swallowed up in the surrounding marshes. [5]The subjugation of Georgia was complete; and General Prevost now busied himself in securing the farther co-operation of the loyalists, and in re-establishing, for a brief period, a royal legislature.

5. With what did General Prevost next busy himself?

6. What is said of the situation and farther designs of Gen. Lincoln?

6. [6]Although, by the repulse at Briar Creek, General Lincoln had lost one-fourth of his army, yet, by the extreme exertions of the Carolinians, by the middle of April he was enabled to enter the field anew, at the head of more than five thousand men. Leaving Gen-

a. April 23.

7. [1]General Prevost, in the mean time, had marched upon Charleston, before which he appeared on the 11th of May, and, on the following day, summoned the town to surrender; but the approach of Lincoln soon compelled him to retreat. On the 20th of June the Americans attacked[b] a division of the enemy advantageously posted at the pass of Stono Ferry,* but, after a severe action, were repulsed with considerable loss. The British soon after established a post at Beaufort,[c] on Port Royal Island, after which the main body of the army retired to Savannah. The unhealthiness of the season prevented, during several months, any farther active operations of the two armies.

[2]While these events were transpiring at the South, the forces of Clinton, at the North, were employed in various predatory incursions;—ravaging the coasts, and plundering the country, with the avowed object of rendering the colonies of as little avail as possible to their new allies the French.

2. How were the forces of Clinton employed in the mean time?

9. [3]In February, Governor Tryon, at the head of about 1500 men, proceeded from Kingsbridge,[d] as far as Horse Neck, in Connecticut, where he destroyed some salt works, and plundered the inhabitants, but otherwise did little damage. General Putnam, being accidentally at Horse Neck,[e] hastily collected about a hundred men, and having placed them, with a couple of old field-pieces, on the high ground near the meeting-house, continued to fire upon the enemy until the British dragoons were ordered to charge upon him; when, ordering his men to retreat and form on a hill at a little distance, he put spurs to his steed, and plunged down the precipice at the church; escaping uninjured by the many balls that were fired at him in his descent.

17. [1]Early in September, the Count D'Estaing, returning from the West Indies, appeared[a] with his fleet on the coast of Georgia, and soon after, in concert with the American force under General Lincoln, laid siege to Savannah. After the expiration of a month, an assault was made[b] on the enemy's works, but the assailants were repulsed with the loss of nearly a thousand men in killed and wounded. Count Pulaski, a celebrated Polish nobleman, who had espoused the cause of the states, was mortally wounded.

18. [2]The repulse from Savannah was soon followed by the abandonment of the enterprise—Count D'Estaing again departing[c] with his whole fleet from the American coast, and General Lincoln retreating[c] into South Carolina. Late in October, Sir Henry Clinton, fearing an attack from the French fleet, ordered his forces in Rhode Island to withdraw to New York. The retreat[d] was effected with so much haste, that the enemy left behind them all their heavy artillery, and a large quantity of stores.

5. What defeated the project?

Added to this, a violent epidemic, raging among the soldiers, swept off more than five thousand of their number. 22. While both ships were on fire, and the Richard on the point of sinking, the American frigate Alliance came up, and, in the darkness of the night, discharged her broadside into the Richard. Discovering her mistake, she fell with augmented fury on the Serapis, which soon surrendered. Of three hundred and seventy-five men that were on board the vessel of Jones, three hundred were killed or wounded. The Richard sunk soon after her crew had taken possession of the conquered vessel. At the same time the remaining English frigate, after a severe engagement, was captured.

23. [2]Thus terminated the most important military events of 1779. The flattering hopes inspired in the minds of the Americans, by the alliance with France in the former year, had not been realized; and the failure of every scheme of co-operation on the part of the French fleet, had produced a despondency of mind unfavorable to great exertions. [3]The American army was reduced in number, and badly clothed; the national treasury was empty; congress was without credit; and the rapidly diminishing value of the paper currency of the country, brought distress upon all classes,—occasioned the ruin of thousands,—and even threatened the dissolution of the army.

CHAPTER VI.

EVENTS OF 1780.

Of what does Chapter VI. treat?

1. What is said of the scene of military operations for the year 1780?

1. [1]During the year 1780, military operations were mostly suspended in the North, in consequence of the transfer of the scene of action to the Carolinas. [2]Late in December of the previous year, Sir Henry Clinton, leaving General Knyphausen at New York, sailed[a] with the bulk of his army to the South, under convoy of Admiral Arbuthnot, and arrived on the coast of Georgia late in January. On the 10th of February he departed from Savannah for the siege of Charleston, then defended by General Lincoln, and after taking possession[b] of the islands south of the city, crossed[c] the Ashley River with the advance of the army, and on the first of April commenced erecting batteries within eight hundred yards of the American works.

4. Of the summons to surrender?

2. [3]On the 9th of April, Admiral Arbuthnot, favored by a strong southerly wind and the tide, passed Fort Moultrie with little damage, and anchored his fleet in Charleston harbor, within cannon shot of the city. [4]A summons[d] to surrender being rejected, the English opened[d] their batteries upon the town. [5]The Americans, in the mean time, in order to form a rallying point for the militia, and, possibly, succor the city, had assembled a corps under the command of General Huger on the upper part of Cooper River, at a place called Monk's Corner.* Against this post Clinton sent a detachment of fourteen hundred men, commanded by Webster, Tarleton, and Ferguson, which succeeded in surprising[e] the party,—putting the whole to flight,—

3. [1]Soon after, an American corps was surprised[a] on the Santee,* by Colonel Tarleton. The enemy overran the country on the left side of the Cooper River,—Fort Moultrie surrendered on the 6th of May,—and Charleston thus found itself completely enclosed by the British forces, with no prospect of relief, either by land or by sea. In this extremity, the fortifications being mostly beaten down, and the enemy prepared for an assault, on the 12th of May the city surrendered. General Lincoln and the troops under his command became prisoners of war.

4. [2]Having possession of the capital, General Clinton made preparations for recovering the rest of the province, and for re-establishing royal authority. Three expeditions which he despatched into the country were completely successful. One seized the important post of Ninety-six;† another scoured the country bordering on the Savannah; while Lord Cornwallis passed the Santee, and made himself master of Georgetown.‡ [3]A body of about 400 republicans, under Colonel Buford, retreating towards North Carolina, being pursued by Colonel Tarleton, and overtaken[b] at Waxhaw Creek,§ was entirely cut to pieces. 1. How were the British much annoyed?

5. [1]But notwithstanding the apparent tranquillity which prevailed at the time of Clinton's departure, bands of patriots, under daring leaders, soon began to collect on the frontiers of the province, and, by sudden attacks, to give much annoyance to the royal troops.

2. What is said of Col. Sumpter?

[2]Colonel Sumpter, in particular, distinguished himself in these desultory excursions. In an attack[b] which he made on a party of British at Rocky Mount* he was repulsed, but not disheartened. He soon after surprised and completely defeated[c] a large body of British regulars and tories posted at Hanging Rock.† [3]This partisan warfare restored confidence to the republicans,—disheartened the loyalists,—and confined to more narrow limits the operations of the enemy.

3. The effects of this partisan warfare?

4. What, in the mean time, were the movements of Gates and Rawdon?

6. [4]In the mean time a strong force from the North, under General Gates, was approaching for the relief of the southern provinces. The British general, Lord Rawdon, on receiving tidings of the approach of Gates, concentrated his forces at Camden‡, where he was soon after joined[d] by Lord Cornwallis from Charleston. On the night of the 15th of August, Gates advanced from Clermont,§ with the view of surprising the British camp. British charged them with fixed bayonets, and soon put them to flight; but the Maryland and Delaware regiments sustained the fight with great gallantry, and several times compelled the enemy to retire. At length, being charged in the flank by Tarleton's cavalry,—surrounded,—and overwhelmed by numbers, they were forced to give way, and the rout became general. 1780.

8. [1]The Americans lost in this unfortunate engagement, in killed, wounded, and captured, about a thousand men, besides all their artillery, ammunition wagons, and much of their baggage.* The Baron De Kalb, second in command, was mortally wounded. The British reported their loss at three hundred and twenty-five. [2]With the remnant of his forces Gates rapidly retreated to Hillsboro',† in North Carolina.

1. What losses did each party sustain in this action?

2. Whither did Gates retreat?

9. [3]The defeat of Gates was soon followed by the surprise and dispersion of Sumpter's corps. This officer, who had already advanced between Camden and Charleston, on learning the misfortune of his superior, retired promptly to the upper parts of Carolina, but at Fishing Creek‡ his troops were surprised by Tarleton's cavalry, and routed[a] with great slaughter.

a. Aug. 18.

10. [4]Cornwallis, again supposing the province subdued, adopted measures of extreme severity, in order to compel a submission to royal authority. Orders were given to hang every militia man who, having once served with the British, had afterwards joined the Americans; and those who had formerly submitted, but had taken part in the recent revolt, were imprisoned, and their property was taken from them or destroyed. [5]But these rigorous measures failed to accomplish their object; for although the spirit of the people was overawed, it was not subdued. The cry of vengeance arose from an exasperated people, and the British standard became an object of execration.

4. What severe measures did Cornwallis adopt?

5. What was the effect of these measures?

A considerable number of the most profligate and abandoned repaired to his standard, and, under the conduct of their leader, committed excesses so atrocious, that the highly exasperated militia collected to intercept their march, and arming themselves with whatever chance threw in their way, attacked the party in the post which they had chosen at King's Mountain.*

Eight hundred prisoners were taken, and amongst the spoil were fifteen hundred stands of arms. The American loss was about twenty.

2. What successes of Gen. Sumpter soon followed?

12. [2]Notwithstanding the defeat of General Sumpter, he had again collected a band of volunteers, with which he continued to harass the enemy; and although many plans were laid for his destruction, they all failed in the execution. In an attack[b] which was made on him by Major Wemys, the British were defeated, and their commanding officer taken prisoner.† On the 20th of November he was attacked by Colonel Tarleton, at Blackstocks,‡ but after a severe loss Tarleton was obliged to retreat, leaving Sumpter in quiet possession of the field.

Although high expectations had been indulged from the assistance of so powerful a force against the enemy, yet no enterprise of importance was undertaken, and the operations of both parties, at the North, were mostly suspended during the remainder of the season.

a. In Rhode Island.

1. What is said of the arrival of Admiral de Ternay, and of military operations during the remainder of the season?

16. [2]While defeat at the South, and disappointment at the North, together with the exhausted state of the finances, and an impoverished country, were openly endangering the American cause, domestic treachery was secretly plotting its ruin. [3]The traitor was Arnold;—one of the first to resist British aggression, and, hitherto, one of the most intrepid defenders of American liberty. In recompense for his distinguished services, congress had appointed him commandant at Philadelphia, soon after the evacuation of that city by the English.

2. What dangers were at this time threatening the American cause?

3. Who was the traitor, and what is said of him?

17. [4]Here he lived at great expense, indulged in gaming, and, having squandered his fortune, at length appropriated the public funds to his own uses. Although convicted by a court-martial, and reprimanded by Washington, he dissembled his purposes of revenge, and having obtained the command of the important fortress of West Point,† he privately engaged to deliver it into the hands of the enemy, for 10,000 pounds sterling, and a commission as brigadier in the British army.

[2]Andre was incautiously suffered to write to Arnold; when the latter, taking the alarm, immediately escaped on board the Vulture, a British vessel lying in the river.

2. How did Arnold escape?

3. What was the fate of Andre?

19. [3]The unfortunate Andre was tried by a court-martial; upon his own confession he was declared a spy, and, agreeably to the laws and usages of nations, was condemned to death. [4]Arnold received the stipulated reward of his treason; but even his new companions viewed the traitor with contempt, and the world now execrates his name and memory. [5]Each of the captors of Andre received the thanks of congress, a silver medal, and a pension for life.

4. What more is said of Arnold?

5. Of the captors of Andre?

6. What were the circumstances under which England declared war against Holland?

20. [6]In the latter part of this year, another European power was added to the open enemies of England. Holland, jealous of the naval superiority of Britain, had long been friendly to the American cause; she had given encouragement and protection to American privateers, and had actually commenced the negotiation of a treaty with congress, the discovery of which immediately called forth a declaration[a] of war on the part of England.

7. What remarks are made upon the situation of England at this period?

21. [7]Thus the American Revolution had already involved England in war with three powerful nations of Europe, and yet her exertions seemed to increase with the occasions that called them forth. Parliament again granted a large amount of money for the public service of the coming year, and voted the raising of immense armaments by sea and land.

CHAPTER VII.

EVENTS OF 1781.

Of what does Chapter VII. treat?

1. [1]The condition of the army of Washington, at the beginning of the year 1781, was widely different from that of the royal forces under the command of Clinton. While the latter were abundantly supplied with all the necessaries and comforts which their situation required, the former were suffering privations arising from want of pay, clothing, and provisions, which at one time seriously threatened the very existence of the army.

1. Whatwere the relative situations of the two armies at the beginning of this year?

2. [2]So pressing had the necessities of the soldiers become, that, on the first of January, the whole Pennsylvania line of troops, to the number of one thousand three hundred, abandoned their camp at Morristown,—declaring their intention of marching to the place where congress was in session, in order to obtain a redress of their grievances.

2. To what course was a portion of the American army driven by necessity?

3. [3]The officers being unable to quell the sedition, the mutineers proceeded in a body to Princeton, where they were met by emissaries from Sir Henry Clinton,

3. What course was taken by the mutineers?

1781 who sought to entice them into the British service. Indignant at this attempt upon their fidelity, they seized the British agents, and delivered them to General Wayne, to be treated as spies.

1. What events followed?

4. [1]A committee from congress, and also a deputation from the Pennsylvania authorities met them, first, at Princeton, and afterwards at Trenton; and after liberal concessions, and relieving their necessities in part, induced those whose terms of service had not expired, to return to their duties, after a short furlough.

2. How did these men reply to an offer of reward?

[2]Being offered a reward for apprehending the British emissaries, they nobly refused it; saying, that their necessities had forced them to demand justice from their own government, but they desired no reward for doing their duty to their country against her enemies.

3. What was the effect of this mutiny, and one in the Jersey line?

5. [3]This mutiny, and another in the Jersey line which was instantly suppressed, aroused the attention of the states, and of congress, to the miserable condition of the troops, and called forth more energetic measures for their relief. [4]Taxation was resorted to, and readily acquiesced in; and money, ammunition, and clothing, were obtained in Europe; but the most efficient aid was derived from the exertions of Robert Morris, a wealthy merchant of Philadelphia, whom congress had recently appointed superintendent of the treasury.

4. By what means were the wants of the army supplied?

5. What was done by Robert Morris, and what benefits have been attributed to his aid?

6. [5]He assumed the collection of taxes, contracted to furnish flour for the army, and freely used his own ample means and personal credit to sustain the government. In the course of the year the Bank of North America was established under his care, which exerted a highly beneficial influence upon the currency, and upon public credit. It has been asserted, that to the financial operations of Robert Morris it was principally owing that the armies of America did not disband, and that congress was enabled to continue the war with vigor and success.

6. Give an account of Arnold's depredations in Virginia.

7. [6]Early in January of this year, General Arnold, then a brigadier in the royal army, made a descent upon Virginia, with a force of 1600 men, and such a number of armed vessels as enabled him to commit extensive ravages on the unprotected coasts. Having destroyed[a] the public stores in the vicinity of Rich-

8. [1]Lafayette, with a force of 1200 men, was sent into Virginia; and the French fleet, stationed at Rhode Island, sailed[d] to co-operate with him; but the English being apprized of the project, Admiral Arbuthnot sailed from New York,—attacked[e] the French fleet, and compelled it to return to Rhode Island. Thus Arnold escaped from the imminent danger of falling into the hands of his exasperated countrymen. [2]Soon after, the British general Philips arrived[f] in the Chesapeake, with a reenforcement of 2000 men. After joining Arnold he took the command of the forces, and proceeded to overrun and lay waste the country with but little opposition.

9. [3]After the unfortunate battle near Camden, mentioned in the preceding chapter,[g] congress thought proper to remove General Gates, and to appoint General Greene to the command of the southern army. [4]Soon after taking the command, although having a force of but little more than two thousand men, he despatched General Morgan to the western extremity of South Carolina, in order to check the devastations of the British and loyalists in that quarter. [5]Cornwallis, then on the point of advancing against North Carolina, unwilling to leave Morgan in his rear, sent Colonel Tarleton against him, with directions to "push him to the utmost."

[7]Tarleton, soon coming up, confident of an easy victory, made an impetuous attack[h] upon the militia, who at first gave way. 1. What loss was sustained by each party?

2. What did Cornwallis do, on hearing of Tarleton's defeat?

11. [2]On receiving the intelligence of Tarleton's defeat, Cornwallis, then on the left bank of the Broad River,* destroyed his heavy baggage, and commenced a rapid march towards the fords of the Catawba,† hoping to arrive in time to intercept the retreat of Morgan before he could pass that river. [3]After a toilsome march, Morgan succeeded in reaching the fords, and crossed[a] the river in safety; but only two hours later the van of the enemy appeared on the opposite bank. It being then in the evening, Cornwallis halted and encamped; feeling confident of overtaking his adversary in the morning. During the night a heavy rain raised the waters of the river, and rendered it impassable for two days.

a. Jan. 29.

4. What is said of Gen. Greene,—of the pursuit by Cornwallis, and of his second disappointment?

12. [4]At this time General Greene, who had left the main body of his army on the left bank of the Pedee,‡ opposite Cheraw,§ arrived[b] and took the command of Morgan's division, which continued the retreat, and which was soon followed again in rapid pursuit by Cornwallis. Both armies hurried on to the Yadkin, which the Americans reached first; but while they were crossing,[c] their rear-guard was attacked by the van of the British, and part of the baggage of the retreating army was abandoned. Again Cornwallis encamped, with only a river between him and his enemy; but a sudden rise in the waters again retarded him, and he was obliged to seek a passage higher up the stream. Lee with a body of militia to oppose him. On the march, Lee fell in with the loyalists, three hundred and fifty in number, who, thinking they were meeting Tarleton, were easily surrounded.[g] While they were eager to make themselves known by protestations of loyalty, and cries of "Long live the king," the militia fell upon them with fury, killed the greater portion, and took the remainder prisoners.

16. [2]The result of the battle was little less than a defeat to Cornwallis, who was unable to profit by the advantage which he had gained. He soon retired to Wilmington,[a] and, after a halt of nearly three weeks, directed his march[b] upon Virginia. [3]General Greene, in the mean time, defiling to the right, took the daring resolution of re-entering South Carolina; and, after various changes of position, encamped on Hobkirk's Hill,* little more than a mile from Lord Rawdon's post at Camden.

[4]Here he was attacked on the 25th of April, and so strongly did victory for a time incline to the side of the Americans, that Greene despatched a body of cavalry to intercept the enemy's retreat. A Maryland regiment, however, vigorously charged by the enemy, fell into confusion; and in spite of the exertions of the officers, the rout soon became general. The killed, wounded, and missing, on both sides, were nearly equal.

[5]Soon after, Lord Rawdon evacuated[c] Camden, and retired with his troops beyond the Santee River; when, learning that Fort Watson† had surrendered, and that Fort Mott,‡ together with the posts at Granby§ and Orangeburg,‖ were closely invested, he retreated still farther, and encamped at Eutaw Springs.¶ [6]These posts, together with Augusta, soon fell into the hands of the Americans; and by the 5th of June the British were confined to the three posts—Ninety-six, Eutaw Springs, and Charleston. 1781.

19. [1]After the retreat of Lord Rawdon from Camden, General Greene proceeded to Fort Granby, and thence against Ninety-six, a place of great natural strength, and strongly fortified. After prosecuting the siege of this place nearly four weeks, and learning that Lord Rawdon was approaching with reenforcements, General Greene determined upon an assault, which was made on the 18th of June; but the assailants were beaten off, and the whole army raised the siege, and retreated, before the arrival of the enemy.

1. What is said of the siege, and the assault of Ninety-six?

June 18.

20. [2]After an unsuccessful pursuit of the Americans, again Lord Rawdon retired, closely followed by the army of Greene, and took post at Orangeburg, where he received a reinforcement from Charleston, under the command of Col. Stewart. Finding the enemy too strong to be attacked, General Greene now retired,[a] with the main body of his army, to the heights* beyond the Santee, to spend the hot and sickly season, while expeditions under active officers were continually traversing the country, to intercept the communications between Orangeburg and Charleston. [3]Lord Rawdon soon after returned to England, leaving Colonel Stewart in command of his forces.

2. What were the movements of the two armies after the repulse at Ninety-six?

a. July.

3. What change of British commanders occurred?

21. [4]Before his departure, a tragic scene occurred at Charleston, which greatly irritated the Carolinians, and threw additional odium on the British cause. This was the execution of Colonel Isaac Hayne, a firm patriot, who, to escape imprisonment, had previously given in his adhesion to the British authorities. When the British were driven from the vicinity of his residence, considering the inability to protect, as a discharge of the obligation to obey, he took up arms against them, and, in this condition, was taken prisoner.

4. What account is given of the fate of Col. Hayne?

22. He was brought before Col. Balfour, the commandant of Charleston, who condemned him to death, although numerous loyalists petitioned in his favor.

* The Santee Hills are E. of the Wateree River, about twenty miles south from Camden. (See Map, p. 261.)

1781. [1]Lord Rawdon, a man of generous feelings, after having in vain exerted his influence to save him, finally gave his sanction to the execution. [2]The British strongly urged the justice of the measure, while the Americans condemned it as an act of monstrous cruelty.

1. What is said of Lord Rawdon on this occasion?

2. Of the justice of the measure?

23. [3]Early in September, General Greene again advanced upon the enemy, then commanded by Colonel Stewart, who, at his approach, retired to Eutaw Springs.[a] On the 8th the two armies engaged, with nearly equal forces. The British were at first driven in confusion from the field, but at length rallying in a favorable position, they withstood all the efforts of the Americans, and after a sanguinary conflict, of nearly four hours, General Greene drew off his troops, and returned to the ground he had occupied in the morning. During the night, Colonel Stewart abandoned his position, and retired to Monk's Corner.[b] [4]The Americans lost, in this battle, in killed, wounded, and missing, about 300 men. The loss sustained by the enemy was somewhat greater.

3. Give an account of the battle of Eutaw Springs.

a. N. p. 272.

b. N. p. 260.

4. What were the losses of each party?

24. [5]Shortly after the battle of Eutaw Springs, the British entirely abandoned the open country, and retired to Charleston and the neighboring islands. These events ended the campaign of 1781, and, indeed, the revolutionary war, in the Carolinas. [6]At the commencement of the year, the British were in possession of Georgia and South Carolina; and North Carolina was thought to be at their mercy. At the close of the year, Savannah and Charleston were the only posts in their possession, and to these they were closely confined by the regular American troops, posted in the vicinity, and by the vigilant militia of the surrounding country.

5. What is said of the close of the campaign in the Carolinas?

6. Of the change of circumstances that had occurred during the year?

25. [7]Though General Greene was never decisively victorious, yet he was still formidable when defeated, and every battle which he fought resulted to his advantage. To the great energy of character, and the fertility of genius which he displayed, is, principally, to be ascribed, the successful issue of the southern campaign.

7. What is remarked of General Greene?

26. [8]Having followed, to its termination, the order of the events which occurred in the southern department, we now return to the movements of Cornwallis, who, late in April, left Wilmington,[a] with the avowed object of conquering Virginia. Marching north by the way of Halifax,* and crossing, with little opposition, the large and rapid rivers that flow into Roanoke and Albemarle Sounds, in less than a month he reached[b] Petersburg,† where he found the troops of General Philips, who had died a few days before his arrival. 1781.

b. May 20.

[1]The defence of Virginia was at that time intrusted principally to the Marquis de Lafayette, who, with a force of only three thousand men, mostly militia, could do little more than watch the movements of the enemy, at a careful distance.

1. To whom was the defence of Virginia at that time intrusted?

27. [2]Unable to bring Lafayette to an engagement, Cornwallis overran the country in the vicinity of James River, and destroyed an immense quantity of public and private property. [3]An expedition under Tarleton penetrated to Charlottesville,‡ and succeeded in making prisoners of several members of the Virginia House of Delegates, and came near seizing the governor of the state, Thomas Jefferson. [4]After taking possession of Richmond and Williamsburg, Cornwallis was called to the seacoast by Sir Henry Clinton; who, apprehensive of an attack by the combined French and American forces, was anxious that Cornwallis should take a position from which he might reenforce the garrison of New York, if desirable.

2. What course did Cornwallis adopt?

3. What is said of Tarleton's expedition?

4. Why was Cornwallis called to the seacoast?

28. [5]Proceeding from Williamsburg to Portsmouth, when on the point of crossing James River he was attacked[c] by Lafayette, who had been erroneously informed that the main body had already crossed. General Wayne, who led the advance, on seeing the whole British army drawn out against him, made a sudden charge with great impetuosity, and then hastily retreated with but little loss. Cornwallis, surprised at this bold maneuver, and perhaps suspecting an ambuscade, would not allow a pursuit.

[1]After crossing James River he proceeded to Portsmouth; but not liking the situation for a permanent post, he soon evacuated the place, and concentrated[a] his forces at Yorktown,* on the south side of York River, which he immediately commenced fortifying. Gloucester Point, on the opposite side of the river, was held by a small force under Colonel Tarleton.

a. From Aug. 1—22.

1. What were the next movements of Cornwallis, and where did he finally concentrate his forces?

30. [2]In the mean time, General Washington had formed the plan of attacking Sir Henry Clinton; and late in June, the French troops from Rhode Island, under Count Rochambeau, marched to the vicinity of New York, for the purpose of aiding in the enterprise. [3]The intention was abandoned, however, in August, in consequence of large reenforcements having been received by Clinton,—the tardiness with which the continental troops assembled,—and the fairer prospect of success which was opened by the situation of Cornwallis.

2. What plan had Washington formed in the mean time, and what movement was made by the French troops?

3. Why was the plan abandoned?

31. [4]A French fleet, commanded by the Count de Grasse, was expected soon to arrive in the Chesapeake; and Washington, having effectually deceived Clinton until the last moment, with the belief that New York was the point of attack, suddenly drew off the combined French and American army, and, after rapid marches, on the 30th of September appeared before Yorktown.

4. What is said of the sudden departure of the combined armies?

Sept. 30.

32. [5]The Count de Grasse had previously entered[b] the Chesapeake, and, by blocking up James and York Rivers, had effectually cut off the escape of Cornwallis by sea; while a force of two thousand troops, under the Marquis St. Simon, landed from the fleet, and joined Lafayette, then at Williamsburg, with the design of effectually opposing the British, should they attempt to retreat upon the Southern States. [6]A British fleet from New York, under Admiral Graves, made an attempt to relieve Cornwallis, and to intercept the French fleet bearing the heavy artillery and

6. What is said of the attempt to relieve Cornwallis?

33. [1]After General Clinton had learned the destination of the army of Washington, hoping to draw off a part of his forces, he sent Arnold on a plundering expedition against Connecticut. [2]Landing[b] at the mouth of the river Thames, Arnold proceeded in person against Fort Trumbull, a short distance below New London,* which was evacuated[c] on his approach. New London was then burned,[c] and public and private property to a large amount destroyed.

1. What expedition did Clinton send to Connecticut, and why?

b. Sept. 6.

2. What did Arnold accomplish in person?

34. [3]In the mean time a party had proceeded against Fort Griswold, on the east side of the river, which, after an obstinate resistance, was carried by assault.[c] When Colonel Ledyard, the commander of the fort, surrendered his sword, it was immediately plunged into his bosom; and the carnage was continued until the greater part of the garrison was killed or wounded. [4]This barbarous inroad did not serve the purpose of Clinton in checking the advance of Washington against Cornwallis.

3. Give an account of the capture of Fort Griswold.

c. Sept. 6.

4. What is said of the purpose of this barbarous inroad?

35. [5]In the siege of Yorktown the French were posted[d] in front, and on the right of the town, extending from the river above, to the morass in the centre, where they were met by the Americans, who extended to the river below.[d] [6]On the evening of the ninth of October, the batteries were opened against the town, at a distance of 600 yards; and so heavy was the fire, that many of the guns of the besieged were soon dismounted, and silenced, and the works in many places demolished. Shells and red hot balls reached the British ships in the harbor, several of which were burned. [7]On the evening of the 11th the besiegers advanced to within three hundred yards of the British lines.

1781. Oct. 14.

1. What occurred on the 14th; and what is said of the progress of the siege?

36. [1]On the 14th, two redoubts, in advance and on the left of the besieged, were carried by assault; the one by an American, and the other by a French detachment. These were then included in the works of the besiegers. On the 16th, nearly a hundred pieces of heavy ordnance were brought to bear on the British works and with such effect that the walls and fortifications were beaten down, and almost every gun dismounted.

2. Of the attempt of the British to retreat?

37. [2]No longer entertaining any hopes of effectual resistance, on the evening of the same day Cornwallis attempted to retreat by way of Gloucester Point; hoping to be able to break through a French detachment posted in the rear of that place, and, by rapid marches, to reach New York in safety. [3]Frustrated in this attempt by a violent storm, which dispersed his boats after one division had crossed the river, he was reduced to the necessity of a capitulation; and, on the 19th, the posts of Yorktown and Gloucester, containing more than seven thousand British soldiers, were surrendered to the army of Washington, and the shipping in the harbor to the fleet of De Grasse.

4. What occurred five days after the surrender?

38. [4]Five days after the fall of Yorktown, Sir Henry Clinton appeared[a] at the mouth of the Chesapeake, with an armament of 7000 men; but learning that Cornwallis had already surrendered, he returned to New York. [5]The victorious allies separated soon after the surrender. The Count de Grasse sailed[b] for the West Indies; Count Rochambeau cantoned his army, during the winter, in Virginia; and the main body of the Americans returned to its former position on the Hudson, while a strong detachment under General St. Clair was despatched to the South, to reenforce the army of General Greene.

39. [6]By the victory over Cornwallis, the whole country was, in effect, recovered to the Union—the British power was reduced to merely defensive measures—and was confined, principally, to the cities of New York, Charleston, and Savannah. At the news of so important a victory, transports of exultation broke forth, and triumphal celebrations were held throughout the Union. Of what does Chapter VIII. treat?

CLOSE OF THE WAR, AND ADOPTION OF THE CONSTITUTION.

1. [2]When intelligence of the defeat and capture of Cornwallis reached London, the king and ministry evinced a determination still to continue the war for the reduction of the "rebellious colonies;" but, fortunately, the war had become almost universally unpopular with the British nation. [3]From the 12th of December to the 4th of March, repeated motions were made in the House of Commons for terminating the war; and on this latter day[a] the House resolved, that those who should advise the king to continue the war on the continent of North America, should be declared enemies of the sovereign and of the country.

3. What was done in the House of Commons?

a. March 4.

2. [4]On the 20th of March the administration of Lord North was terminated, and the advocates of peace immediately came into power. Early in May, Sir Guy Carleton, who had been appointed to succeed Sir Henry Clinton in the command of all the British forces, arrived at New York, with instructions to promote the wishes of Great Britain for an accommodation with the United States. In accordance with these views, offensive war mostly ceased on the part of the British, and Washington made no attempts on the posts of the enemy. The year 1782 consequently passed without furnishing any military operations of importance; although the hostile

Nov. 30. 1. What articles and treaties were signed in this, and in the following year?

3. [1]On the 30th of November, 1782, preliminary articles of peace were signed at Paris, by Mr. Oswald, a commissioner on the part of Great Britain, and John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, John Jay, and Henry Laurens, on the part of the United States. Preliminary articles of peace between France and England were likewise signed on the 20th of January following; and on the 3d of September, of the same year, definitive treaties of peace were signed by the commissioners of England, with those of the United States, France, Spain, and Holland.

1783. Jan. 20. Sept. 3.

2. What were the terms of the treaty between England and the United States?

4. [2]By the terms of the treaty between England and the United States, the independence of the latter was acknowledged in its fullest extent; ample boundaries were allowed them, extending north to the great lakes, and west to the Mississippi,—embracing a range of territory more extensive than the states, when colonies, had claimed; and an unlimited right of fishing on the banks of Newfoundland was conceded. [3]The two Floridas, which had long been held[a] by England, were restored to Spain.

3. What was done with the Floridas?

a. Since 1763.

April 19, 1783. 4. What were the remaining events of the year 1783?

5. [4]On the 19th of April, the eighth anniversary of the battle of Lexington, a cessation of hostilities was proclaimed in the American army; and on the 3d of November, the army was disbanded by general orders of congress. Savannah was evacuated by the British troops in July, New York in November, and Charleston in the following month.

5. What is said of the difficulties attending the disbanding of the army?

6. [5]Notwithstanding all had looked forward with joyful hope to the termination of the war, yet the disbanding of the American army had presented difficulties and dangers, which it required all the wisdom of congress and the commander-in-chief to overcome. Neither officers nor soldiers had, for a long time, received any pay for their services; and although in 1780 congress had adopted a resolution promising half pay to the officers, on the conclusion of peace, yet the state of the finances now rendered the payment impossible. The disbanding of the army would, therefore, throw thousands out of the service, without compensation for the past, or substantial provision for the future. 1783.

7. [1]In this situation of affairs, it was feared that an open insurrection would break out, and that the army would attempt to do itself the justice which the country was slow to grant. [2]In the midst of the excitement, an anonymous address, since ascertained to have been written by Major John Armstrong,—composed with great ingenuity, and recommending an appeal to the fears of congress, and the people, was circulated[a] through the army; calling a meeting of the officers, for the purpose of arranging the proper measures for obtaining redress. Such was the state of feeling in the army, that a war between the civil and the military powers appeared inevitable.

1. In this situation of affairs what was feared?

2. What is said of an address circulated through the army?

a March 11.

8. [3]The firmness and prudence of Washington, however, succeeded in averting the danger. Strong in the love and veneration of the people and the army, and possessing an almost unbounded influence over his officers, he succeeded in persuading the latter to disregard the anonymous call, and to frown upon all disorderly and illegal proceedings for obtaining redress. [4]In a subsequent meeting, called by Washington himself, General Gates presiding, the officers unanimously declared, that "No circumstances of distress or danger should induce a conduct that might tend to sully the reputation and glory which they had acquired at the price of their blood, and eight years faithful services," and that they still had "unshaken confidence in the justice of congress and their country."

3. What was effected by the influence of Washington?

4. What was done in a subsequent meeting called by him?

9. [5]Not long after, congress succeeded in making the proper arrangements for granting the officers, according to their request, five years full pay, in place of half pay for life; and four months full pay to the army, in part payment for past services. [6]Their work completed,—their country independent,—the soldiers of the revolution returned peaceably to their homes; bearing with them the public thanks of congress, in the name of their grateful country.

5. What arrangements were made by congress?

6. What is said of the return of the soldiers to their homes?

10. [7]Washington, having taken leave of his officers and army, repaired to Annapolis, where congress was then in session; and there, on the 23d of December,

7. Relate the circumstances of Washington's resignation.

1783. before that august body of patriots and sages, and a large concourse of spectators,—in a simple and affectionate address, after commending the interests of his country to the protection of Heaven, he resigned his commission as commander-in-chief of the American army.

1. What is said of his retirement?

11. [1]After an eloquent and affecting reply by General Mifflin, then president of the congress, Washington withdrew. He then retired to his residence at Mount Vernon,* exchanging the anxious labors of the camp, for the quiet industry of a farm, and bearing with him the enthusiastic love, esteem, and admiration of his countrymen.

2. To what was the attention of congress now directed?

12. [2]Independence and peace being now established, the public mind, relieved from the excitement incident to a state of war, was turned to examine the actual condition of the country. In addition to a foreign debt of eight millions of dollars, a domestic debt of more than thirty millions, due to American citizens, and, principally, to the officers and soldiers of the revolution, was strongly urged upon congress for payment.

3. Why could not congress discharge the debts?

[3]But by the articles of confederation congress had not the power to discharge debts incurred by the war; it could merely recommend to the individual states to raise money for that purpose.

4. For what were the states called upon?

5. What prevented their compliance?

13. [4]The states were therefore called upon for funds to discharge, in the first place, the arrears of pay due to the soldiers of the revolution. [5]The states listened to these calls with respect, but their situation was embarrassing;—each had its local debts to provide for, and its domestic government to support,—the country had been drained of its wealth, and taxes could not be collected; and, besides, congress had no binding power to compel the states to obedience. [6]Some of the states attempted, by heavy taxes upon the people, to support their credit, and satisfy their creditors. In Massachusetts, an insurrection was the consequence, and an armed force of several thousand men was necessary to suppress it.[a]

6. What caused an insurrection in Massachusetts?

a. In 1787.

* Mount Vernon, in Virginia, the former residence of Washington, is on the W. bank of the Potomac, six miles below Alexandria. It contains the mansion and the tomb of the Father of his country, and many a citizen and traveller have made a pilgrimage to this hallowed spot.

14. [1]With evils continually increasing, the necessity of a closer union of the states, and of an efficient general government, became more and more apparent. [2]A convention of commissioners from six states, held at Annapolis, in September, 1786, for the purpose of establishing a better system of commercial regulations, led to a proposition for revising the articles of confederation. Accordingly, a convention of delegates, from all the states, except Rhode Island, met[a] at Philadelphia for this purpose in 1787. [3]Finding the articles of confederation exceedingly defective as a form of government, the convention rejected their former purpose of revising them, and proceeded to the consideration of a new constitution.—[4]In July of this year, a large extent of territory north of the Ohio River was formed into a territorial government by the general congress, and called the Northwestern Territory.*

Previous to, and during the year 1788, majorities of the people in eleven of the states adopted the constitution, although not without strong opposition; as many believed that the extensive powers, which the new government gave to the rulers, would be dangerous to the liberties of the people.

PART IV.

THE UNITED STATES,

What period is embraced in Part IV.?

FROM THE ORGANIZATION OF THE GOVERNMENT UNDER THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION, IN 1789, TO THE YEAR 1845.

CHAPTER I.

WASHINGTON'S ADMINISTRATION,

Of what does Chapter I. treat?

FROM APRIL 30, 1789, TO MARCH 4, 1797.

1789.

1. [1]On the 30th of April, 1789, Washington appeared before congress, then assembled in the city of New York, and taking the oath of office required by the constitution, was proclaimed President of the United States.* [2]In an impressive address to both houses of congress, he expressed his distrust in his own qualifications for the important office to which the partiality of his country had called him,—offered his "supplications to that Almighty Being who rules over the universe, and presides in the councils of nations," that He would "consecrate to the liberties and happiness of the people of the United States a government instituted by themselves,"—and that He would enable all "employed in its administration, to execute, with success, the functions allotted to their charge."

1. When and where did Washington enter upon the duties of president?
2. What account is given of his address on that occasion?

2. [3]Adhering to the principles upon which he had acted while commander-in-chief, he now likewise declined all pecuniary compensation for his presidential duties, and closed by requesting congress to accompany him, in humble supplication, to the benign Parent of the human race, for the divine blessing on all those measures upon which the success of the government

[1]Immediately after the address, both houses of congress, with the president, attended divine service; and with this public acknowledgment of a Supreme Being as the ruler of the universe, and controller of human actions and human destiny, the government under the new constitution was commenced.

2. In what was the legislature occupied during its first session?

3. What measures were taken for providing a revenue, and for encouraging American shipping?

3. [2]The legislature, during its first session,[a]* was principally occupied in providing revenues for the long exhausted treasury; in organizing the executive departments; in establishing a judiciary; and in framing amendments to the constitution. [3]For providing a revenue, duties were levied on the tonnage of vessels, and likewise on foreign goods imported into the United States. For the purpose of encouraging American shipping, these duties were made unequal; being the heaviest on the tonnage of foreign vessels, and on goods introduced by them.

4. What departments were established to aid the president?

4. [4]To aid the president in the management of the affairs of government, three executive departments were established,—styled department of foreign affairs, or of state; department of the treasury, and department of war; with a secretary at the head of each. [5]The heads of these departments had special duties assigned them; and they were likewise to constitute a council, which might be consulted by the president, whenever he thought proper, on subjects relating to the duties of their offices. [6]The power of removing from office the heads of these departments, was, after much discussion, left with the president alone. [7]Thomas Jefferson was appointed secretary of state, Hamilton of the treasury, and Knox of the war department.

5. What duties were required of the heads of these departments?

6. Who had the power of removal?

7. What appointments were made?

8. What is said of the national judiciary, and of amendments to the constitution?

5. [8]A national judiciary was also established during this session of congress; consisting of a supreme court, having one chief justice, and several associate judges; and circuit and district courts, which have jurisdiction over certain cases specified in the constitution. John Jay was appointed chief justice of the United States, and Edmund Randolph attorney-general. Several amendments to the constitution were proposed by congress, ten of which were subsequently ratified by the constitutional majority of the states. [1]In November North Carolina adopted the constitution, and Rhode Island in the May following, thus completing the number of the thirteen original states. 1789.

1. What two states last adopted the constitution?

6. [2]Early in the second session, the secretary of the treasury brought forward,[a] at the request of congress, a plan for maintaining the public credit. He proposed, as a measure of sound policy and substantial justice, that the general government should assume, not only the public foreign and domestic debt, amounting to more than fifty-four millions of dollars, but likewise the debts of the states, contracted during the war, and estimated at twenty-five millions. 1790.

2. What is said of Hamilton's plan for maintaining public credit?

7. [3]Provision was made for the payment of the foreign debt without opposition; but respecting the assumption of the state debts, and also the full payment of the domestic debt,—in other words, the redemption of the public securities, then, in a great measure, in the hands of speculators who had purchased them for a small part of their nominal value, much division prevailed in congress; but the plan of the secretary was finally adopted.

3. What was the success of the plan?

8. [4]During this year a law was passed, fixing the seat of government, for ten years, at Philadelphia; and afterwards, permanently, at a place to be selected on the Potomac. [5]In 1790, the "Territory southwest of the Ohio," embracing the present Tennessee, was formed into a territorial government.

9. [6]During the same year, an Indian war broke out on the northwestern frontiers; and pacific arrangements having been attempted in vain, an expedition, under General Harmar, was sent into the Indian country, to reduce the hostile tribes to submission. Many of the Indian towns were burned, and a large quantity of corn destroyed; but in two battles,[b] near the confluence of the rivers St. Mary's* and St. Joseph's in Indiana, between successive detachments of the army

[1]Early in 1791, in accordance with a plan proposed by the secretary of the treasury, an act was passed by congress, for the establishment of a national bank, called the Bank of the United States; but not without the most strenuous opposition; on the ground, principally, that congress had no constitutional right to charter such an institution.

2. What is here related of Vermont?

11. [2]During the same year, Vermont,* the last settled of the New England States, adopted the constitution, and was admitted[a] into the Union. The territory of this state had been claimed both by New York and New Hampshire;—each had made grants of land within its limits; but in 1777 the people met in convention, and proclaimed Vermont, or New Connecticut, an independent state. Owing to the objections of New York, it was not admitted into the confederacy; nor was the opposition of New York withdrawn until 1789, when Vermont agreed to purchase the claims of New York to territory and jurisdiction by the payment of 30,000 dollars.

3. What occurred after the defeat of General Harmar in 1790?

12. [3]After the defeat of General Harmar in 1790, another expedition, with additional forces, was planned against the Indians, and the command given to General St. Clair, then governor of the Northwestern Territory. [4]In the fall of 1791, the forces of St. Clair, numbering about 2000 men, marched[b] from Fort Washington,† northward, about eighty miles, into the Indian country, where, on the 4th of November, they were surprised in camp,‡ and defeated with great slaughter. 13. [1]On the 1st of June, 1792, Kentucky,* which had been previously claimed by Virginia, was admitted into the Union as a state. The first settlement in the state was made by Daniel Boone and others, at a place called Boonesboro',† in the year 1775. During the early part of the revolution, the few inhabitants suffered severely from the Indians, who were incited by agents of the British government; but in 1779 General Clarke, as before mentioned,[a] overcame the Indians, and laid waste their villages; after which, the inhabitants enjoyed greater security, and the settlements were gradually extended. 1792.

[3]At this time the revolution in France was progressing, and early in 1793 news arrived in the United States of the declaration of war by France against England and Holland. [4]About the same time Mr. Genet arrived[b] in the United States, as minister of the French republic, where he was warmly received by the people, who remembered with gratitude the aid which France had rendered them in their struggle for independence, and who now cherished the flattering expectation that the French nation was about to enjoy the same blessings of liberty and self-government. 1793.

In the following summer he advanced still farther into the Indian country, and built Fort Defiance;* whence he moved down the Maumee,[e] and, on the 20th of August, at the head of about 3000 men, met the Indians near the rapids,† completely routed them, and laid waste their country.

After two ineffectual proclamations[f] by the president, the display of a large military force was necessary in order to quell the insurgents.

By the terms of the treaty, the western posts were to be surrendered* to the United States; compensation was to be made for illegal captures of American property; and the United States were to secure to British creditors the proper means of collecting debts, which had been contracted before the war of the revolution.

CHAPTER II.

ADAMS'S ADMINISTRATION,

FROM MARCH 4, 1797, TO MARCH 4, 1801.

What is the subject of Chapter II?

1. [1]During the administration of Washington, the condition of the country had been gradually improving. A sound credit had been established, funds had been provided for the gradual payment of the national debt, treaties had been concluded with the western Indian tribes, and with England, Spain, and the Barbary powers, and the agricultural and commercial wealth of the nation had increased beyond all former example. [2]But, in the mean time, difficulties with France had arisen, which threatened to involve the country in another war.

1. What had been accomplished during Washington's administration?

2. What difficulties had arisen?

2. [3]On the breaking out of the war between France and England, consequent upon the French revolution, the anti-federal or republican party warmly espoused the cause of the French; while the government, then in the hands of the federal party, in its attempts to preserve a strict neutrality towards the contending powers, was charged with an undue partiality for England. [4]The French ministers, who succeeded Mr. Genet, finding themselves, like their predecessor, supported by a numerous party attached to their nation, began to remonstrate with the government, and to urge upon it the adoption of measures more favorable to France.

3. How did the different parties regard the war between France and England?

4. What is said of the course adopted by the French ministers?

3. [5]The French Directory, failing in these measures, and highly displeased on account of the treaty recently concluded between England and the United States, adopted regulations highly injurious to American commerce; and even authorized, in certain cases, the capture and confiscation of American vessels and their cargoes. [6]They likewise refused to receive the American minister, Mr. Pinckney, until their demands against the United States should be complied with. Mr. Pinckney was afterwards obliged, by a written mandate, to quit the territories of the French republic.

5. What was done by the French Directory?

6. How was the American minister treated?

4. [7]In this state of affairs, the president, by procla-

[1]Advances were again made, however, for securing a reconciliation; and, for this purpose, three envoys, at the head of whom was Mr. Pinckney, were sent to France.

1. What advances were made towards a reconciliation?

2. What was the result of the embassy?

5. [2]But these, also, the Directory refused to receive; although they were met by certain unofficial agents of the French minister, who explicitly demanded a large sum of money before any negotiation could be opened. To this insulting demand a decided negative was given. Two of the envoys, who were federalists, were finally ordered to leave France; while the third, who was a republican, was permitted to remain.

3. How were these events viewed, and what preparations were made for war?

6. [3]These events excited general indignation in the United States; and vigorous measures were immediately adopted[a] by congress, for putting the country in a proper state of defence, preparatory to an expected war. Provision was made for raising a small standing army, the command of which was given[b] to General Washington, who cordially approved the measures of the government. A naval armament was decided upon, captures of French vessels were authorized, and all treaties with France were declared void.

a. In May.

b. July.

4. How far did these difficulties proceed, and what measures were taken for settling them?

7. [4]The land forces, however, were not called into action; and after a few encounters at sea, in which an American armed schooner was decoyed into the power of the enemy, and a French frigate captured, the French Directory made overtures of peace. The president, therefore, appointed[c] ministers, who were authorized to proceed to France, and settle, by treaty, the difficulties between the two countries.

5. What is said of the death of Washington?

Dec. 14.

6. What was done by congress on receiving intelligence of this event?

8. [5]Washington did not live to witness a restoration of peace. After a short illness, of only a few hours, he died at his residence at Mount Vernon, in Virginia, on the 14th of December, at the age of sixty-eight years. [6]When intelligence of this event reached Philadelphia, congress, then in session, immediately adjourned. On assembling the next day, the house of representatives resolved, "That the speaker's chair should be shrouded in black, that the members should wear black during the session, and that a joint com mittee, from the senate and the house, should be appointed to devise the most suitable manner of paying honor to the memory of the man first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." 1799.

9. [1]In accordance with the report of the committee, and the unanimous resolves of congress, a funeral procession moved from the legislative hall to the German Lutheran church, where an impressive and eloquent oration was delivered by General Lee, a representative from Virginia. The people of the United States were recommended to wear crape on the left arm, for thirty days. This recommendation was complied with, and a whole nation appeared in mourning. In every part of the republic, funeral orations were delivered; and the best talents of the nation were devoted to an expression of the nation's grief.

1. In what public manner did congress and the people express their grief on this occasion?

10. [2]Washington was above the common size; his frame was robust, and his constitution vigorous, and capable of enduring great fatigue. His person was fine; his deportment easy, erect, and noble; exhibiting a natural dignity, unmingled with haughtiness, and conveying the idea of great strength, united with manly gracefulness. His manners were rather reserved than free; he was humane, benevolent, and conciliatory; his temper was highly sensitive by nature, yet it never interfered with the coolness of his judgment, nor with that prudence which was the strongest feature in his character. His mind was great and powerful, and though slow in its operations, was sure in its conclusions. He devoted a long life to the welfare of his country; and while true greatness commands respect, and the love of liberty remains on the earth, the memory of Washington will be held in veneration.

2. Describe the personal appearance, manners, and character of Washington.

11. [3]During the summer of 1800, the seat of government was removed from Philadelphia to Washington, in the District of Columbia.* During the same year the territory between the western boundary of Georgia and the Mississippi River, then claimed by 1800.

3. What events occurred in 1800 and 1802?

* The District of Columbia is a tract of country ten miles square, on both sides of the Potomac River, about 120 miles from its mouth, by the river's course. In 1790 it was ceded to the United States by Virginia and Maryland, for the purpose of becoming the seat of government. It includes the cities of Washington, Alexandria, and 1800. Georgia, and called the Georgia western territory, was erected into a distinct government, and called the Mississippi Territory. Two years later, Georgia ceded to the United States all her claims to lands within those limits. [1]In September,[a] a treaty was concluded at Paris, between the French government, then in the hands of Bonaparte, and the United States; by which the difficulties between the two countries were happily terminated.

a. Sept. 30.

1. What is said of the treaty with France?

2. Of the efforts of parties towards the close of Adams's administration?

3. Of the unpopularity of the federal party?

12. [2]As the term of Mr. Adams's administration drew towards its close, each of the great parties in the country made the most strenuous efforts,—the one to retain, and the other to acquire the direction of the government. [3]Mr. Adams had been elected by the predominance of federal principles, but many things in his administration had tended to render the party to which he was attached unpopular with a majority of the nation.

4. What were the principal causes of public discontent?

13. [4]The people, ardently attached to liberty, had viewed with a jealous eye those measures of the government which evinced a coldness towards the French revolution, and a partiality for England; because they believed that the spirit of liberty was here contending against the tyranny of despotism. The act for raising a standing army, ever a ready instrument of oppression in the hands of kings, together with the system of direct taxation by internal duties, had been vigorously opposed by the democratic party; while the Alien and Sedition laws increased the popular ferment to a degree hitherto unparalleled.

5. Give an account of the alien and sedition laws.

14. [5]The "alien law," authorized the president to order any foreigner, whom he should judge dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States, to depart out of the country, upon penalty of imprisonment. The "sedition law," designed to punish the abuse of speech and of the press, imposed a heavy fine and imprisonment for "any false, scandalous, and malicious writing against the government of the United States, or either house of congress, or the president." [1]These laws were deemed, by the democrats, highly tyrannical; and their unpopularity contributed greatly to the overthrow of the federal party.

1. How were these laws regarded, and what was their effect?

15. [2]In the coming election, Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Burr were brought forward as the candidates of the democratic party, and Mr. Adams and Mr. Pinckney by the federalists. After a warmly contested election, the federal candidates were left in the minority. Jefferson and Burr had an equal number of votes; and as the constitution provided that the person having the greatest number should be president, it became the duty of the house of representatives, voting by states, to decide between the two. After thirty-five ballotings, the choice fell upon Mr. Jefferson, who was declared to be elected President of the United States, for four years, commencing March 4th, 1801. Mr. Burr, being then the second on the list, was consequently declared to be elected vice-president.

What period is included in Jefferson's administration?

3. [1]A more pacific course, however, was adopted. In 1800, Louisiana had been secretly ceded to France; and a negotiation was now opened with the latter power, which resulted in the purchase[d] of Louisiana for fifteen millions of dollars. In December,[e] 1803, possession was taken by the United States. f. War declared by the Bashaw, June 10, 1801.

4. [3]Since 1801 war had existed[f] between the United States and Tripoli, one of the piratical Barbary powers. In 1803, Commodore Preble was sent into the Mediterranean, and after humbling the emperor of Morocco, he appeared before Tripoli with most of his squadron. The frigate Philadelphia, under Captain Bainbridge, being sent into the harbor to reconnoitre, struck upon a rock, and was obliged to surrender[g] to the Tripolitans. The officers were considered prisoners of war, but the crew were treated as slaves. This capture caused great exultation with the enemy; but a daring exploit of lieutenant, afterwards Commodore Decatur, somewhat humbled the pride which they felt in this accession to their navy.

[4]Early in February[h] of the following year, Lieutenant Decatur, under the cover of evening, entered the harbor of Tripoli in a small schooner, having on board but seventy-six men, with the design of destroying the Philadelphia, which was then moored near the castle, with a strong Tripolitan crew. By the aid of his pilot, who understood the Tripolitan language, Decatur succeeded in bringing his vessel in contact with the Philadelphia; when he and his followers leaped on board, and, in a few minutes, killed twenty of the Tripolitans, and drove the rest into the sea.

Colonel Burr had lost the favor of the republican party, and being proposed for the office of governor of New York, was supported by many of the federalists, but was openly opposed by Hamilton, who considered him an unprincipled politician. A dispute arose, and a fatal duel[b] was the result.* [3]In the fall of 1804, Jefferson was re-elected president. George Clinton, of New York, was chosen vice-president.

He was arrested, and brought to trial in 1807, on the charge of treason, but was released for want of sufficient evidence to convict him.

3. Of the wars produced by the French Revolution?

12. [3]The wars produced by the French revolution still continued to rage, and at this time Napoleon, emperor of France, triumphant and powerful, had acquired control over nearly all the kingdoms of Europe. [4]England alone, unsubdued and undaunted, with unwavering purpose waged incessant war against her ancient rival; and though France was victorious on land, the navy of England rode triumphant in every sea. American vessels, trading thither, became a prey to French cruisers. [1]Early in the following year, the coasting trade of France was prohibited[a] by the British government. These measures, highly injurious to American commerce, and contrary to the laws of nations and the rights of neutral powers, occasioned great excitement in the United States, and the injured merchants loudly demanded of the government redress and protection. 1807.

1. What then did England do, and what was the effect of these measures?

14. [2]In June, an event of a hostile character occurred, which greatly increased the popular indignation against England. That power, contending for the principle that whoever was born in England always remained a British subject, had long claimed the right, and exercised the power of searching American ships, and taking from them those who had been naturalized in the United States, and who were, therefore, claimed as American citizens.

2. What is said of the pretensions and claims of the British government?

15. [3]On the 22d of June, the American frigate Chesapeake, then near the coast of the United States, having refused to deliver up four men claimed by the English as deserters, was fired upon by the British ship of war Leopard. Being unsuspicious of danger at the time, and unprepared for the attack, the Chesapeake struck her colors, after having had three of her men killed, and eighteen wounded. The four men claimed as deserters were then transferred to the British vessel. Upon investigation it was ascertained that three of them were American citizens, who had been impressed by the British, and had afterwards escaped from their service.

[1]In December, congress decreed[a] an embargo, the design of which was, not only to retaliate upon France and England, but also, by calling home and detaining American vessels and sailors, to put the country in a better posture of defence, preparatory to an expected war. The embargo failing to obtain, from France and England, an acknowledgment of American rights, and being likewise ruinous to the commerce of the country with other nations, in March,[b] 1809, congress repealed it; but, at the same time, interdicted all commercial intercourse with France and England.

1. [3]Soon after the accession of Mr. Madison to the presidency, he was assured by Mr. Erskine, the British minister at Washington, that the British "orders in council,"[d] so far as they affected the United States, should be repealed by the 10th of June. The president, therefore, proclaimed that commercial intercourse would be renewed with England on that day. The British government, however, disavowed the acts of its minister; the orders in council were not repealed; and non-intercourse with England was again proclaimed.[e]

1. What is said of the embargo of 1812, and of the declaration of war?

—1. [1]Early in April, 1812, congress passed[a] an act laying an embargo, for ninety days, on all vessels within the jurisdiction of the United States. On the 4th of June following, a bill declaring war against Great Britain passed the house of representatives; and, on the 17th, the senate; and, on the 19th, the president issued a proclamation of war.[b]

2. What preparations were made for the war?

2. [2]Exertions were immediately made to enlist 25,000 men; to raise 50,000 volunteers; and to call out 100,000 militia for the defence of the seacoast and frontiers. Henry Dearborn, of Massachusetts, an officer of the revolution, was appointed major-general and commander-in-chief of the army.

3. Give an account of the movements of Gen. Hull.

3. [3]At the time of the declaration of war, General Hull, then governor of Michigan Territory, was on his march from Ohio to Detroit, with a force of two thousand men, with a view of putting an end to the Indian hostilities on the northwestern frontier. Being vested with an authority to invade the Canadas, "if consistent with the safety of his own posts," on the 12th of July he crossed the river Detroit,* and encamped at Sandwich,† with the professed object of marching upon the British post at Malden.‡

The demand was precipitately complied with,[a] and the British were thus put in possession of one of the strongest posts in the United States. 5. [1]General Hull himself, after remaining inactive nearly a month in Canada, while his confident troops were daily expecting to be led against the enemy, suddenly recrossed, in the night of the 7th of August, to the town and fort of Detroit, to the bitter vexation and disappointment of his officers and army, who could see no reason for thus abandoning the object of the expedition. [2]He now sent[c] a detachment of several hundred men, under Colonel Miller, to accomplish the object previously attempted by Major Van Horne. While the American troops, advantageously posted, and numbering more than the combined force of the British and Indians, were anxiously awaiting the orders to fire, great was their mortification and rage, when all were suddenly ordered within the fort, and a white flag, in token of submission, was suspended from the walls. The court declined giving an opinion upon the charge of treason, but convicted him of cowardice and unofficerlike conduct. 2. Give an account of the preparations for invading Canada, and of the attack on Queenstown.

II. EVENTS ON THE NIAGARA FRONTIER.[a]—1. [2]During the summer, arrangements were made for the invasion of Canada from another quarter. A body of troops, consisting mostly of New York militia, was collected on the Niagara frontier, and the command given to General Stephen Van Rensselaer. Early on the morning of the 13th of October, a detachment of two hundred and twenty-five men, under Col. Solomon Van Rensselaer, crossed the river, gained possession of the heights of Queenstown,* and took a small battery near its summit. Van Rensselaer was wounded at the landing, and the assault was led by Captains Ogilvie and Wool.

3. Describe the remaining events that occurred at Queenstown.

2. [3]At the very moment of success, the enemy received a reenforcement of several hundred men under General Brock. These attempted to regain possession of the battery, but were driven back by an inferior force under Captain Wool, and their leader, General Brock, was killed. In the afternoon, the British received a strong reenforcement from Fort George,† while all the exertions of General Van Rensselaer, during the day, could induce only about one thousand of his troops to cross the river. These were attacked by a far superior force, and nearly all were killed or taken prisoners, in the very sight of twelve or fifteen hundred of their brethren in arms on the opposite shore, who positively refused to embark.

attacked, they professed to entertain scruples about carrying on offensive war by invading the enemy's territory. [1]Unfortunately, these principles were entertained, and the conduct of the militia on this occasion defended by many of the federal party, who were, generally, opposed to the war. 1812.

4. [2]Soon after the battle of Queenstown, General Van Rensselaer retired from the service, and was succeeded[a] by General Alexander Smyth, of Virginia. [3]This officer issued an address,[b] announcing his resolution of retrieving the honor of his country by another attack on the Canadian frontier, and invited the young men of the country to share in the danger and glory of the enterprise. But after collecting between four and five thousand men, sending a small party across[c] at Black Rock,* and making a show of passing with a large force, the design was suddenly abandoned, to the great surprise of the troops. Another preparation for an attack was made, and the troops were actually embarked, when they were again withdrawn, and ordered to winter quarters.

III. NAVAL EVENTS.—1. [4]Thus far the events of the war, on the land, had been unfavorable to the Americans; but on another element, the national honor had been fully sustained, by a series of unexpected and brilliant victories. [5]On the 19th of August, the American frigate Constitution, of forty-four guns, commanded by Captain Isaac Hull, engaged the British frigate Guerriere, of thirty-eight guns, commanded by Captain Dacres; and after an action[d] of thirty minutes, compelled her to surrender. The United States was almost entirely uninjured. Her loss was only five killed and seven wounded. The superiority of the American gunnery in this action was remarkably conspicuous.

4. [2]In December, the Constitution, then commanded by Commodore Bainbridge, achieved a second naval victory; capturing[c] the British frigate Java, carrying forty-nine guns and 400 men. The action occurred off St. Salvador,* and continued more than three hours. Of the crew of the Java, nearly 200 were killed and wounded; of the Constitution, only thirty-four. The Java, having been made a complete wreck, was burned after the action.

3. What is said of other naval successes?

5. [3]In addition to these distinguished naval victories, others, less noted, were frequently occurring. Numerous privateers covered the ocean, and during the year 1812, nearly three hundred vessels, more than fifty of which were armed, were captured from the enemy, and more than three thousand prisoners were taken. Compared with this, the number captured by the enemy was but trifling. The American navy became the pride of the people, and in every instance it added to the national renown.

I. EVENTS IN THE WEST AND SOUTH.—1. [1]In the beginning of 1813, the principal American forces were arranged in three divisions. The army of the West was commanded by General Harrison; the army of the centre, under General Dearborn, was on the southern shore of Lake Ontario, and on the Niagara frontier; and the army of the North, under General Hampton, on the shores of Lake Champlain.

1. How were the principal American forces arranged in 1813?

2. [2]Shortly after the disaster which befell the army under General Hull, the militia of the Western States, promptly obedient to the calls of their country, assembled in great numbers at different and distant points, for the defence of the frontier, and the recovery of the lost territory. [3]It was the design of General Harrison to collect these forces at some point near the head of Lake Erie, from which a descent should be made upon the British posts at Detroit and Malden.

2. What occurred at the west, soon after Hull's surrender?

3. What is said of Harrison's design?

3. [4]On the 10th of January, General Winchester, with about 800 men, arrived at the rapids[a] of the Maumee. Learning[b] that a body of British and Indians was about to concentrate at the village of Frenchtown,* thirty miles in his advance, on the river Raisin;† at the earnest solicitation of the inhabitants he detached[c] a small party under Colonels Lewis and Allen for their protection. This party, finding the enemy already in possession of the town, successfully attacked[d] and routed them; and having encamped on the spot, was soon after joined[e] by the main body under General Winchester.

The Americans made a brave defence against this superior force, and after a severe loss on both sides, the attack on the main body was for a time suspended; when General Proctor, learning that General Winchester had fallen into the hands of the Indians, induced him, by a pledge of protection to the prisoners, to surrender the troops under his command.

9. [2]A cannonade from several six-pounders and a howitzer was opened upon the fort, and continued until a breach had been effected, when about 500 of the enemy attempted to carry the place by assault.[c] They advanced towards the breach under a destructive fire of musketry, and threw themselves into the ditch, when the only cannon in the fort, loaded with grape shot, and placed so as to rake the ditch, was opened upon them with terrible effect. The whole British force, panic struck, soon fled in confusion, and hastily abandoned the place, followed by their Indian allies. The loss of the enemy was about 150 in killed and wounded, while that of the Americans was only one killed and seven wounded.

By the exertions of Commodore Perry, an American squadron, consisting of nine vessels carrying fifty-four guns, had been prepared for service; while a British squadron of six vessels, carrying sixty-three guns, had been built and equipped under the superintendence of Commodore Barclay.

3. What efforts were made for the mastery of Lake Erie?

11. [4]On the tenth of September the two squadrons met near the western extremity of Lake Erie. In the beginning of the action the fire of the enemy was directed principally against the Lawrence, the flag-ship of Commodore Perry, which in a short time became Commodore Perry, in an open boat, then left her, and transferred his flag on board the Niagara; which, passing through the enemy's line, poured successive broadsides into five of their vessels, at half pistol shot distance. The wind favoring, the remainder of the squadron now came up, and at four o'clock every vessel of the enemy had surrendered.

On the first charge, the main body of the enemy in front was broken; but on the left the contest with the Indians raged for some time with great fury. Animated by the voice and conduct of their leader, the Indians fought with determined courage, until Tecumseh himself was slain. The victory was complete; nearly the whole force of Proctor being killed or taken. By a rapid flight Proctor saved himself, with a small portion of his cavalry.

SEAT OF THE CREEK WAR.

1813. turn to resume the narrative of events on the northern frontier.

1. What expedition was undertaken by Gen. Dearborn in April?

II. EVENTS IN THE NORTH.—1. [1]On the 25th of April, General Dearborn, with 1700 men, embarked at Sackett's Harbor,* on board the fleet of Commodore Chauncey, with the design of making an attack on York,† the capital of Upper Canada, the great depository of British military stores, whence the western posts were supplied. [2]On the 27th the troops landed, although opposed at the water's edge by a large force of British and Indians, who were soon driven back to the garrison, a mile and a half distant.

2. What occurred at the landing?

3. Give an account of the events which attended the capture of York.

2. [3]Led on by General Pike, the troops had already carried one battery by assault, and were advancing against the main works, when the enemy's magazine blew up, hurling immense quantities of stone and timber upon the advancing columns, and killing and wounding more than 200 men. The gallant Pike was mortally wounded, and the troops were, for a moment, thrown into confusion; but recovering from the shock, they advanced upon the town, of which they soon gained possession. General Sheaffe escaped with the principal part of the regular troops, but lost all his baggage, books, and papers, and abandoned public property to a large amount.

4. Whither did the squadron next sail?

5. Give an account of the attack on Sackett's Harbor.

3. [4]The object of the expedition having been attained, the squadron returned to Sackett's Harbor, but soon after sailed for the Niagara frontier. [5]The British on the opposite Canadian shore, being informed of the departure of the fleet, seized the opportunity of making an attack on Sackett's Harbor. On the 27th of May, their squadron appeared before the town, and retreat was about to be cut off, re-embarked his troops so hastily, as to leave behind most of his wounded. 1813.

5. [1]On the very day of the appearance of the British before Sackett's Harbor, the American fleet and land troops made an attack on Fort George, on the Niagara frontier; which, after a short defence, was abandoned[a] by the enemy. The British then retreated to the heights at the head of Burlington Bay,* closely pursued by Generals Chandler and Winder at the head of a superior force. In a night attack[b] on the American camp, the enemy were repulsed with considerable loss; although in the darkness and confusion, both Generals Chandler and Winder were taken prisoners.

6. [2]During the remainder of the summer few events of importance occurred on the northern frontier. Immediately after the battle of the Thames, General Harrison, with a part of his regular force, proceeded to Buffalo,† where he arrived on the 24th of October. Soon after, he closed his military career by a resignation of his commission. General Dearborn had previously withdrawn from the service, and his command had been given to General Wilkinson.

2. What is said of the remainder of the summer, and of the change of officers?

7. [3]General Armstrong, who had recently been appointed secretary of war, had planned another invasion of Canada. The army of the centre, under the immediate command of General Wilkinson, and that of the North, under General Hampton, were to unite at some point on the St. Lawrence, and co-operate for the reduction of Montreal.

3. What is said of the plans of Gen. Armstrong?

8. [4]After many difficulties and unavoidable delays, late in the season the scattered detachments of the army of the centre, comprising about 7000 men, embarked[c] from French Creek,‡ down the St. Lawrence. In December, General McClure, commanding at Fort George, abandoned[a] that post on the approach of the British; having previously reduced the Canadian village of Newark‖ to ashes.[b] A few days later, a force of British and Indians surprised and gained possession[c] of Fort Niagara; and in revenge for the burning of Newark, the villages of Youngstown,¶ Lewiston, Manchester,†† and the Indian Tuscarora village‡‡ were reduced to ashes. was found to be sinking rapidly, and although the greatest exertions were made to save her crew, she went down in a few minutes, carrying with her nine British seamen, and three brave and generous Americans. 1813.

2. [1]The tide of fortune, so long with the Americans, now turned in favor of the British. On the return of Captain Lawrence to the United States, he was promoted to the command of the frigate Chesapeake, then lying in Boston harbor. With a crew of newly enlisted men, partly foreigners, he hastily put to sea on the 1st of June, in search of the British frigate Shannon; which, with a select crew, had recently appeared off the coast, challenging any American frigate of equal force to meet her. On the same day the two vessels met, and engaged with great fury. In a few minutes every officer who could take command of the Chesapeake was either killed or wounded; the vessel, greatly disabled in her rigging, became entangled with the Shannon; the enemy boarded, and, after a short, but bloody struggle, hoisted the British flag.

June 1.

3. [2]The youthful and intrepid Lawrence, who, by his previous victory and magnanimous conduct, had become the favorite of the nation, was mortally wounded early in the action. As he was carried below, he issued his last heroic order, "Don't give up the ship;" words which are consecrated to his memory, and which have become the motto of the American navy. The bodies of Captain Lawrence and Lieutenant Ludlow—the second in command—were conveyed to Halifax, where they were interred with appropriate civil and military honors; and no testimony of respect that was due to their memories was left unpaid.

2. What is said of Capt. Lawrence, and Lieutenant Ludlow?

4. [3]On the 14th of August, the American brig Argus, after a successful cruise in the British Channel, in which she captured more than twenty English vessels, was herself captured, after a severe combat, by the brig Pelican, a British vessel of about equal force. [4]In September following, the British brig Boxer surrendered to the American brig Enterprise, near the coast of Maine, after an engagement of forty minutes. The commanders of both vessels fell in the action, and were

1. What is related of Capt. Porter, and the frigate Essex?

5. [1]During the summer, Captain Porter, of the frigate Essex, after a long and successful cruise in the Atlantic, visited the Pacific Ocean, where he captured a great number of British vessels. Early in the following year, the Essex was captured[a] in the harbor of Valparaiso,* by a British frigate and sloop of superior force.

a. March 28, 1814.

2. What of American privateers?

[2]The numerous privateers, which, during this year, as well as the former, visited all parts of the world, and seriously annoyed the British shipping, in general sustained the high character which the American flag had already gained for daring and intrepidity, and generous treatment of the vanquished.

3. Give an account of the war on the seacoast.

6. [3]Meanwhile, on the seacoast, a disgraceful war of havoc and destruction was carried on by large detachments from the British navy. Most of the shipping in Delaware Bay was destroyed. Early in the season, a British squadron entered the Chesapeake, and plundered and burned several villages. At Hampton,† the inhabitants were subjected to the grossest outrages from the brutal soldiery. The blockade of the northern ports fell into the hands of Commodore Hardy, a brave and honorable officer, whose conduct is pleasingly contrasted with that of the commander of the squadron in the Chesapeake.

On the morning of the 5th, General Riall appeared before the American camp, and the two armies met in the open field; but after a severe battle, the enemy withdrew to their intrenchments, with a loss in killed, wounded, and missing, of about 500 men. VIC. OF NIAGARA FALLS.

1. Give an account of the early part of the action.

4 [1]General Scott, leading the advance, first engaged the enemy, and contended for an hour against a force greatly his superior; when both parties were reenforced by the main bodies of the two armies, and the battle was renewed with increased fury. Major Jessup, in the mean time, had fallen upon the flank and rear of the enemy; and, in the darkness, General Riall and his suite were made prisoners. As the British artillery, placed on an eminence, sorely annoyed the Americans in every part of the field, it became evident that the victory depended upon carrying the battery.

2. Of the taking of the British battery.

5. [2]Colonel Miller was asked if he could storm the battery. "I can try, sir," was the laconic answer. Placing himself at the head of his regiment, he advanced steadily up the ascent,[a] while every discharge of the enemy's cannon and musketry rapidly thinned his ranks. But nothing could restrain the impetuosity of his men, who, in a desperate charge, gained possession of the battery; and the American line was immediately formed upon the ground previously occupied by the enemy.

3. What farther account is given of the battle, and of the losses on each side?

6. [3]The attention of both armies was now directed to this position; and three desperate and sanguinary efforts were made by the whole British force to regain it, but without success. In the third attempt General Drummond was wounded, when his forces, beaten back with a heavy loss, were withdrawn; and the Americans were left in quiet possession of the field. The British force engaged in this action was about 5000 men, nearly one-third greater than that of the American. The total loss of the former was 878 men, of the latter 858.

4. What change of officers took place, and what events followed, on the Niagara frontier, up to the close of the campaign?

7. [4]Generals Brown and Scott having been wounded, the command devolved upon General Ripley, who deemed it prudent to retire to Fort Erie; where, on the 4th of August, he was besieged by General Drummond, at the head of 5000 men. Soon after, General Gaines arrived at the fort, and being the senior officer, took the command. Early on the morning of the 15th, the enemy made an assault upon the fort, but were repulsed with a loss of nearly a thousand men.

8. On the 17th of September, General Brown having previously resumed the command, a successful sortie was made from the fort, and the advanced works of the besiegers were destroyed. The enemy soon after retired to Fort George, on learning that General Izard was approaching from Plattsburg, with reinforcements for the American army. In November, Fort Erie was abandoned[a] and destroyed, and the American troops, recrossing the river, went into winter quarters at Buffalo,[b] Black Rock,[c] and Batavia.* 1814.

2. [2]In August, General Izard was despatched to the Niagara frontier with 5000 men, leaving General Macomb in command at Plattsburg with only 1500. The British in Canada having been strongly reinforced by the veterans who had served under Wellington, in Europe, early in September Sir George Prevost advanced against Plattsburg, at the head of 14,000 men, and at the same time an attempt was made to destroy the American flotilla on Lake Champlain, commanded by Commodore MacDonough.

2. What events followed the appointment of Gen. Izard?

3. [3]On the 6th of September, the enemy arrived at Plattsburg. The troops of General Macomb withdrew across the Saranac;[f] and, during four days, withstood all the attempts of the enemy to force a passage. After witnessing the capture of the fleet, the efforts of the enemy relaxed, and, at dusk, they commenced a hasty retreat; leaving behind their sick and wounded, together with a large quantity of military stores. [1]After the successful attack on Washington, General Ross sailed up the Chesapeake; and, on the 12th of September, landed at North Point,[a] fourteen miles from Baltimore; and immediately commenced his march towards the city. In a slight skirmish General Ross was killed, but the enemy, under the command of Colonel Brooke, continued the march, and a battle of one hour and twenty minutes was fought with a body of militia under General Stricker. 6. [4]In the mean time, the coasts of New England did not escape the ravages of war. Formidable squadrons were kept up before the ports of New York, New London, and Boston; and a vast quantity of shipping fell into the hands of the enemy. In August, Stonington‡ was bombarded[d] by Commodore Hardy, and several attempts were made to land, which were successfully opposed by the militia.

Returning to his head-quarters at Mobile, he received authentic information that preparations were making for a formidable invasion of Louisiana, and an attack on New Orleans.

3. [2]He immediately repaired[d] to that city, which he found in a state of confusion and alarm. By his exertions, order and confidence were restored; the militia were organized; fortifications were erected; and, finally, martial law was proclaimed; which, although a violation of the constitution, was deemed indispensable for the safety of the country, and a measure justified by necessity.

4. [3]On the 5th of December a large British squadron appeared off the harbor of Pensacola, and on the 10th entered Lake Borgne,‡ the nearest avenue of approach to New Orleans. Here a small squadron of American gun-boats, under Lieutenant Jones, was attacked, and after a sanguinary conflict, in which the killed and wounded of the enemy exceeded the whole number of the Americans, was compelled to surrender.[e]

5. [4]On the 22d of December, about 2400 of the enemy reached the Mississippi, nine miles below New Orleans,§ where, on the following night, they were surprised by an unexpected and vigorous attack upon their camp, which they succeeded in repelling, after a loss of 400 men in killed and wounded.

‡ The entrance to this lake or bay is about sixty miles N.E. from New Orleans. (See also Notes on p. 193.)

§ For a description of New Orleans see Note, page 291.

6. [1]Jackson now withdrew his troops to his intrenchments, four miles below the city. On the 28th of December and 1st of January, these were vigorously cannonaded by the enemy, but without success. On the morning of the 8th of January, General Packenham, the commander-in-chief of the British, advanced against the American intrenchments with the main body of his army, numbering more than 12,000 men. 1815.

1. What several attacks were made on the American works?

7. [2]Behind their breastworks of cotton bales, which no balls could penetrate, 6000 Americans, mostly militia, but the best marksmen in the land, silently awaited the attack. When the advancing columns had approached within reach of the batteries, they were met by an incessant and destructive cannonade; but closing their ranks as fast as they were opened, they continued steadily to advance, until they came within reach of the American musketry and rifles. The extended American line now presented one vivid stream of fire, throwing the enemy into confusion, and covering the plain with the wounded and the dead. Jan. 8.

2. Continue the account of the battle of the 8th of January.

8. [3]In an attempt to rally his troops, General Packenham was killed; General Gibbs, the second in command, was mortally wounded, and General Keene severely. The enemy now fled in dismay from the certain death which seemed to await them; no one was disposed to issue an order, nor would it have been obeyed had any been given. General Lambert, on whom the command devolved, being unable to check the flight of the troops, retired to his encampment, leaving 700 dead, and more than 1000 wounded, on the field of battle. The loss of the Americans was only seven killed and six wounded. The whole British army hastily withdrew and retreated to their shipping.

3. What is said of the losses and the retreat of the enemy?

9. [4]This was the last important action of the war on the land. The rejoicings of victory were speedily followed by the welcome tidings that a treaty of peace between the United States and Great Britain had been concluded in the previous December. A little later the war lingered on the ocean, closing there, as on the land, with victory adorning the laurels of the republic. In February, the Constitution captured the Cyane and the Levant off the Island of Madeira;* and in March,

10. [1]The opposition of a portion of the federal party to the war has already been mentioned.[a] The dissatisfaction prevailed somewhat extensively throughout the New England States; and, finally, complaints were made that the general government, looking upon the New England people with uncalled-for jealousy, did not afford them that protection to which their burden of the expenses of the war entitled them. They likewise complained that the war was badly managed; and some of the more zealous opponents of the administration proposed, that not only the militia, but the revenue also, of the New England States, should be retained at home for their own defence.

a. See p. 307.

1. What is said of the opposition of the federal party to the war, and of the complaints of many of the New England people?

11. [2]Finally, in December, 1814, a convention of delegates appointed by the legislatures of Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, and a partial representation from Vermont and New Hampshire, assembled at Hartford, for the purpose of considering the grievances of which the people complained, and for devising some measures for their redress.

2. What convention was assembled at Hartford, and for what purpose?

12. [3]The convention was denounced in the severest terms, by the friends of the administration, who branded it with odium, as giving encouragement to the enemy, and as being treasonable to the general government. [4]The proceedings of the convention, however, were not as objectionable as many anticipated; its most important measure being the recommendation of several amendments to the constitution, and a statement of grievances, many of which were real, but which necessarily arose out of a state of war. [5]As the news of peace arrived soon after the adjournment of the convention, the causes of disquiet were removed; but party feelings had become deeply imbittered, and, to this day, the words, "Hartford Convention," are, with many, a term of reproach.

in Flanders, where a treaty of peace was concluded, and signed on the 24th of December following. [1]Upon the subjects for which the war had been professedly declared,—the encroachments upon American commerce, and the impressment of American seamen under the pretext of their being British subjects, the treaty, thus concluded, was silent. The causes of the former, however, had been mostly removed by the termination of the European war; and Great Britain had virtually relinquished her pretensions to the latter. 1814. Dec. 24. 1. Of the causes which led to the war?

WAR WITH ALGIERS.—1. [2]Scarcely had the war with England closed, when it became necessary for the United States to commence another, for the protection of American commerce and seamen against Algerine piracies. [3]From the time of the treaty with Algiers, in 1795, up to 1812, peace had been preserved to the United States by the payment of an annual tribute. [4]In July of the latter year, the dey, believing that the war with England would render the United States unable to protect their commerce in the Mediterranean, extorted from the American consul, Mr. Lear, a large sum of money, as the purchase of his freedom, and the freedom of American citizens then in Algiers, and then commenced a piratical warfare against all American vessels that fell in the way of his cruisers. The crews of the vessels taken were condemned to slavery. 2. What led to a war with Algiers? 3. How had peace been preserved? 4. What advantage had the Dey taken on account of the war with England?

2. [5]In May, 1815, a squadron under Commodore Decatur sailed for the Mediterranean, where the naval force of the dey was cruising for American vessels. On the 17th of June, Decatur fell in with the frigate of the admiral of the Algerine squadron, of forty-six guns, and after a running fight of twenty minutes, captured her, killing thirty, among whom was the admiral, and taking more than 400 prisoners. Two days later, he captured a frigate of twenty-two guns and 180 men, after which he proceeded[a] with his squadron to the bay of Algiers. Here a treaty[b] was dictated to the dey, who found himself under the humiliating necessity of releasing the American prisoners in his possession; and of relinquishing all future claims to tribute from the United States. 1815. 5. What was the success of Com. Decatur?

3. [1]Decatur then proceeded to Tunis, and thence to Tripoli, and from both of these powers demanded and obtained the payment of large sums of money, for violations of neutrality during the recent war with England. [2]The exhibition of a powerful force, and the prompt manner in which justice was demanded and enforced from the Barbary powers, not only gave future security to American commerce in the Mediterranean, but increased the reputation of the American navy, and elevated the national character in the eyes of Europe.

1816. 3. What is said of a national bank? a. April 10. Commenced operations Jan. 1, 1817. 4. What other events are related as occurring in 1816?

4. [3]The charter of the former national bank having expired in 1811, early in 1816 a second national bank, called the Bank of the United States, was incorporated,[a] with a capital of thirty-five millions of dollars, and a charter to continue in force twenty years. [4]In December, Indiana* became an independent state, and was admitted into the Union. In the election held in the autumn of 1816, James Monroe, of Virginia, was chosen president, and Daniel D. Tompkins, of New York, vice-president of the United States.

CHAPTER V.

What period is embraced in Monroe's administration?

MONROE'S ADMINISTRATION.

FROM MARCH 4, 1817, TO MARCH 4, 1825.

1817. 5. What caused produced embarrassments in trade and commerce?

1. [5]During the war, the prices of commodities had been high; but at its close they fell to their ordinary level, causing serious pecuniary embarrassments to a large class of speculators and traders, and likewise to all who had relied upon the continuance of high prices to furnish means for the payment of their debts. While foreign goods were attainable only in small quantities and at high prices, numerous manufacturing establishments had sprung up; but at the close of the war the

The southeastern part of the state, bordering on the Ohio, is hilly, but the southwestern is level, and is covered with a heavy growth of timber. N.W. of the Wabash the country is generally level, but near Lake Michigan are numerous sand hills, some of which are bare, and others covered with a growth of pine. The prairie lands on the Wabash and other streams have a deep and rich soil. Indiana was first settled at Vincennes, by the French, about the year 1730.

country was inundated with foreign goods, mostly of British manufacture, and the ruin of most of the rival establishments in the United States was the consequence. 1817.

2. [1]But although the return of peace occasioned these serious embarrassments to the mercantile interests, it at once gave a new impulse to agriculture. Thousands of citizens, whose fortunes had been reduced by the war, sought to improve them where lands were cheaper and more fertile than on the Atlantic coast; the numerous emigrants who flocked to the American shores, likewise sought a refuge in the unsettled regions of the West; and so rapid was the increase of population, that within ten years from the peace with England, six new states had grown up in the recent wilderness.

1. What is said of agriculture and the settlement of the country?

3. [2]In December, 1817, the Mississippi Territory[a] was divided, and the western portion of it admitted into the Union, as the State of Mississippi.* The eastern portion was formed into a territorial government, and called Alabama Territory. During the same month, a piratical establishment that had been formed on Amelia Island,† by persons claiming to be acting under the authority of some of the republics of South America, for the purpose of liberating the Floridas from the dominion of Spain, was broken up by the United States. A similar establishment at Galveston,‡ on the coast of Texas, was likewise suppressed.

a. See p. 296.

2. What events occurred in December, 1817?

4. [3]In the latter part of 1817, the Seminole Indians, and a few of the Creeks, commenced depredations on the frontiers of Georgia and Alabama. General Gaines was first sent out to reduce the Indians; but his force being insufficient, General Jackson was ordered[b] to take the field, and to call on the governors of the adjacent states for such additional forces as he might deem requisite.

3. What account is given of difficulties with the Creeks and Seminoles in 1817?

b. Dec. 26.

* MISSISSIPPI, one of the Southern States, contains an area of about 48,000 square miles. The region bordering on the Gulf of Mexico is mostly a sandy, level pine forest. Farther north the soil is rich, the country more elevated, and the climate generally healthy. The margin of the Mississippi River consists of inundated swamps covered with a large growth of timber. The first settlement in the state was formed at Natches, by the French, in 1716.

1818. 5. [1]General Jackson, however, instead of calling on the governors, addressed a circular to the patriots of West Tennessee; one thousand of whom immediately joined him. At the head of his troops, he then marched into the Indian territory, which he overran without opposition. Deeming it necessary to enter Florida for the subjugation of the Seminoles, he marched upon St. Mark's,[a] a feeble Spanish post, of which he took possession, removing the Spanish authorities and troops to Pensacola. A Scotchman and an Englishman, Arbuthnot and Ambrister, having fallen into his hands, were accused of inciting the Indians to hostilities, tried by a court-martial, and executed.

[3]The proceedings of General Jackson, in the prosecution of this war, have been the subject of much animadversion. The subject was extensively debated in congress, during the session of 1818–19, but the conduct of the general met the approbation of the president; and a resolution of censure, in the house, was rejected by a large majority.

1819. 7. [4]In February, 1819, a treaty was negotiated at Washington, by which Spain ceded to the United States East and West Florida, and the adjacent islands. After a vexatious delay, the treaty was finally ratified by the king of Spain in October, 1820. [5]In 1819, the southern portion of Missouri territory was formed into a territorial government, by the name of Arkansas; and in December of the same year, Alabama† territory was formed into a state, and admitted into the Union.

Throughout a large part of the state the soil is excellent.

8. [1]Missouri had previously applied for admission. A proposition in congress, to prohibit the introduction of slavery into the new state, arrayed the South against the North, the slaveholding against the non-slaveholding states, and the whole subject of slavery became the exciting topic of debate throughout the Union. [2]The Missouri question was finally settled by a compromise, which tolerated slavery in Missouri, but otherwise prohibited it in all the territory of the United States north and west of the northern limits of Arkansas; and in August, 1821, Missouri* became the twenty-fourth state in the Union. 1820.

2. How was the question settled?

9. [3]At the expiration of Mr. Monroe's term of office, he was re-elected with great unanimity. Mr. Tompkins was again elected vice-president. [4]An alarming system of piracy having grown up in the West Indies, during the year 1822 a small naval force was sent there, which captured and destroyed upwards of twenty piratical vessels, on the coast of Cuba. In the following year, Commodore Porter, with a larger force, completely broke up the retreats of the pirates in those seas; but many of them sought other hiding places, whence, at an after period, they renewed their depredations.

1. What is said of the presidential election of 1824?

11. [1]The election of a successor to Mr. Monroe was attended with more than usual excitement, owing to the number of candidates in the field. Four were presented for the suffrages of the people: Adams in the East, Crawford in the South, Jackson and Clay in the West. As no candidate received a majority of the electoral votes, the choice of president devolved upon the house of representatives, which decided in favor of Mr. Adams. Mr. Calhoun, of South Carolina, had been chosen vice-president, by the people.

CHAPTER VI.

What period is embraced in Adams's administration?

J. Q. ADAMS'S ADMINISTRATION,

FROM MARCH 4, 1825, TO MARCH 4, 1829.

2. What was the state of the country during that period?

1. [2]During the period of Mr. Adams's administration, peace was preserved with foreign nations; domestic quiet prevailed; the country rapidly increased in population and wealth; and, like every era of peace and prosperity, few events of national importance occurred, requiring a recital on the page of history.

3. What is said of the controversy with Georgia?

2. [3]A controversy between the national government and the state of Georgia, in relation to certain lands held by the Creek nation, at one time occasioned some anxiety, but was finally settled without disturbing the peace of the Union. After several attempts on the part of Georgia, to obtain possession of the Creek territory, in accordance with treaties made with portions of the tribe, the national government purchased the residue of the lands for the benefit of Georgia, which settled the controversy.

3. [4]On the 4th of July, 1826, the fiftieth anniversary of American independence, occurred the deaths of the two venerable ex-presidents, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. [5]Both had been among the first to resist the high-handed measures of Great Britain; both were members of the early colonial congresses; the former

made upon the characters of the two ex-presidents?

4. Each had served his country in its highest station; and although one was at the head of the federal, and the other of the anti-federal party, both were equally sincere advocates of liberty, and each equally charitable towards the sentiments of the other. The peculiar circumstances of their death, added to their friendship while living, and the conspicuous and honorable parts which they acted in their country's history, would seem to render it due to their memories, that the early animosities, and now inappropriate distinctions of their respective parties, should be buried with them.

5. [1]The presidential election of 1828 was attended with an excitement and zeal in the respective parties, to which no former election had furnished a parallel. The opposing candidates were Mr. Adams and General Jackson. In the contest, which, from the first, was chiefly of a personal nature, not only the public acts, but even the private lives of both the aspirants were closely scanned, and every error, real or supposed, placed in a conspicuous view. [2]The result of the contest was the election of General Jackson, by a majority far greater than his most sanguine friends had anticipated. John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina, was a second time chosen vice-president.

1. What is said of the election of 1828?

2. What was the result of the contest?

6. [3]Our warmly contested presidential elections are often looked upon by foreigners, just arrived in the country, with much anxiety for the consequences. As the crisis of the election approaches, the excitement becomes intense; but, tempered by reason, it seldom rises beyond a war of words and feelings; and a scene of strife, which, in Europe, would shake a throne to its foundations, is viewed with little alarm in the American republic. A decision of the controversy at once allays the angry elements of discord, and the waves of party strife again sink back to their ordinary level, again to rise harmless, and again subside, at every new election.

3. What is remarked of our presidential elections, as periods of political excitement?

CHAPTER VII.

JACKSON'S ADMINISTRATION,

FROM MARCH 4, 1829, TO MARCH 4, 1837.

What period is embraced in Jackson's administration?

1. What is said in relation to frequent removals from office?

1. [1]THE first distinguishing feature in Jackson's administration, was the numerous removals from office, and the appointment of the political friends of the president to fill the vacancies thereby occasioned. This measure, in direct opposition to the policy of the previous administration, excited some surprise, and was violently assailed as an unworthy proscription for opinion's sake; but was defended by an appeal to the precedent afforded by Mr. Jefferson, who pursued a similar course, though to a much smaller extent.

2. What was the result of the attempt to recharter the national bank?

2. [2]Early in 1832, a bill was brought forward in congress for rechartering the United States Bank. After a long and animated debate, the bill passed both houses of congress, but was returned by the president, with his objections, and not being repassed by the constitutional majority of two-thirds, the bank ceased to be a national institution on the expiration of its charter in 1836.

3. What account is given of the war with the Sacs, Foxes, and Winnebagoes?

3. [3]In the spring of 1832, a portion of the Sacs, Foxes, and Winnebagoes, in Wisconsin Territory, commenced hostilities, under the famous chief Black Hawk. After numerous skirmishes, most of the Indians were driven west of the Mississippi. Black Hawk surrendered himself a prisoner, and peace was concluded by a treaty,—the Indians relinquishing a large tract of their territory. [4]Black Hawk and a few other chiefs, after having visited Washington, were taken through several other cities, on their way homeward, in order to convince them of the vast power and resources of their white neighbors.

4. What is said of the tour of Black Hawk?

5. How was the tariff of 1832 regarded at the South?

4. [5]A tariff bill, imposing additional duties on foreign goods, having passed congress during the session which terminated in the summer of 1832, caused, as on several previous occasions, great excitement in the southern portions of the Union. [6]In South Carolina, where the excitement was the greatest, a state convention de-

the convention of South Carolina?

a. Nov. 24.

5. [1]This novel doctrine of the right of a state to declare a law of congress unconstitutional and void, and to withdraw from the Union, was promptly met by a proclamation[b] of the president, in which he seriously warned the ultra advocates of "State rights" of the consequences that must ensue if they persisted in their course of treason to the government. He declared that, as chief magistrate of the Union, he could not, if he would, avoid the performance of his duty; that the laws must be executed; and that any opposition to their execution must be repelled; by force, if necessary.

1. How were these declarations met by the president?

b. Dec. 10.

6. [2]The sentiments of the proclamation met with a cordial response from all the friends of the Union, and party feelings were for the time forgotten in the general determination to sustain the president in asserting the supremacy of the laws. [3]South Carolina receded from her hostile position, although she still boldly advanced her favorite doctrine of the supremacy of state rights, and, in the person of her distinguished senator, Mr. Calhoun, who had recently resigned the office of vice-president, asserted it even in the halls of congress.

2. How was the proclamation generally regarded?

3. What course did South Carolina still pursue?

7. [4]Fortunately for the public peace, this cause of discord and contention between the North and the South was in a great measure removed, by a "Compromise bill," introduced[c] by Mr. Clay, of Kentucky. This bill provided for a gradual reduction of duties until the year 1843, when they were to sink to the general level of twenty per cent. [5]On the 4th of March, 1833, General Jackson entered upon the second term of his presidency. Martin Van Buren, of New York, had been chosen vice-president.

4. How was the cause of discord removed?

c. Feb. 12. Became a law March 3.

5. What occurred in March, 1833

8. [6]In 1833, considerable excitement was occasioned on account of the removal, by the president, from the Bank of the United States, of the government funds deposited in that institution, and their transfer to certain state banks. [7]The opponents of the administration

6. What is said of the removal of the government funds from the Bank of the U. States?

1833. censured this measure as an unauthorized and dangerous assumption of power by the executive, and the want of confidence which soon arose in the moneyed institutions of the country, followed by the pecuniary distresses of 1836 and 1837, were charged upon the hostility of the president to the Bank of the United States. On the other hand, these distresses were charged to the management of the bank, which the president declared to have become "the scourge of the people."

7. Of the different views taken of this measure?

9. [1]A few events concerning the Cherokees, require notice in this portion of our history. These Indians had long been involved in the same difficulties as those which had troubled their Creek neighbors. They were the most civilized of all the Indian tribes,—had an established government, a national legislature, and written laws. [2]During the administration of Mr. Adams, they were protected in their rights against the claims of the state of Georgia, but in the following administration, the legislature of Georgia extended the laws of the state over the Indian territory, annulling the laws which had been previously established, and among other things, declaring[a] that "no Indian or descendant of an Indian, residing within the Creek or Cherokee nations of Indians, should be deemed a competent witness or party to any suit in any court where a white man is a defendant."

1. What mention is made of the Cherokee Indians, and of their condition?

2. What oppressive measures were taken in relation to them?

a. Dec. 20, 1829.

10. [3]Although the supreme court of the United States declared the acts of the legislature of Georgia to be unconstitutional, yet the decision of that tribunal was disregarded, and the president of the United States informed the Cherokees that he "had no power to oppose the exercise of the sovereignty of any state over all who may be within its limits;" and he therefore advised them "to abide the issue of such new relations without any hope that he will interfere." Thus the remnant of the Cherokees, once a great and powerful people, were deprived of their national sovereignty, and delivered into the hands of their oppressors.

3. What is said of the decision of the supreme court, and of the course taken by the president?

11. [4]Yet the Cherokees were still determined to remain in the land of their fathers. But at length, in 1835, a few of their chiefs were induced to sign a treaty for a sale of their lands, and a removal west of the Mississippi. Although this treaty was opposed by a majority of the Cherokees, and the terms afterwards decided upon at Washington rejected by them, yet as they found arrayed against them the certain hostility of Georgia, and could expect no protection from the general government, they finally decided upon a removal; but it was not until towards the close of the year 1838 that the business of emigration was completed. 1835.

12. [1]Near the close of the year 1835, the Seminole Indians of Florida commenced hostilities against the settlements of the whites in their vicinity. The immediate cause of the war was the attempt of the government to remove the Indians to lands west of the Mississippi, in accordance with the treaty of Payne's Landing,* executed[a] in 1832, which, however, the Indians denied to be justly binding upon them. [2]Micanopy, the king of the nation, was opposed to the removal; and Osceola, their most noted chief, said he "Wished to rest in the land of his fathers, and his children to sleep by his side."

2. Of the sentiments of Micanopy and Osceola?

13. [3]The proud bearing of Osceola, and his remonstrances against the proceedings of General Thompson, the government agent, displeased the latter, and he put the chieftain in irons. Dissembling his wrath, Osceola obtained his liberty, gave his confirmation to the treaty of removal, and, so perfect was his dissimulation, that he dissipated all the fears of the whites. So confident was General Thompson that the cattle and horses of the Indians would be brought in according to the terms of the treaty, that he even advertised them for sale in December, but the appointed days[b] passed, when it was discovered that the Indians were already commencing the work of slaughter and devastation.

Osceola and his party rushed in, scalped the dead, and retreated before they could be fired upon by the garrison. The same band probably took part in the closing scene of Dade's massacre on the same day.

16. [2]Two days later, General Clinch engaged[d] the Indians on the banks of the Withlacoochee;† and in February of the following year, General Gaines was attacked[e] near the same place. [3]In May, several of the Creek towns and tribes joined the Seminoles in the war. Murders and devastations were frequent,—the Indians obtained possession of many of the southern mail routes in Georgia and Alabama, attacked steamboats, destroyed stages, burned several towns, and compelled thousands of the whites who had settled in their territory, to flee for their lives. [4]A strong force, however, joined by many friendly Indians, being sent against them, and several of the hostile chiefs having been taken, the Creeks submitted;

At the Wahoo swamp, a short distance from Dade's battle-ground, 550 of his troops encountered a greater number of the enemy, who, after a fierce contest of half an hour, were dispersed, leaving twenty-five of their number dead on the field. In a second engagement, the whites lost nine men killed and sixteen wounded. In none of the battles could the actual loss of the Indians be ascertained, as it is their usual practice to carry off their dead.

VAN BUREN'S ADMINISTRATION,

FROM MARCH 4, 1837, TO MARCH 4, 1841.

What period is embraced in Van Buren's administration?

1. [2]In the election of 1836, Martin Van Buren, of New York, had been chosen president of the United States, and Richard M. Johnson, of Kentucky, vice-president. As Mr. Van Buren was a prominent leader of the party which had secured the election of General Jackson, no change in the general policy of the government was anticipated. [3]Soon after the accession of Mr. Van Buren, the pecuniary and mercantile distresses of the country reached their crisis. 1837.

2. What is said of the election of 1836, and of the anticipated policy of the government?

3. Of the condition of the country—the extensive failures at that period, and of the consequences?

2. During the months of March and April the failures in the city of New York alone amounted to nearly one hundred millions of dollars. The great extent of the business operations of the country at that time, and their intimate connection with each other, extended the evil throughout all the channels of trade; causing, in the first place, a general failure of the mercantile interests,—affecting, through them, the business of the mechanic and the farmer, nor stopping until it had reduced the wages of the humblest day laborer.

4. What requests were made of the president by a committee from New York?

3. [4]Early in May, a large and respectable committee

1837. from the city of New York, solicited of the president his intervention for such relief as might be within his power; requesting the rescinding of the "specie circular," a delay in enforcing the collection of the revenue duties, and the call of an extra session of congress at an early day, that some legislative remedies might be adopted for the alarming embarrassments of the country. [1]The "specie circular" was a treasury order, which had been issued during the previous administration, the principal object of which was to require the payment of gold and silver, for the public lands, in place of bank bills, or other evidences of money.

1. What was the specie circular?

4. [2]To the second request the president acceded, but declined to repeal the specie circular, or to call an extra session of Congress. [3]Two days after the decision of the president became known, all the banks in the city of New York suspended specie payments, and this was followed by a similar suspension on the part of the banks throughout the whole country. [4]The people were not the only sufferers by this measure; for as the deposit banks had likewise ceased to redeem their notes in specie, the government itself was embarrassed, and was unable to discharge its own obligations.

2. What course was taken by the president?
3. By what events was the decision of the president followed?
4. Who were sufferers by the suspension?

5. [5]The accumulated evils which now pressed upon the country, induced the president to call an extra session of congress, which he had before declined doing. Congress met early in September, and during a session of forty days passed several bills, designed for the relief of the government; the most important of which was a bill authorizing the issue of treasury notes, not exceeding in amount ten millions of dollars. [6]A bill called the Sub-treasury bill, designed for the safe keeping of the public funds, and intended as the prominent measure of the session, passed the senate; but in the house of representatives it was laid upon the table, after a long and animated discussion.

5. What is said of the call of congress, and of the bills passed during the session?
6. What is said of the sub-treasury bill?
a. The legal term is Independent Treasury Bill.

6. [7]The Seminole war still continued in Florida, occasioning great expense to the nation, while the sickly climate of a country abounding in swamps and marshes, proved, to the whites, a foe far more terrible than the Indians themselves. After several encounters in the early part of the season, in March a num ber of chiefs came to the camp of General Jessup, and signed[a] a treaty, purporting that hostilities should immediately cease, and that all the Seminoles should remove beyond the Mississippi. 1837.

a. At Fort Dade, March 6.

7. [1]For a time the war appeared to be at an end, but the treaty was soon broken through the influence of Osceola. During the summer, several chiefs were captured, and a few surrendered voluntarily. In October, Osceola and several principal chiefs, with about seventy warriors, who had come to the American camp under protection of a flag, were seized[b] and confined by the orders of General Jessup.

1. What is said of the violation of the treaty, and of the events that followed during the summer and fall?

b. At Fort Peyton, October 21.

8. [2]This was the most severe blow the Seminoles had received during the war. By many, the conduct of General Jessup, in seizing Osceola, has been severely censured; but the excuse offered was, that the Indians had grossly deceived him on a former occasion, that Osceola was treacherous, that no blood was shed by the act, and that a very important service was thereby performed. [3]Osceola was subsequently placed in confinement at Fort Moultrie,[c] where he died of a fever in January of the following year.

2. How has the capture of Osceola and his warriors been regarded?

3. What was the subsequent fate of Osceola?

c. In South Carolina.

9. [4]On the 1st of December, the army in Florida, stationed at the different posts, was estimated to number nearly nine thousand men. Yet against this numerous force the Indians still held out with hopes of effectual resistance. On the 25th of the month, Colonel Taylor, at the head of about six hundred men, encountered the Indians on the northern side of the Big Water Lake,* in the southern part of the peninsula. After a severe battle of more than an hour, in which twenty-eight of the whites were killed and one hundred and eleven wounded, the enemy was forced to retire, but with what loss is unknown.

4. What is said of the continuance of the war, and of the battle near Big Water Lake?

10. [5]During the years 1837 and 1838, frequent encounters were had with the Indians, although but little appeared to be accomplished towards bringing the war to a close. [6]In 1839, General Macomb, who had received[d] the chief command of the army, induced a number of the chiefs in the southern part of the penin- 1838.

a. May.

1. What soon followed this treaty?

1840. 11. [2]The year 1840 passed with numerous murders by the Indians, and frequent contests between small parties of them and the whites. In December, Colonel Harney, who, by his numerous exploits in Indian warfare, had become the terror of the Seminoles, penetrated into the extensive everglades in Southern Florida, long supposed to be the head-quarters of the enemy, where he succeeded in capturing a band of forty, nine of whom he caused to be executed for some previous massacre in which they were supposed to be engaged.

2. What is said of the events of 1840, and of the expedition of Col. Harney?

3. What further is said of the sub-treasury bill?

12. [3]During the session of congress which terminated in the summer of 1840, the Sub-treasury bill, which had been rejected at the extra session of 1837, and which was regarded as the great financial measure of Mr. Van Buren's administration, passed[b] both houses of congress and became a law.

b. Jan. 23 and June 30.

4. Give an account of the presidential election of 1840.

13. [4]The presidential election of 1840 was probably the most exciting election that had ever occurred in the United States. The trying scenes of financial embarrassment through which the country was then passing, together with what was called "the experiments of the government upon the currency," furnished the opponents of the administration with abundant exciting topics for popular party harangues, in the approaching political contest. During several months preceding the election, the whole country was one great arena of political debate, and in the numerous assemblages of the people the ablest men of both parties engaged freely in the discussion.

5. Who were the respective candidates, and what was the result of the election?

14. [5]The whigs concentrated their whole strength upon William Henry Harrison, the "Hero of the Thames, and of Tippecanoe," while the administration party united with equal ardor in favor of Mr. Van Buren. The result was a signal defeat of the latter, and a success of the whigs by a majority altogether unexpected by them. General Harrison received two hundred and thirty-four of the electoral votes, while Mr. Van Buren received only sixty. John Tyler of Virginia was elected vice-president. 1840.

CHAPTER IX.

HARRISON'S ADMINISTRATION.

1. [1]On the 4th of March, 1841, William Henry Harrison, in the presence of an unusually large assemblage of the people convened at the capitol in Washington, took the oath prescribed by the constitution, and entered upon the office of president of the United States. 1841.

1. What is said of the inauguration of Gen. Harrison?

2. [2]His inaugural address was a plain, but able and comprehensive document, expressing his approval of the leading principles of the party which had selected him for the highest office in the gift of the people, and pledging his best endeavors to administer the government according to the constitution, as understood by its framers and early administrators.

2. Of his inaugural address?

3. [3]In conclusion, the president expressed his profound reverence for the Christian religion, and his thorough conviction that sound morals, religious liberty, and a just sense of religious responsibility, are essentially connected with all true and lasting happiness. "Let us unite then," said he, "in commending every interest of our beloved country to that good Being who has blessed us by the gifts of civil and religious freedom; who watched over and prospered the labors of our fathers; and who has hitherto preserved to us institutions far exceeding in excellence those of any other people."

3. What sentiments were expressed in the conclusion of the address?

4. [4]The senate was immediately convened for the purpose of receiving the usual nominations, and a new and able cabinet was formed, at the head of which was placed Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts, as secretary

[1]But while every thing promised an administration honorable to the executive and useful to the country, rumors of the sudden illness of the president spread through the land; and scarcely had they reached the limits of the Union, when they were followed by the sad intelligence of his death.

1. What events soon followed?

2. What concluding remarks are made?

5. [2]Just one month from the day of his inauguration, the aged president was a pallid corpse in the national mansion. The event was calculated to make a deep impression upon the people, who had witnessed and taken part in the recent scenes of excitement which had preceded the elevation of one of their number to be the nation's ruler. The hand of Almighty power was acknowledged in the bereavement, teaching that "the Lord alone ruleth."

TYLER'S ADMINISTRATION,

EXTENDING FROM APRIL 4, 1841, TO MARCH 4, 1845.

What period is embraced in Tyler's administration?

3. Give an account of the extra session that had been called by Harrison.

1. [3]On the death of General Harrison, Mr. Tyler, the vice-president, became the acting president of the United States. During an extra session[a] of congress which had been called by General Harrison, several important measures of exciting interest to the country were brought forward. The sub-treasury bill was repealed; a general bankrupt law was passed; and two separate bills, chartering a bank of the United States, were rejected[b] by the executive veto. The course pursued by the president caused him to be denounced generally, by the whig party, which had elected him to office, and occasioned the resignation of his entire cabinet, with one exception.[c]

2. [4]In 1842, an important treaty, adjusting the dispute in relation to the northeastern boundary of the United States, was negotiated[d] at Washington, between Mr. Webster, on the part of the United States, and Lord Ashburton on the part of Great Britain. The same year was signalized by the commencement of domestic difficulties in Rhode Island, which at one time threatened serious consequences. 1842.

3. [1]A movement having been made to set aside the ancient charter under which the government of the colony and state had so long been administered,[a] parties were formed with respect to the proper mode of adopting a new constitution. The "suffrage party," having formed and adopted a constitution, in a manner unauthorized by the laws of the state, chose[b] Thomas W. Dorr governor and elected a legislature. About the same time the "law and order party" chose Samuel W. King governor. In May, 1843, both parties met[c] and organized their respective governments.

4. [2]The legally organized party then took active measures to put down what was denominated the rebellion. Great commotion ensued, and several arrests were made. Dorr left the state, but soon returning,[d] his followers assembled under arms, and a bloody struggle appeared inevitable. The insurgents, however, dispersed, on the appearance of the government forces, and Dorr, to avoid arrest, fled from the state.

2. What violent measures followed?

d. May 16.

5. [3]In June, however, the insurgents again made their appearance[e] under arms, and were joined[f] by Dorr. The whole state was now placed under martial law, and a large body of armed men was sent against the insurgents, who dispersed without any effectual resistance. [4]Dorr again fled, but, returning after a few months, was arrested, tried[g] for treason, convicted, and sentenced to be imprisoned during life. In the mean time a constitution for the state had been adopted, according to the prescribed forms of law:— In June, 1845, Dorr was released, although he had refused to accept a pardon on condition of taking the oath of allegiance to the state government.

6. [5]During the last year of Mr. Tyler's administration, considerable excitement prevailed on the subject of the annexation of Texas to the American Union, a measure first proposed by the government of the former country. 1. Of the opposition to annexation, and the arguments against the measure?

7. [1]The proposition for annexation to the United States was strongly resisted at the North, and by the whig party generally throughout the Union. The impolicy of extending our limits by accessions of foreign territory; the danger of a war with Mexico; the encouragement given to slavery by the admission of an additional slave state; and the increase of power that the South and southern institutions would thereby gain in the national councils, were urged against the measure.

8. [2]A treaty of annexation, signed[a] by the president, was rejected by congress, but early in the following year a bill was passed, authorizing the president, under certain restrictions, to negotiate with Texas the terms of annexation. [3]During the same sessions of congress bills were passed providing for the admission of Iowa and Florida, as states, into the Union. [4]The opposing candidates in the election of 1844 were Mr. Clay of Kentucky and James K. Polk of Tennessee. The contest resulted in the choice of the latter, who entered on the duties of his office on the 4th of March, of the following year.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING THE CHART.

In answering the questions to the following "EXPLANATION," it is designed that the pupil shall use a pointer, with which, while reciting, he shall point out every reference made by the letters C and M; the former referring to the Chart, and the latter to the Large Map found on the same. Thus in the first verse, at the words "top," "bottom," "dates," "ten," &c., a little above and to the right of which is the letter C, the pupil is to point out those portions of the Chart which are referred to; and in the second verse, at the words "Virginia," "Jamestown," &c., he is to point out, on the Map, the places referred to. It will be impossible for the pupil to go through the "Explanation," in this manner, without fully understanding the Chart, and the general outlines of the History also.

The same practice of pointing out every thing referred to by the letter C, should be continued in answering the "QUESTIONS ON THE CHART," following the "Explanation." These questions embrace more than would be supposed at first sight, and the pupil should be required to examine the Chart thoroughly, in order to answer them as fully as possible. The Marginal Notes, referring to the History, may be resorted to in cases of doubt; and they will also be of great use to the teacher, if he wishes to lecture to the class, or whole school, on the subject of American History.

GENERAL EXPLANATION OF THE CHART.

1. [1]THE Chart is arranged in the "downward course of time," from top[C] to bottom,[C] with the dates,[C] every ten[C] years, in a column[C] on the right, and corresponding lines crossing[C] the Chart from right to left; the whole embracing a period of nearly three hundred and fifty years; commencing with the discovery of North America, by the Cabots, in 1497,[C] and extending down to the present time.[C]

1. How is the Chart arranged, and what does the whole embrace?

2. [2]The history of each country, colony, or state, is found in a separate column, commencing with the early history,—extending downwards as time progresses, and closing with the most recent events. [3]Thus, the history of Virginia[M] commences with the settlement of Jamestown,[M] which event is placed at the top[C] of the column devoted to Virginia history. Following the column downwards,[C] we pass over[C] the entire history of Virginia, until we come to the present time, at the bottom[C] of the column. [4]On the right[C] of Virginia is the column devoted to the history of Maryland,[M] commencing[C] lower down on the Chart, twenty-five years later than the commencement of the history of Virginia. [5]On the left of Virginia are the colonies[C] of North[M] and South Carolina,[M] commencing later than Maryland.—[6]These examples illustrate the general plan of the arrangement of the Chart.

2. Where is the history of each country, &c. found?

3. Explain the example that is given.

4. What is found on the right of the column devoted to Virginia history?

5. On the left?

6. What do these examples illustrate?

3. [7]The dark, or slate[C] color, mostly on the upper portions[C] of the Chart, shows the extent of the uninterrupted Indian possessions at different periods of our history; embracing all North America at the time of its discovery. This coloring should be supposed to extend over all those places on the Chart now occupied by the maps.[C] [1]The other kinds[C] of coloring, starting out of the dark or Indian coloring above them, show the commencement and spread of European settlements,—at first small and feeble, but gradually extending, until at present they embrace all[C] the countries represented on the Chart, with the exception of Missouri Territory,[C] the Indian Territory[C] and Oregon Territory,[C] which still remain in the almost uninterrupted possession of the natives.

1. What do the other kinds of coloring show?

4. [2]Three different colors are given to represent the British American possessions, with the three different forms of government that prevailed over them. [3]The purple[C] coloring represents those possessions of the British that were under the royal governments: the pink,[C] or carmine, those that were under proprietary governments; and the light orange,[C] those that were under charter or free governments.

2. What is said of the British American possessions?

3. What do the purple, the carmine, and the pale yellow colors represent?

5. [4]The royal governments were those in which the governor and other principal officers were appointed and removed by the King of England. [5]In these governments, however, there was, generally, a legislative body, or Assembly, to which the people elected representatives, without whose approval no important laws could be made. [6]The royal governments extended, at different periods, over all[C] the early colonies, except Pennsylvania[M, C] and Delaware.[M, C]

5. In these governments what powers had the people?

6. Tell, over what colonies these governments extended, and point them out on the Chart and Map.

6. [7]Proprietary governments were those in which the king vested the powers of government in one or more individuals called proprietors, or proprietaries, who sometimes acted as governors of their colonies, and at other times, during their absence, appointed deputies or lieutenants to supply their places. sent of the colonial assembly, composed of representatives of the people. [1]The proprietary governments extended over Maine,[M, C] New Hampshire,[M, C] New York,[M, C] N. Jersey,[M, C] Maryland,[M, C] Virginia,[M, C] the Carolinas,[M, C] and Georgia,[M, C] during portions of their history; and over Pennsylvania,[M, C] during its entire colonial history.

1. Tell, over what the proprietary governments extended, and point them out on the Chart and Map.

7. [2]The charter, or free governments, were those in which the people were allowed, generally by a charter from the king, the privilege of choosing their own rulers, and making their own laws. [3]This form of government prevailed, at one time, among all the New England[M] colonies;[C] and, with the exception of a short interruption,[C] it continued, in Connecticut[M, C] and Rhode Island,[M, C] until the Revolution.[C] [4]The charters or grants that were sometimes given[a] under the other two forms of government, either made changes in territory or jurisdiction, or conferred certain powers upon individuals, but gave few privileges to the people.

9. [6]The bright yellow[C] color represents the French possessions, embracing, at an early period in American history, the present Canadas,[M, C] and other countries at the north now in the possession of the English, but known at that early period by the names of NEW FRANCE,[C] and ACADIA;[C] and likewise LOUISIANA[C] at the west, then comprising the whole valley of the Mississippi[M] and its tributary streams west of the Alleghanies.[M] [7]The frequent changes[C] between the yellow and the purple on the right, show the frequent changes of possession between the French and the English, until, at length, in 1763,[C] France ceded to England all her possessions east[C] of the Mississippi,* and to Spain all her possessions west[C] of that river; and now, as may be seen from the Chart, she holds no territory in North America.

1. What does the green coloring show, and what embrace?

10. [1]The green[C] coloring shows the extent of the Spanish possessions, embracing Mexico,[C] Yucatan,[C] and Guatemala,[C] on the west, from their conquest[C] to the second Mexican revolution[C] in 1821, including a period of about three hundred years. [2]It will be seen, by the Chart, that these former Spanish provinces are now embraced in the republics of Texas,[C] Mexico,[C] and Central America.[C] [3]Spain also possessed Florida,[M, C] on the south, from the settlement of St. Augustine,[M, C] in 1565, until 1763, when it was ceded[C] to England; and again from 1783[C] until 1820, when it was ceded[C] to the United States. [4]Spain likewise held Louisiana[M, C] west of the Mississippi,[M] from 1763[C] until the year 1800,[C] when it was ceded[C] to France, and finally by France to the United States in 1803.[C] [5]And now, neither France nor Spain claims any possessions in North America.

2. In what are these former Spanish possessions now embraced?

3. What is said of Florida?

4. Of Louisiana?

5. Has either France or Spain any possessions in America now, and how does this appear?

11. [6]The brown[C] represents the possessions of the Dutch, once comprising the territory embraced in the present state of New York,[M] then called New Netherlands,[C] and at one time extending over[C] New Jersey[M] and Delaware.[M] [7]The color[C] adjoining, on the left, represents the possessions of the Swedes, then comprising the present state of Delaware[M] and a part of New Jersey,[M] and called New Sweden.[C] [8]The Swedes were conquered by the Dutch in 1655. In 1664 the[C] possessions of the Dutch were conquered[C] by the English; regained[C] by the Dutch in 1673, and restored[C] to the English, by treaty, in 1674.

The pupil, however, should pay no attention to these references until he can answer all the questions from the Chart alone. After the history has been studied, or diligently read, these references may be used, in connection with the Chart, for the purpose of a general review of the history; in which the pupil may be required to give a more detailed account of the events than can be learned from the Chart alone.]

The names of the three colonies in the Carolinas, and the name of the first governor of each. The first two governors of New France or Canada. The last French governor. The first English governor. The first two governors of Canada after the union of the two provinces in 1840. The first governor of the province of New York. Of New Jersey. The last governor of Massachusetts previous to the Revolution. The first two governors of Virginia during the Revolution. The governor of Pennsylvania at the time of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

2. Who were the first two governors of Virginia during Madison's administration? The governor of New York at the time of Jackson's accession to the presidency? The governor of Massachusetts during Van Buren's administration? The first governor of Florida Territory? The governor of Tennessee at the close of J. Q. Adams's administration? The first president of Texas? The governor of Tennessee at the close of Van Buren's administration? The first governor of the Northwestern Territory? Of Indiana Territory? Who was governor of Michigan Territory eighteen years? What was the population of the United States in 1790? In 1810? In 1840? What was the population of the state of New York in 1790? In 1840? Of Pennsylvania in 1840? Virginia in 1840? What is the area of the state of Maine, in square miles? Of Massachusetts? Of New York? Of Virginia? Of Iowa Territory? What Map is found on the right of the title of the Chart, and what does it show? (See Explanation, p. 45 of the History.) Point out and explain each of the small maps. Point out and explain each of the plans under the head of "North American Antiquities." (For a description of each, see the "American History.") What table is given below the "Plan of the Siege of Boston?"

NOTE.—In reading the History, or in reciting from it, where the Chart can be used it should be kept constantly before the class, and the pupils should be required to point out, on the Chart, the leading divisions of the history. In this manner, by frequently seeing the different divisions portrayed, as on a map, the pupils will acquire such a knowledge of the comparative history of the different colonies and states, as they would probably never acquire by reading alone. Who, for example, would ever forget that Florida was once in the possession of England, after seeing it represented, as it is, on the Chart, by the prevalence of the purple coloring over this portion of its history? It is the general impression made by the Chart, while reading or studying the History, and not the direct study of it, that is the most valuable.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.

LITTLE more than two centuries have elapsed since the first permanent settlement, by civilized man, was made within the limits of the present United States. During more than two-thirds of that period, while the colonies remained under the government of Great Britain, the English settlements were confined to the Atlantic coast; and at the close of the Revolution, the population numbered only three millions of souls.

The separation, perfected by the Revolution, at once opened new fields for exertion and enterprise;—a great change was suddenly made in the character of the American people; and, under the fostering care of republican institutions, the tide of population has rolled rapidly inland, crossing the Alleghanies—sweeping over the vast Valley of the Mississippi, nor resting in its onward course until it has settled on the waters of the Columbia, and the shores of the Pacific. During the last sixty years of our country's history, the population has increased, in a ratio hitherto unprecedented, from three millions to twenty millions of souls.

Nor has our progress been less rapid in the various arts of civilized life. Our transition has been sudden, from the weakness of youth to the vigor of manhood. In power and resources we already sustain a proud rivalry with the time-honored nations of the Old World, and we rank the first among the Republics of the New. Our busy commerce has extended over every sea, and entered every port; and from the Arctic circle to the opposite regions of Polar cold, our canvass whitens in every breeze. Our domestic manufactures, in the amount of capital employed, and in the quality and value of their fabrics, are already competing strongly with those of France and England; while the rewards of agriculture are shedding their blessings on millions of our happy people.

Our numerous rail-roads and canals, navigable rivers and inland seas, by the facilities of communication which they open, bring closely together the most distant sections of the Union, and do much to harmonize that diversity of feelings and of interests which would otherwise arise. The Bible, and the institutions of Christianity, shed their blessings upon us; and the education of youth, upon which the well-being of society, and the perpetuity of our republican institutions so greatly depend, is receiving that share of attention which its importance demands. For all these blessings we are bound to acknowledge and adore the invisible hand of Almighty power that has directed and sustained us; for every step in our progress has been distinguished by manifest tokens of providential agency.

Let our prayer then be that the same God who brought our fathers out of bondage, into a strange land, to found an empire in the wilderness, may continue his protection to their children; nor visit upon them the national and domestic sins of which they are guilty. Let us indulge the hope, that in this Western World freedom has found a congenial clime; that the tree of liberty which has been planted here may grow up in majesty and beauty, until it shall overshadow the whole land; and that beneath its branches the nations may ever dwell together in unity and love. Let us endeavor to cultivate a spirit of mutual concession and harmony in our national councils; and remembering that the monarchies of the Old World are looking upon us with jealousy, and predicting the day of our ruin, let us guard with sacred faith the boon that has been bequeathed us, and amid all the turmoils of political strife by which we may be agitated, let us ever bear aloft the motto "The UNION; one and inseparable."

WILSON'S COMPREHENSIVE CHART OF AMERICAN HISTORY.

This is a neatly engraved chart of American History—colored, varnished, and mounted on rollers, and measuring nearly five feet by six. It is arranged on a plan essentially different from any other historical chart, and is so simple that an intelligent child can readily understand it. It embraces a History of all the Countries, Colonies, States and Provinces of North America from their first discovery and settlement down to the present time. The chart was also accompanied with Questions, designed for practical use in the business of instruction, and was highly recommended by Committees of teachers who have used it, express the opinion that it will be found a very valuable assistant in teaching History, as it is in teaching Geography. No description can give any adequate idea of its value.

The following is extracted from numerous commendatory notices of the Chart, and is submitted to the attention of those interested in the cause of education:—
